HONG KONG STORM SIGNAL CODES

Storm Warnings are issued by the Royal Observatory, Hongkong, by means of Local and Non-Local Storm Signal Codes. The Local Code is as follows:

Recommended for use in the Far East at a Conference of Directors of Far Eastern Weather Services held at Hongkong in the year 1930.

Adopted at Hongkong from March 1, 1931.

Signal.	Symbol.	Meaning.
1 —	T	A depression or typhoon exists which may possibly affect the locality.
2 —	▬	Strong wind with squalls may possibly occur from the S.W. (S-W).
3 —	⊥	Strong wind with squalls may possibly occur from the S.E. (E-S).
4 —	◆	Typhoon dangerous but danger to locality not imminent.
5 —	▲	Gale expected from the N.W. (W-N).
6 —	▼	Gale expected from the S.W. (S-W).
7 —	▮	Gale expected from the N.E. (N-E).
8 —	●	Gale expected from the S.E. (E-S).
9 —	⧗	Gale expected to increase.
10 —	✚	Wind of typhoon force expected (any direction).

Signal No. 4 will be used in the Philippines, but not at Hongkong, the information it conveys being given by the Non-Local Signals.

Signals 5 to 8 are not hoisted until it is tolerably certain that a gale (40-45 m.p.h. by the Dines Anemometer) will occur at Hongkong or Gap Rock, or when a typhoon is sufficiently near to warrant a danger signal, although the occurrence of a gale is by no means certain.

If, with one of signals 5 to 8 hoisted, conditions indicate that the wind will not only increase but attain hurricane force, signal No. 9 may be dispensed with, thus giving the longest possible warning of destructive winds.

Signal No. 10 will be accompanied by three explosive bombs, fired at intervals of 10 seconds at the Water Police Station and repeated at the Harbour Office.

When the centre of a typhoon passes over the locality the wind decreases rapidly to a calm, or nearly calm, and blows violently from the opposite direction when the centre has passed.

The signal will be lowered when it is considered that all danger is over.

The Day Signals will be displayed on the Radio mast at the Royal Observatory, at the Harbour Office, H.M.S. Tamar, Green Island, Hongkong & Kowloon Wharf & Godown Co., the Standard-Vacuum Oil Co. at Lai-chi-kok, the flagstaff near the Field Officer's Quarters at Lyemun, Gough Hill Police Station and Taipo (District Officer's flagstaff).

The Night Signals will be displayed, at sunset, on the Radio mast at the Royal Observatory, on the tower of the Railway Station, H.M.S. Tamar, the Harbour Office, on the flagstaff near the Field Officer's Quarters at Lyemun, Kowloon City Police Station, and at Gough Hill Police Station. They will have the same signification as the day signals.

Signal No. 10 will be accompanied by explosive bombs as above, in the event of the information conveyed by this signal being first published at night.

SUPPLEMENTARY WARNINGS

When Local Signals are displayed in the Harbour, signals will be displayed as follows:

When No. 1 Signal is displayed in the Harbour.

Black T by day.

2 Red Lights vertical by night

When Signals Nos. 5 to 10 are displayed in the Harbour.

Black Cone by day.

2 Green Lights vertical by night.

These Signals will be displayed at the following Stations:

Aberdeen	Gap Rock	Stanley	Saikung	Tsun Wan	Waglan
Cheung Chow	Ping Shan	Shaukiwan	Shataukok	Tai O

Further details can always be given to ocean vessels, on demand, by signal from Lighthouses, or by wireless telegraphy.

The object of the code is to give at least 24 hours warning of a gale (Force 8 by Beaufort Scale, or 40-45 m.p.h., mean velocity by Dines Anemometer) and also warnings of expected changes in the direction and force of the wind. Owing however to the uncertain movements of typhoons and to insufficient telegraphic observations, it will occasionally happen that signals 5 to 8 may be displayed without a gale occurring at Hongkong, or even Gap Rock, but the reverse is not likely to happen, except in the case of typhoons forming in the vicinity and travelling rapidly towards Hongkong, or should the direction of motion of a located typhoon alter, or its rate of progression increase, abnormally.

Signal No. 1 is intended as a warning to "Stand By" and watch for the next signal. When it is hoisted after one of Nos. 5 to 8 has been displayed it will mean that, on account of a change in the track of the typhoon, or for some other reason, a gale is no longer expected from the direction indicated by the last signal, and that another black signal may possibly be hoisted later.

NON-LOCAL SIGNALS

The Non-Local Code of Storm Signals gives the latitude and longitude of the storm centre, its direction of motion, and a signal indicating the degree of accuracy with which it is believed the position of the centre has been located. A signal giving the time at which the warning was issued is hoisted at the mast-head.

Copies of the code may be obtained on application to the Observatory.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

In China, Standards of Weights, Measures and Length vary all over the country. Generally speaking, two kinds of standard are now in use, namely, the old and the new. The old standard was formulated from the Weights and Measures Law promulgated in 1914, establishing a double system, the standard metric unit and that based on Ying Tsao Ch'ih or "Builder's Foot" for length and Kuping tael or Liang for weight. The law governing the new standard was promulgated by the National Government on February 6, 1929 and it is intended to be the legal standard of weights and measures acceptable throughout China. For convenience sake and customary usage it also established a double system; one is the standard metric unit and the other, which is temporary in nature and to be abolished as soon as the people are accustomed to the use of standard units, is designed only for market use. However, the latter is derived from the former by taking one litre of Kung Sheng as one Shih Sheng which is nearest to the Chinese customary unit of capacity Sheng one half kilogram as one Shih Chin which is the average weight of the different varieties of "Chin" in different localities; and one third of a meter or Kung Ch'ih as one Sh'ih Ch'ih which is the average length of different varieties of Chinese "Foot" in different localities, thus constituting the so-called 1-2-3-system of Chinese weights and measures based on International metric standard. Such a system, as devised by the Ministry of Industry, Commerce and Labour and proclaimed by the National Government to be put into force may also have great bearing on the users of British "Foot-Pound" system by taking the following approximate value: 1 quart equals to 1 litre, 1 pound equals to ½ kilogram and 1 yard equals to 1 meter. The Russian and Japanese system can also be thus varied accordingly so as to fit themselves to the International System. The following is a comparative table showing both the old and the new standards together with their approximate foreign equivalents:

TREATIES WITH CHINA

KOWLOON EXTENSION AGREEMENT, 1898

Whereas it has for many years past been recognised that an extension of Hongkong territory is necessary for the proper defence and protection of the Colony,

It has now been agreed between the Governments of Great Britain and China that the limits of British territory shall be enlarged under lease to the extent indicated generally on the annexed map.

The exact boundaries shall be hereafter fixed when proper surveys have been made by officials appointed by the two Governments. The term of this lease shall be ninety-nine years.

It is at the same time agreed that within the City of Kowloon the Chinese officials now stationed there shall continue to exercise jurisdiction, except so far as may be inconsistent with the military requirements for the defence of Hongkong. Within the remainder of the newly-leased territory Great Britain shall have sole jurisdiction. Chinese officials and people shall be allowed, as heretofore, to use the road from Kowloon to Hsinan.

It is further agreed that the existing landing-place near Kowloon city shall be reserved for the convenience of Chinese men-of-war, merchant and passengers vessels, which may come and go and lie there at their pleasure; and for the convenience of movements of the officials and people within the city.

When, hereafter, China constructs a railway to the boundary of the Kowloon territory under British control, arrangements shall be discussed.

It is further understood that there will be no expropriation or expulsion of the inhabitants of the district included within the extension, and that if land is required for public offices, fortifications, or the like official purposes, it shall be bought at a fair price.

If cases of extradition of criminals occur they shall be dealt with in accordance with the existing treaties between Great Britain and China and the Hongkong Regulations.

The area leased by Great Britain includes the waters of Mirs Bay and Deep Bay, but it is agreed that Chinese vessels of war, whether neutral or otherwise, shall retain the right to use those waters.

This Convention shall come into force on the first day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, being the thirteenth day of the fifth moon of the twenty-fourth year of Kwang Hsü. It shall be ratified by the Sovereigns of the two countries, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in London as soon as possible.

In witness whereof the undersigned, duly authorised thereto by their respective Governments, have signed the present agreement.

Done at Peking in quadruplicate (four copies in English and in Chinese) the ninth day of June, in the year of Our Lord eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, being the twenty-first day of the fourth moon of the twenty-fourth year of Kwang Hsü.

SUPPLEMENTARY COMMERCIAL TREATY WITH CHINA

SIGNED AT SHANGHAI, 5TH SEPTEMBER, 1902

Ratifications Exchanged at Peking, 28th July, 1903

His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, and His Majesty the Emperor of China, having resolved to enter into negotiations with a view to carrying out the provisions contained in Article XI. of the Final Protocol signed at Peking on the 7th of September, 1901, under which the Chinese Government agreed to negotiate the amendments deemed useful by the Foreign Governments to the Treaties of Commerce and Navigation and other subjects concerning commercial relations with the object of facilitating them, have for that purpose named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:—

His Majesty the King of Great Britain and Ireland, His Majesty's Special Commissioner, Sir James Lyle Mackay, Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, a member of the Council of the Secretary of State for India, etc.

And His Majesty the Emperor of China, the Imperial Commissioners Lü Hai-huan, President of the Board of Public Works, etc., and Sheng Hsuan-huai, Junior Guardian of the Heir Apparent, Senior Vice-President of the Board of Public Works, etc.

Who having communicated to each other their respective full powers, and found them to be in good and due form, have agreed upon and concluded the following Articles:—

Art. I.—Delay having occurred in the past in the issue of Drawback Certificates owing to the fact that those documents have to be dealt with by the Superintendent of Customs at a distance from the Customs Office, it is now agreed that Drawback Certificates shall hereafter in all cases be issued by the Imperial Maritime Customs within three weeks of the presentation to the Customs of the papers entitling the applicant to receive such Drawback Certificates.

These Certificates shall be valid tender to the Customs Authorities in payment of any duty upon goods imported or exported (transit dues excepted), or shall, in the case of Drawbacks on foreign goods re-exported abroad within three years from the date of importation, be payable in cash without deduction by the Customs Bank at the place where the import duty was paid.

But if, in connection with any application for a Drawback Certificate, the Customs Authorities discover an attempt to defraud the revenue, the applicant shall be liable to a fine not exceeding five times the amount of the duty whereof he attempted to defraud the Customs, or to a confiscation of the goods.

Art. II.—China agrees to take the necessary steps to provide for a uniform national coinage which shall be legal tender in payment of all duties, taxes and other obligations throughout the Empire by British as well as Chinese subjects.

Art. III.—China agrees that the duties and lekin combined levied on goods carried by junks from Hongkong to the Treaty Ports in the Canton Province and vice versa shall together not be less than the duties charged by the Imperial Maritime Customs on similar goods carried by steamer.

Art. IV.—Whereas questions have arisen in the past concerning the right of Chinese subjects to invest money in non-Chinese enterprises and companies, and whereas it is a matter of common knowledge that large sums of Chinese capital are so invested, China hereby agrees to recognise the legality of all such investments past present and future.

It being, moreover, of the utmost importance that all shareholders in a Joint Stock Company should stand on a footing of perfect equality as far as mutual obligations are concerned, China further agrees that Chinese subjects who have or may become shareholders in any British Joint Stock Company shall be held to have accepted, by the very act of becoming shareholders, the Charter of Incorporation or Memorandum and Articles of Association of such Company and regulations framed thereunder as interpreted by British Courts, and that Chinese Courts shall enforce compliance therewith by such Chinese shareholders, if a suit to that effect be entered, provided always that their liability shall not be other or greater than that of British shareholders in the same Company.

Similarly the British Government agree that British subjects investing in Chinese Companies shall be under the same obligations as the Chinese shareholders in such companies.

The foregoing shall not apply to cases which have already been before the Courts and been dismissed.

Art. V.—The Chinese Government undertake to remove within the next two years the artificial obstructions to navigation in the Canton River. The Chinese Government also agree to improve the accommodation for shipping in the harbour of Canton and to take the necessary steps to maintain that improvement, such work to be carried out by the Imperial Maritime Customs and the cost thereof to be defrayed by a tax on goods landed and shipped by British and Chinese alike according to a scale to be arranged between the merchants and the Customs Authorities.

The Chinese Government are aware of the desirability of improving the navigability by steamer of the waterway between Ichang and Chungking, but are also fully aware that such improvement might involve heavy expense and would affect the interests of the population of the provinces of Szechuen, Hunan, and Hupeh. It is, therefore, mutually agreed that until improvements can be carried out steamship owners shall be allowed, subject to approval by the Imperial Maritime Customs, to erect, at their own expense, appliances for hauling through the rapids. Such appliances shall be at the disposal of all vessels, both steamers and junks, subject to regulations to be drawn up by the Imperial Maritime Customs. These appliances shall not obstruct the waterway or interfere with the free passage of junks. Signal stations and channel marks where and when necessary shall be erected by the Imperial Maritime Customs. Should any practical scheme be presented for improving the waterway and assisting navigation without injury to the local population or cost to the Chinese Government, it shall be considered by the latter in a friendly spirit.

Art. VI.—The Chinese Government agree to make arrangements to give increased facilities at the open ports for bonding and for repacking merchandise in bond, and, on official representation being made by the British Authorities, to grant the privileges of a bonded warehouse to any warehouse which, to the satisfaction of the Customs Authorities, affords the necessary security to the revenue.

Such warehouses will be subject to regulations, including a scale of fees according to commodities, distance from Custom-house and hours of working, to be drawn up by the Customs Authorities who will meet the convenience of merchants so far as is compatible with the protection of the revenue.

Art. VII.—Inasmuch as the British Government affords protection to Chinese trade marks against infringement, imitation, or colourable imitation by British subjects, the Chinese Government undertake to afford protection to British trade marks against infringement, imitation, or colourable imitation by Chinese subjects.

The Chinese Government further undertake that the Superintendents of Northern and of Southern trade shall establish offices within their respective jurisdictions under control of the Imperial Maritime Customs where foreign trade marks may be registered on payment of a reasonable fee.

Art. VIII.—Preamble. The Chinese Government, recognising that the system of levying lekin and other dues on goods at the place of production, in transit, and at destination, impedes the free circulation of commodities and injures the interests of trade, hereby undertake to discard completely those means of raising revenue with the limitation mentioned in Section 8.

The British Government, in return, consent to allow a surtax, in excess of the Tariff rates for the time being in force, to be imposed on foreign goods imported by British subjects, and a surtax in addition to the export duty on Chinese produce destined for export abroad or coastwise.

It is clearly understood that after lekin barriers and other stations for taxing goods in transit have been removed, no attempt shall be made to revive them in any form or under any pretext whatsoever; that in no case shall the surtax on foreign imports exceed the equivalent of one and a half times the import duty leviable in terms of the Final Protocol signed by China and the Powers on the 7th day of September, 1901; that payment of the import duty and surtax shall secure for foreign imports, whether in the hands of Chinese or non-Chinese subjects, in original packages or otherwise, complete immunity from all other taxation, examination or delay; that the total amount of taxation leviable on native produce for export abroad shall, under no circumstances, exceed 7½ per cent. ad valorem.

Keeping these fundamental principles steadily in view, the high contracting parties have agreed upon the following methods of procedure:—

Section 1.—The Chinese Government undertake that all barriers of whatsoever kind, collecting lekin or such like dues or duties, shall be permanently abolished on all roads, railways, and waterways in the Eighteen Provinces of China and the Three Eastern Provinces. This provision does not apply to the Native Custom-houses at present in existence on the seaboard or waterways, at open ports, on land routes, and on land frontiers of China.

Section 2.—The British Government agree that foreign goods on importation, in addition to the effective 5 per cent. import duty as provided for in the Protocol of 1901, shall pay a special surtax equivalent to one and a half times the said duty to compensate for the abolition of lekin, of transit dues in lieu of lekin, and of all other taxation on foreign goods, and in consideration of the other reforms provided for in this Article; but this provision shall not impair the right of China to tax salt, native opium and native produce as provided for in Sections 3, 5, 6 and 8.

The same amount of surtax shall be levied on goods imported into the Eighteen Provinces of China and the Three Eastern Provinces across the land frontiers as on goods entering China by sea.

Section 3.—All Native Custom-houses now existing, whether at the Open Ports, on the seaboard, on rivers, inland waterways, land routes or land frontiers, as enumerated in the Hu Pu and Kung Pu Tse Li (Regulations of the Boards of Revenue and Works) and Ta Ch'ing Hui Tien (Dynastic Institutes), may remain; a list of the same, with their location, shall be furnished to the British Government, for purposes of record.

Wherever there are Imperial Maritime Custom-houses, or wherever such may be hereafter placed, Native Custom-houses may be also established; as well as at any points either on the seaboard or land frontiers.

The location of Native Custom-houses in the Interior may be changed as the circumstances of trade seem to require, but any change must be communicated to the British Government, so that the list may be corrected; the originally stated number of them shall not, however, be exceeded.

Goods carried by junks or sailing-vessels trading to or from open ports shall not pay lower duties than the combined duties and surtax on similar cargo carried by steamers.

Native produce, when transported from one place to another in the interior, shall, on arrival at the first Native Custom-house, after leaving the place of production, pay duty equivalent to the export surtax mentioned in Section 7.

When this duty has been paid, a certificate shall be given which shall describe the nature of the goods, weight, number of packages, etc., amount of duty paid and intended destination. This certificate, which shall be valid for a fixed period of not less than one year from date of payment of duty, shall free the goods from all taxation, examination, delay, or stoppage at any other Native Custom-houses passed en route.

If the goods are taken to a place not in the foreign settlements or concessions of an open port, for local use, they become there liable to the Consumption Tax described in Section 8.

If the goods are shipped from an open port, the certificate is to be accepted by the Custom-house concerned, in lieu of the export surtax mentioned in Section 7.

Junks, boats, or carts shall not be subjected to any taxation beyond a small and reasonable charge, paid periodically at a fixed annual rate. This does not exclude the right to levy, as at present, tonnage (Chuan Chao) and port dues (Chuan Liao) on junks.

Section 4.—Foreign opium duty and present lekin—which latter will now become a surtax in lieu of lekin—shall remain as provided for by existing Treaties.

Section 5.—The British Government have no intention whatever of interfering with China's right to tax native opium, but it is essential to declare that, in her arrangements for levying such taxation, China will not subject other goods to taxation, delay, or stoppage.

China is free to retain at important points on the borders of each province—either on land or water—offices for collecting duty on native opium, where duties or contributions leviable shall be paid in one lump sum; which payment shall cover taxation of all kinds within that province Each cake of opium will have a stamp affixed as evidence of duty payment. Excise officers and police may be employed in connection with these offices; but no barriers or other obstructions are to be erected, and the excise officers or police of these offices shall not stop or molest any other kinds of goods, or collect taxes thereon.

A list of these offices shall be drawn up and communicated to the British Government for record.

Section 6.—Lekin on salt is hereby abolished and the amount of said lekin and of other taxes and contributions shall be added to the salt duty, which shall be collected at place of production or at first station after entering the province where it is to be consumed.

The Chinese Government shall be at liberty to establish salt reporting offices at which boats conveying salt which is being moved under salt passes or certificates may be required to stop for purposes of examination and to have their certificates viséd, but at such offices no lekin or transit taxation shall be levied and no barriers or obstructions of any kind shall be erected.

Section 7.—The Chinese Government may re-cast the Export Tariff with specific duties as far as practicable on a scale not exceeding five per cent. ad valorem; but existing export duties shall not be raised until at least six months' notice has been given.

In cases where existing export duties are above five per cent. they shall be reduced to not more than that rate.

An additional special surtax of one half the export duty payable for the time being, in lieu of internal taxation and lekin, may be levied at time of export on goods exported either to foreign countries or coastwise.

In the case of silk, whether hand or filature reeled, the total export duty shall not exceed a specific rate equivalent to not more than five per cent. ad valorem. Half of this specific duty may be levied at the first Native Custom-house in the interior which the silk may pass and in such case a certificate shall be given as provided for in Section 3, and will be accepted by the Custom-house concerned at place of export in lieu of half the export duty. Cocoons passing Native Custom-houses shall be liable to no taxation whatever. Silk not exported but consumed in China is liable to the Consumption Tax mentioned in Section 8.

Section 8.—The abolition of the lekin system in China and the abandonment of all other kinds of internal taxation on foreign imports and on exports will diminish the revenue materially. The surtax on foreign imports and exports and on coastwise exports is intended to compensate in a measure for this loss of revenue, but there remains the loss of lekin revenue on internal trade to be met, and it is therefore agreed that the Chinese Government are at liberty to impose a Consumption Tax on articles of Chinese origin not intended for export.

This tax shall be levied only at places of consumption and not on goods while in transit, and the Chinese Government solemnly undertake that the arrangements which they may make for its collection shall in no way interfere with foreign goods or with native goods for export. The fact of goods being of foreign origin shall of itself free them from all taxation, delay, or stoppage, after having passed the Custom-house.

Foreign goods which bear a similarity to native goods shall be furnished by the Custom-house, if required by the owner, with a protective certificate for each package, on payment of import duty and surtax, to prevent the risk of any dispute in the interior.

Native goods brought by junks to open ports, if intended for local consumption—irrespective of the nationality of the owner of the goods—shall be reported at the Native Custom-house only, where the consumption tax may be levied.

China is at liberty to fix the amount of this (consumption) tax, which may vary according to the nature of the merchandise concerned, that is to say, according as the articles are necessaries of life or luxuries; but it shall be levied at a uniform rate on goods of the same description, no matter whether carried by junk, sailing-vessel, or steamer. As mentioned in Section 3, the Consumption Tax is not to be levied within foreign settlements or concessions.

Section 9.—An excise equivalent to double the import duty as laid down in the Protocol of 1901 is to be charged on all machine-made yarn and cloth manufactured in China, whether by foreigners at the open ports or by Chinese anywhere in China.

A rebate of the import duty and two-thirds of the import surtax is to be given on raw cotton imported from foreign countries, and of all duties, including Consumption Tax, paid on Chinese raw cotton used in mills in China.

Chinese machine-made yarn or cloth having paid excise is to be free of Export Duty, Export Surtax, Coast Trade Duty, and Consumption Tax. This Excise is to be collected through the Imperial Maritime Customs.

The same principle and procedure are to be applied to all other products of foreign type turned out by machinery, whether by foreigners at the open ports or by Chinese anywhere in China.

This stipulation is not to apply to the out-turn of the Hanyang and Ta Yeh Iron Works in Hupeh and other similar existing Government Works at present exempt from taxation; or to that of Arsenals, Government Dockyards, or establishments of that nature for Government purposes which may hereafter be erected.

Section 10.—A member or members of the Imperial Maritime Customs Foreign Staff shall be selected by each of the Governors-General and Governors, and appointed, in consultation with the Inspector-General of Imperial Maritime Customs, to each province for duty in connection with Native Customs affairs, Consumption Tax, Salt and Native Opium Taxes. These officers shall exercise an efficient supervision of the working of these departments, and in the event of their reporting any case of abuse, illegal exaction, obstruction to the movement of goods, or other cause of complaint, the Governor-General or Governor concerned will take immediate steps to put an end to same.

Section 11.—Cases where illegal action as described in this Article is complained of shall be promptly investigated by an officer of the Chinese Government of sufficiently high rank, in conjunction with a British officer and an officer of the Imperial Maritime Customs, each of sufficient standing; and in the event of its being found by a majority of the investigating officers that the complaint is well founded and loss has been incurred, due compensation is to be at once paid from the Surtax funds, through the Imperial Maritime Customs at the nearest open port. The High Provincial Officials are to be held responsible that the officer guilty of the illegal action shall be severely punished and removed from his post.

If the complaint turns out to be without foundation, complainant shall be held responsible for the expenses of the investigation.

His Britannic Majesty's Minister will have the right to demand investigation where from the evidence before him he is satisfied that illegal exactions or obstructions have occurred.

Section 12.—The Chinese Government agree to open to foreign trade, on the same footing as the places opened to foreign trade by the Treaties of Nanking and Tientsin, the following places, namely:—

Changsha in Hunan;
Wanhsien in Szechuen;
Nganking in Anhui;
Waichow (Hui-chow) in Kwangtung; and Kongmoon (Chiang-mên) in Kwangtung.

Foreigners residing in these open ports are to observe the Municipal and Police Regulations on the same footing as Chinese residents, and they are not to be entitled to establish Municipalities and Police of their own within the limits of these Treaty Ports except with the consent of the Chinese authorities.

If this Article does not come into operation the right to demand under it the opening of these ports, with the exception of Kongmoon, which is provided for in Article 10, shall lapse.

Section 13.—Subject to the provisions of Section 14, the arrangements provided for in this Article are to come into force on 1st January, 1904.

By that date all lekin barriers shall be removed and officials employed in the collection of taxes and dues prohibited by this Article shall be removed from their posts.

Section 14.—The condition on which the Chinese Government enter into the present engagement is that all Powers entitled to most favoured nation treatment in China enter into the same engagements as Great Britain with regard to the payment of surtaxes and other obligations imposed by this Article on His Britannic Majesty's Government and subjects.

The conditions on which His Britannic Majesty's Government enter into the present engagement are:—

(1) That all Powers who are now or who may hereafter become entitled to most favoured nation treatment in China enter into the same engagements;

(2) And that their assent is neither directly nor indirectly made dependent on the granting by China of any political concession, or of any exclusive commercial concession.

Section 15.—Should the Powers entitled to most favoured nation treatment by China have failed to agree to enter into the engagements undertaken by Great Britain under this Article by the 1st January, 1904, then the provisions of the Article shall only come into force when all the Powers have signified their acceptance of these engagements.

Section 16.—When the abolition of lekin and other forms of internal taxation on goods as provided for in this Article has been decided upon and sanctioned, an Imperial Edict shall be published in due form on yellow paper and circulated, setting forth the abolition of all lekin taxation, lekin barriers and all descriptions of internal taxation on goods, except as provided for in this Article.

The Edict shall state that the Provincial High Officials are responsible that any official disregarding the letter or spirit of its injunction shall be severely punished and removed from his post.

Art. IX.—The Chinese Government, recognising that it is advantageous for the country to develop its mineral resources, and that it is desirable to attract Foreign as well as Chinese capital to embark in mining enterprises, agree within one year from the signing of this Treaty to initiate and conclude the revision of the existing Mininil Regulations. China will, with all expedition and earnestness, go into the whole question of Mining Rules and, selecting from the rules of Great Britain, India, and other countries, regulations which seem applicable to the condition of China, she will re-cast her present Mining Rules in such a way as while promoting the interests of Chinese subjects and not injuring in any way the sovereign rights of China, shall offer no impediment to the attraction of foreign capital, or place foreign capitalists at a greater disadvantage than they would be under generally accepted foreign regulations.

Any mining concession granted after the publication of these new Rules shall be subject to their provisions.

Art. X.—Whereas in the year 1898 the Inland Waters of China were opened to all such steam vessels, native or foreign, as might be especially registered for that trade at the Treaty Ports, and whereas the Regulations dated 28th July, 1898, and Supplementary Rules dated September, 1898, have been found in some respects inconvenient in working, it is now mutually agreed to amend them and to annex such new Rules to this Treaty. These Rules shall remain in force until altered by mutual consent.

It is further agreed that Kongmoon shall be opened as a Treaty Port, and that, in addition to the places named in the special Article of the Burmah Convention of 4th February, 1897, British steamers shall be allowed to land or ship cargo and passengers, under the same regulations as apply to the "Ports of Call" on the Yangtze River, at the following "Ports of Call": Pak Tau Hau (Pai-t'u k'ou), Lo Ting Hau (Lo-ting k'ou), and Do Sing (Tou-ch'êng); and to land or discharge passengers at the following ten passenger landing stages on the West River:—Yung Ki (Jung-chi), Mah Ning (Ma-ning), Kau Kong (Chiu-chiang), Kulow (Ku-lao), Wing On (Yung-an), How Lik (Houli), Luk Pu (Lu-pu), Yuet Sing (Yüeh-ch'eng), Luk To (Lu-tu) and Fung Chuen (Fêng-ch'uan).

Art. XI.—His Britannic Majesty's Government agree to the prohibition of the general importation of morphia into China, on condition, however, that the Chinese Government will allow of its importation, on payment of the Tariff import duty and under special permit, by duly qualified British medical practitioners and for the use of hospitals, or by British chemists and druggists who shall only be permitted to sell it in small quantities and on receipt of a requisition signed by a duly qualified foreign medical practitioner.

The special permits above referred to will be granted to an intending importer on his signing a bond before a British Consul guaranteeing the fulfilment of these conditions. Should an importer be found guilty before a British Consul of a breach of his bond, he will not be entitled to take out another permit. Any British subject importing morphia without a permit shall be liable to have such morphia confiscated.

This Article will come into operation on all other Treaty Powers agreeing to its conditions, but any morphia actually shipped before that date will not be affected by this prohibition.

The Chinese Government on their side undertake to adopt measures at once to prevent the manufacture of morphia in China.

Art. XII.—China having expressed a strong desire to reform her judicial system and to bring it into accord with that of Western nations, Great Britain agrees to give every assistance to such reform, and she will also be prepared to relinquish her extra-territorial rights when she is satisfied that the state of the Chinese laws, the arrangement for their administration and other considerations warrant her in so doing.

Art. XIII.—The missionary question in China being, in the opinion of the Chinese Government, one requiring careful consideration, so that, if possible, troubles such as have occurred in the past may be averted in the future, Great Britain agrees to join in a Commission to investigate this question, and, if possible, to devise means for securing permanent peace between converts and non-converts, should such a Commission be formed by China and the Treaty Powers interested.

Art. XIV.—Whereas under Rule V. appended to the Treaty of Tientsin of 1858, British merchants are permitted to export rice and all other grain from one port of China to another under the same conditions in respect of security as copper "cash," it is now agreed that in cases of expected scarcity or famine from whatsoever cause in any district, the Chinese Government shall, on giving twenty-one days' notice, be at liberty to prohibit the shipment of rice and other grain from such district.

Should any vessel specially chartered to load rice or grain previously contracted for have arrived at her loading port prior to or on the day when a notice of prohibition to export comes into force, she shall be allowed an extra week in which to ship her cargo.

If during the existence of this prohibition, any shipment of rice or grain is allowed by the authorities, the prohibition shall, ipso facto, be considered cancelled and shall not be re-imposed until six weeks' notice has been given.

When a prohibition is notified, it will be stated whether the Government have any Tribute or Army Rice which they intend to ship during the time of prohibition, and, if so, the quantity shall be named.

Such rice shall not be included in the prohibition, and the Customs shall keep a record of any Tribute or Army Rice so shipped or landed.

The Chinese Government undertake that no rice, other than Tribute or Army Rice belonging to the Government, shall be shipped during the period of prohibition.

Notifications of prohibitions, and of the quantities of Army or Tribute Rice for shipment shall be made by the Governors of the Province concerned.

Similarly, notifications of the removals of prohibitions shall be made by the same authorities.

The export of rice and other grain to foreign countries remains prohibited.

Art. XV.—It is agreed that either of the High Contracting Parties to this Treaty may demand a revision of the Tariff at the end of 10 years; but if no demand be made on either side within 6 months after the end of the first 10 years, then the Tariff shall remain in force for 10 years more, reckoned from the end of the preceding 10 years, and so it shall be at the end of each successive 10 years.

Any Tariff concession which China may hereafter accord to articles of the produce or manufacture of any other State shall immediately be extended to similar articles of the produce or manufacture of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions by whomsoever imported.

Treaties already existing between the United Kingdom and China shall continue in force in so far as they are not abrogated or modified by stipulations of the present Treaty.

Art. XVI.—The English and Chinese Texts of the present Treaty have been carefully compared, but in the event of there being any difference of meaning between them, the sense as expressed in the English text shall be held to be the correct sense.

The ratifications of this Treaty, under the hand of His Majesty the King of Great Britain and Ireland and of His Majesty the Emperor of China respectively shall be exchanged at Peking within a year from this day of signature.

In token whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed and sealed this Treaty, two copies in English and two in Chinese.

Done at Shanghai this fifth day of September in the year of Our Lord, 1902, corresponding with the Chinese date, the fourth day of the eighth moon of the twenty-eighth year of Kwang Hsu.

Imperial Chinese Commissioners for dealing with questions connected with the Commercial Treaties, to

Sir JAMES MACKAY, His Britannic Majesty's Special Commissioner for the discussion of Treaty matters.

Shanghai: K. H. XXVIII., 7th moon, 11th day (Received August 15, 1902*)*

We have the honour to inform you that we have received the following telegram from His Excellency Liu, Governor-General of the Liang Chiang, on the subject of Clause II. mutually agreed upon by us:

"As regards this clause, it is necessary to insert therein a clear stipulation, to the "effect that, no matter what changes may take place in the future, all Customs' duties "must continue to be calculated on the basis of the existing higher rate of the Haikwan "Tael over the Treasury Tael, and that 'the touch' and weight of the former must be "made good."

As we have already arranged with you that a declaration of this kind should be embodied in an Official Note, and form an annex to the present Treaty, for purposes of record, we hereby do ourselves the honour to make this communication.

ANNEX A—(2)

GENTLEMEN, Shanghai, August 18th, 1902.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch of the 14th instant forwarding copy of a telegram from His Excellency Liu, Governor-General of the Liang Chiang, on the subject of Article II. of the new Treaty, and in reply I have the honour to state that His Excellency's understanding of the Article is perfectly correct.

I presume the Chinese Government will make arrangements for the coinage of a national silver coin of such weight and touch as may be decided upon by them. These coins will be made available to the public in return for a quantity of silver bullion of equivalent weight and fineness plus the usual mintage charge.

The coins which will become the national coinage of China will be declared by the Chinese Government to be legal tender in payment of Customs duty and in discharge of obligations contracted in Haikwan taels, but only at their proportionate value to the Haikwan tael, whatever that may be.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient Servant,

Their Excellencies
LU HAI-HUAN and SHENG HSUAN-HUAI,
etc., etc., etc.

ANNEX B—(1)

LU, President of the Board of Works;

SHENG, Junior Guardian of the Heir Apparent, Vice-President of the Board of Works;

Shanghai, September 2nd, 1902.

We have the honour to inform you that on the 22nd of August, we, in conjunction with the Governors-General of the Liang Chiang and the Hu-kuang Provinces, Their Excellencies Liu and Chang, addressed the following telegraphic Memorial to the Throne:—

"Of the revenue of the different Provinces derived from lekin of all kinds, a "portion is appropriated for the service of the foreign loans, a portion for the Peking "Government, and the balance is reserved for the local expenditure of the Provinces "concerned.

"In the negotiations now being conducted with Great Britain for the amendment "of the Commercial Treaties, a mutual arrangement has been come to providing for "the imposition of additional taxes, in compensation for the abolition of all kinds of "lekin and other imposts on goods, prohibited by Article VIII. After payment of "interest and sinking fund on the existing foreign loan, to the extent to which lekin "is thereto pledged, these additional taxes shall be allocated to the various Provinces "to make up deficiencies and replace revenue, in order that no hardships may be "entailed on them. With a view to preserving the original intention underlying the "proposal to increase the duties in compensation for the loss of revenue derived from "lekin and other imposts on goods, it is further stipulated that the surtaxes shall not "be appropriated for other purposes, shall not form part of the Imperial Maritime "Customs revenue proper, and shall in no case be pledged as security for any new "foreign loan.

"It is therefore necessary to memorialize for the issue of an Edict, giving effect "to the above stipulations and directing the Board of Revenue to find out what "proportion of the provincial revenues derived from lekin of all kinds, now about "to be abolished, each Province has hitherto had to remit, and what proportion it "has been entitled to retain, so that, when the Article comes into operation, due "apportionment may be made accordingly, thus providing the Provinces with funds "available for local expenditure and displaying equitable and just treatment towards "all."

On the 1st instant an Imperial Decree "Let action, as requested, be taken," was issued, and we now do ourselves the honour reverently to transcribe the same for your information.

ANNEX B—(2)

Shanghai, September 5th, 1902.

GENTLEMEN,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch of the 2nd instant forwarding the text of the Memorial and Decree dealing with the disposal of the surtaxes.

I understand that the surtaxes in addition to not being pledged for any new foreign loan are not to be pledged to, or held to be security for, liabilities already contracted by China except in so far as lekin revenue has already been pledged to an existing loan.

I also understand from the Memorial that the whole of the surtaxes provided by Article VIII. of the New Treaty goes to the Provinces in proportions to be agreed upon between them and the Board of Revenue, but that out of these surtaxes each Province is obliged to remit to Peking the same contribution as that which it has hitherto remitted out of its lekin collections, and that the Provinces also provide as hitherto out of these surtaxes whatever funds may be necessary for the service of the foreign loan to which lekin is partly pledged.

I hope Your Excellencies will send me a reply to this despatch and that you will agree to this correspondence forming part of the Treaty as an Annex.

I have the honour to be,

Gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

(Signed) JAS. L. MACKAY.

Their Excellencies,

LU HAI-HUAN and SHENG HSUAN-HUAI,

etc., etc., etc.

Lu, President of the Board of Works;

Sheng, Junior Guardian of the Heir Apparent, Vice-President of the Board of Works;

Shanghai, September 5th, 1902.

We have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of to-day's date with regard to the allocation of the surtax funds allotted to the Provinces, and to inform you that the views therein expressed are the same as our own.

We would, however, wish to point out that, were the whole amount of the allocation due paid over to the Provinces, unnecessary expense would be incurred in the retransmission by them of such portions thereof as would have to be remitted to Peking in place of the contributions hitherto payable out of lekin revenue. The amount, therefore, of the allocation due to the Provinces, arranged between them and the Board of Revenue, will be retained in the hands of the Maritime Customs, who will await the instructions of the Provinces in regard to the remittance of such portion thereof as may be necessary to fulfil their obligations, and (on receipt of these instructions) will send forward the amount direct. The balance will be held to the order of the Provinces.

In so far as lekin is pledged to the service of the 1898 loan, a similar method of procedure will be adopted.

As you request that this correspondence be annexed to the Treaty, we have the honour to state that we see no objection to this being done.

Annex C

INLAND WATERS STEAM NAVIGATION

Additional Rules

1.—British steamship owners are at liberty to lease warehouses and jetties on the banks of waterways from Chinese subjects for a term not exceeding 25 years, with option of renewal on terms to be mutually arranged. In cases where British merchants are unable to secure warehouses and jetties from Chinese subjects on satisfactory terms, the local officials, after consultation with the Minister of Commerce, shall arrange to provide these on renewable lease as above mentioned at current equitable rates.

2.—Jetties shall only be erected in such positions that they will not obstruct the inland waterway or interfere with navigation, and with the sanction of the nearest Commissioner of Customs; such sanction, however, shall not be arbitrarily withheld.

3.—British merchants shall pay taxes and contributions on these warehouses and jetties on the same footing as Chinese proprietors of similar properties in the neighbourhood. British merchants may only employ Chinese agents and staff to reside in warehouses so leased at places touched at by steamers engaged in inland traffic to carry on their business; but British merchants may visit these places from time to time to look after their affairs. The existing rights of Chinese jurisdiction over Chinese subjects shall not by reason of this clause be diminished or interfered with in any way.

4.—Steam vessels navigating the inland waterways of China shall be responsible for loss caused to riparian proprietors by damage which they may do to the banks or works on them and for the loss which may be caused by such damage. In the event of China desiring to prohibit the use of some particular shallow waterway by launches, because there is reason to fear that the use of it by them would be likely to injure the banks and cause damage to the adjoining country, the British authorities, when appealed to, shall, if satisfied of the validity of the objection, prohibit the use of that waterway by British launches, provided that Chinese launches are also prohibited from using it.

Both Foreign and Chinese launches are prohibited from crossing dams and weirs at present in existence on inland waterways where they are likely to cause injury to such works, which would be detrimental to the water service of the local people.

5.—The main object of the British Government in desiring to see the inland waterways of China opened to steam navigation being to afford facilities for the rapid transport of both foreign and native merchandise, they undertake to offer no impediment to the transfer to a Chinese company and the Chinese flag of any British steamer which may now or hereafter be employed on the inland waters of China should the owner be willing to make the transfer.

In event of a Chinese company registered under Chinese law being formed to run steamers on the inland waters of China the fact of British subjects holding shares in such a company shall not entitle the steamers to fly the British flag.

6.—Registered steamers and their tows are forbidden, just as junks have always been forbidden, to carry contraband goods. Infraction of this rule will entail the penalties prescribed in the Treaties for such an offence, and cancellation of the Inland Waters Navigation Certificate carried by the vessels, which will be prohibited from thereafter plying on inland waters.

7.—As it is desirable that the people living inland should be disturbed as little as possible by the advent of steam vessels to which they are not accustomed, inland waters not hitherto frequented by steamers shall be opened as gradually as may be convenient to merchants and only as the owners of steamers may see prospects of remunerative trade.

In cases where it is intended to run steam vessels on waterways on which such vessels have not hitherto run, intimation shall be made to the Commissioner of Customs at the nearest open port who shall report the matter to the Ministers of Commerce. The latter, in conjunction with the Governor-General or Governor of the Province, after careful consideration of all the circumstances of the case, shall at once give their approval.

8.—A registered steamer may ply within the waters of a port, or from one open port or ports to another open port or ports, or from one open port or ports of places inland, and thence back to such port or ports. She may, on making due report to the Customs, land or ship passengers or cargo at any recognised places of trade passed in the course of the voyage; but may not ply between inland places exclusively except with the consent of the Chinese Government.

9.—Any cargo and passenger boats may be towed by steamers. The helmsman and crew of any boat towed shall be Chinese. All boats, irrespective of ownership, must be registered before they can proceed inland.

10.—These Rules are supplementary to the Inland Steam Navigation Regulations of July and September, 1898. The latter, where untouched by the present Rules, remain in full force and effect; but the present Rules hold in the case of such of the former Regulations as the present Rules affect. The present Rules, and the Regulations of July and September, 1898, to which they are supplementary, are provisional and may be modified, as circumstances require, by mutual consent.

Done at Shanghai this fifth day of September, in the year of Our Lord, 1902, corresponding with the Chinese date, the fourth day of the eighth moon of the twenty-eighth year of Kwang Hsü.

REGULATIONS UNDER WHICH BRITISH TRADE IS TO BE CONDUCTED IN KOREA (CHOSEN)

I.—Entrance and Clearance of Vessels

1.—Within forty-eight hours (exclusive of Sundays and holidays) after the arrival of a British ship in a Korean port, the master shall deliver to the Korean Customs authorities the receipt of the British Consul showing that he has deposited the ship's papers at the British Consulate, and he shall then make an entry of this ship by handing in a written paper stating the name of the ship, of the port from which she comes, of her master, the number, and, if required, the names of her passengers, her tonnage, and the number of her crew, which paper shall be certified by the master to be a true statement, and shall be signed by him. He shall, at the same time, deposit a written manifest of his cargo, setting forth the marks and numbers of the packages and their contents as they are described in the bills of lading, with the names of the persons to whom they are consigned. The master shall certify that this description is correct, and shall sign his name to the same. When a vessel has been duly entered, the Customs authorities will issue a permit to open hatches, which shall be exhibited to the Customs officer on board. Breaking bulk without having obtained such permission will render the master liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred Mexican Dollars.

2.—If any error is discovered in the manifest, it may be corrected within twenty-four hours (exclusive of Sundays and holidays) of its being handed in, without the payment of any fee; but for alteration or post entry to the manifest made after that time a fee of Five Mexican Dollars shall be paid.

3.—Any master who shall neglect to enter his vessel at the Korean Custom-house within the time fixed by this Regulation shall pay a penalty not exceeding Fifty Mexican Dollars for every twenty-four hours that he shall so neglect to enter his ship.

4.—Any British vessel which remains in port for less than forty-eight hours (exclusive of Sundays and holidays) and does not open her hatches, also any vessel driven into port by stress of weather, or only in want of supplies, shall not be required to enter or pay tonnage dues so long as such vessel does not engage in trade.

5.—When the master of a vessel wishes to clear, he shall hand in to the Customs authorities an export manifest containing similar particulars to those given in the import manifest. The Customs authorities will then issue a clearance certificate and return the Consul's receipt for the ship's papers. These documents must be handed into the Consulate before the ship's papers are returned to the master.

6.—Should any ship leave the port without clearing outwards in the manner above prescribed, the master shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding Two Hundred Mexican Dollars.

7.—British steamers may enter and clear on the same day, and they shall not be required to hand in a manifest except for such goods as are to be landed or transhipped at the port of entry.

II.—Landing and Shipping Cargo and Payment of Duties

1.—The importer of any goods who desires to land them shall make and sign an application to that effect at the Custom-house, stating his own name, the name of the ship in which the goods have been imported, the marks, numbers, and contents of the packages and their values, and declaring that this statement is correct. The Customs authorities may demand the production of the invoice of each consignment of merchandise. If it is not produced, or if its absence is not satisfactorily accounted for the owner shall be allowed to land his goods on payment of double the Tariff duty, but the surplus duty so levied shall be refunded on the production of the invoice.

2.—All goods so entered may be examined by the Customs officers of the places appointed for the purpose. Such examination shall be made without delay or injury to the merchandise, and the packages shall be at once re-sorted by the Customs authorities to their original condition, in so far as may be practicable.

3.—Should the Customs authorities consider the value of any goods paying an ad valorem duty as declared by the importer or exporter insufficient, they shall call upon him to pay duty on the value determined by an appraisement to be made by the Customs appraiser. But should the importer or exporter be dissatisfied with that appraisement, he shall within twenty-four hours (exclusive of Sundays and holidays) state his reasons for such dissatisfaction to the Commissioner of Customs, and shall appoint an appraiser of his own to make a re-appraisement. He shall then declare the value of the goods as determined by such re-appraisement. The Commissioner of Customs will thereupon, at his option, either assess the duty on the value determined by this re-appraisement, or will purchase the goods from the importer or exporter at the price thus determined, with the addition of five per cent. In the latter case the purchase money shall be paid to the importer or exporter within five days from the date on which he has declared the value determined by his own appraiser.

4.—Upon all goods damaged on the voyage of importation a fair reduction of duty shall be allowed, proportionate to their deterioration. If any disputes arise as to the amount of such reduction, they shall be settled in the manner pointed out in the preceding clause.

5.—All goods intended to be exported shall be entered at the Korean Custom-house before they are shipped. The application to ship shall be made in writing, and shall state the name of the vessel by which the goods are to be exported, the marks and number of the packages, and the quantity, description, and value of the contents. The exporter shall certify in writing that the application gives a true account of all the goods contained therein, and shall sign his name thereto.

6.—No goods shall be landed or shipped at other places than those fixed by the Korean Customs authorities, or between the hours of sunset and sunrise, or on Sundays or holidays, without the special permission of the Customs authorities, who will be entitled to reasonable fees for the extra duty thus performed.

7.—Claims by importers or exporters for duties paid in excess, or by the Customs authorities for duties which have not been fully paid, shall be entertained only when made within thirty days from the date of payment.

8.—No entry will be required in the case of provisions for the use of British ships, their crews and passengers, nor for the baggage of the latter which may be landed or shipped at any time after examination by the Customs officers.

9.—Vessels needing repairs may land their cargo for that purpose without the payment of duty. All goods so landed shall remain in charge of the Korean Authorities, and all just charges for storage, labour, and supervision shall be paid by the master. But if any portion of such cargo be sold, the duties of the Tariff shall be paid on the portion so disposed of.

10.—Any person desiring to tranship cargo shall obtain a permit from the Customs authorities before doing so.

III.—Protection of the Revenue

1.—The Customs authorities shall have the right to place Customs officers on board any British merchant vessel in their ports. All such Customs officers shall have access to all parts of the ship in which cargo is stowed. They shall be treated with civility, and such reasonable accommodation shall be allowed to them as the ship affords.

2.—The hatches and all other places of entrance into that part of the ship where cargo is stowed may be secured by the Korean Customs officers between the hours of sunset and sunrise, and on Sundays and holidays, by affixing seals, locks, or other fastenings, and if any person shall, without due permission, wilfully open any entrance that has been so secured, or break any seal, lock, or other fastening that has been affixed by the Korean Customs officers, not only the person so offending, but the master of the ship, also, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding One Hundred Mexican Dollars.

3 —Any British subject who ships, or attempts to ship, or discharges, or attempts to discharge, goods which have not been duly entered at the Custom-house in the manner above provided, or packages containing goods different from those described in the import or export permit application, or prohibited goods, shall forfeit twice the value of such goods, and the goods shall be confiscated.

4.—Any person signing a false declaration or certificate with the intent to defraud the revenue of Korea shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Two Hundred Mexican Dollars.

5.—Any violation of any provision of these Regulations, to which no penalty is specially attached therein, may be punished by a fine not exceeding One Hundred Mexican Dollars.

Note.—All documents required by these Regulations, and all other communications addressed to the Korean Customs authorities, may be written in the English language.

TREATIES WITH JAPAN

GREAT BRITAIN

TREATY OF COMMERCE AND NAVIGATION BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND JAPAN

SIGNED AT LONDON, 16TH JULY, 1894

Ratifications Exchanged at Tokyo, 25th August, 1894

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India, and His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, being equally desirous of maintaining the relations of good understanding which happily exist between them, by extending and increasing the intercourse between their respective States, and being convinced that this object cannot better be accomplished than by revising the Treaties hitherto existing between the two countries, have resolved to complete such a revision, based upon principles of equity and mutual benefit, and, for that purpose, have named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say :—

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India, the Right Honourable John, Earl of Kimberley, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, etc., etc., Her Britannic Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs ;

And His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, Viscount Aoki Siuzo, Junii, First Class of the Imperial Order of the Sacred Treasure, His Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of St. James ;

Who, after having communicated to each other their full powers, found to be in good and due form, have agreed upon and concluded the following Articles :—

Article I.—The subjects of each of the two high contracting parties shall have full liberty to enter, travel, or reside in any part of the dominions and possessions of the other contracting party, and shall enjoy full and perfect protection for their persons and property.

They shall have free and easy access to the Courts of Justice in pursuit and defence of their rights ; they shall be at liberty equally with native subjects to choose and employ lawyers, advocates, and representatives to pursue and defend their rights before such Courts, and in all other matters connected with the administration of justice they shall enjoy all the rights and privileges enjoyed by native subjects.

In whatever relates to rights of residence and travel ; to the possession of goods and effects of any kind ; to the succession to personal estate, by will or otherwise, and the disposal of property of any sort in any manner whatsoever which they may lawfully acquire, the subjects of each contracting party shall enjoy in the dominions and possessions of the other the same privileges, liberties, and rights, and shall be subject to no higher imposts, or charges in these respects than native subjects, or subjects or citizens of the most favoured nation. The subjects of each of the contracting parties shall enjoy in the dominions and possessions of the other entire liberty of conscience, and, subject to the Laws, Ordinances, and Regulations, shall enjoy the right of private or public exercise of their worship, and also the right of burying their respective countrymen, according to their religious customs, in such suitable and convenient places as may be established and maintained for that purpose.

They shall not be compelled, under any pretext whatsoever, to pay any charges or taxes other or higher than those that are, or may be, paid by native subjects, or subjects or citizens of most favoured nation.

Article II.—The subjects of either of the contracting parties residing in the dominions and possessions of the other shall be exempted from all compulsory military service whatsoever, whether in the army, navy, national guards, or militia, from all contributions imposed in lieu of personal service; and from all forced loan or military exactions or contributions.

Article III.—There shall be reciprocal freedom of commerce and navigation between the dominions and possessions of the two high contracting parties.

The subjects of each of the high contracting parties may trade in any part of the dominions and possessions of the other by wholesale or retail in all kinds of produce, manufactures, and merchandise of lawful commerce, either in person or by agents, singly, or in partnership with foreigners or native subjects: and they may there own or hire and occupy the houses, manufactories, warehouses, shops, and premises which may be necessary for them, and lease land for residential and commercial purposes, conforming themselves to the Laws, Police, and Customs Regulations of the country like native subjects.

They shall have liberty to come with their ships and cargoes to all places, ports, and rivers in the dominions and possessions of the other which are or may be opened to foreign commerce, and shall enjoy, respectively, the same treatment, in matters of commerce and navigation, as native subjects, or subjects or citizens of the most favoured nation, without having to pay taxes, imposts, or duties, of whatever nature or under whatever denomination levied in the name or for the profit of the Government, public functionaries, private individuals, corporations, or establishments of any kind, other or greater than those paid by native subjects, or subjects or citizens of the most favoured nation, subject always to the Laws, Ordinances, and Regulations of each country.

Article IV.—The dwellings, manufactories, warehouses, and shops of the subjects of each of the high contracting parties in the dominions and possessions of the other, and all premises appertaining thereto destined for purposes of residence or commerce, shall be respected.

It shall not be allowable to proceed to make a search of, or a domiciliary visit to, such dwellings and premises, or to examine or inspect books, papers, or accounts except under the conditions and with the forms prescribed by the Laws, Ordinances, and Regulations for subjects of the country.

Article V.—No other or higher duties shall be imposed on the importation into the dominions and possessions of Her Britannic Majesty of any article, the produce or manufacture of dominions and possessions of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, from whatever place arriving; and no other or higher duties shall be imposed on the importation into the dominions and possessions of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan of any article, the produce or manufacture of the dominions and possessions of Her Britannic Majesty, from whatever place arriving than on the like article produced or manufactured in any other foreign country; nor shall any prohibition be maintained or imposed on the importation of any article, the produce or manufacture of the dominions and possessions of either of the high contracting parties, into the dominions and possessions of the other, from whatever place arriving, which shall not equally extend to the importation of the like article, being the produce or manufacture of any other country. This last provision is not applicable to the sanitary and other prohibitions occasioned by the necessity of protecting the safety of persons, or of cattle, or of plants useful to agriculture.

Article VI.—No other or higher duties or charges shall be imposed in the dominions and possessions of either of the high contracting parties on the exportation of any article to the dominions and possessions of the other than such as are, or may be, payable on the exportation of the like article to any other foreign country; nor shall any prohibition be imposed on the exportation of any article from the dominions and possessions of either of the two contracting parties to the dominions and possessions of the other which shall not equally extend to the exportation of the like article to any other country.

Article VII.—The subjects of each of the high contracting parties shall enjoy in the dominions and possessions of the other exemptions from all transit duties and a perfect equality of treatment with native subjects in all that relates to warehousing, bounties, facilities, and drawbacks.

Article VIII.—All articles which are or may be legally imported into the ports of the dominions and possessions of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan in Japanese vessels may likewise be imported into those ports in British vessels, without being liable to any other or higher duties or charges of whatever denomination than if such articles were imported in Japanese vessels; and, reciprocally, all articles which are or may be legally imported into the ports of the dominions and possessions of Her Britannic Majesty in British vessels may likewise be imported into those ports in Japanese vesssels, without being liable to any other or higher duties or charges of whatever denomination than if such articles were imported in British vessels. Such reciprocal equality of treatment shall take effect without distinction, whether such articles come directly from the place of origin or from any other places.

In the same manner there shall be perfect equality of treatment in regard to exportation, so that the same export duties shall be paid and the same bounties and drawbacks allowed in the dominions and possessions of either of the high contracting parties on the exportation of any article which is or may be legally exported therefrom, whether such exportation shall take place in Japanese or in British vessels, and whatever may be the place of destination, whether a port of either or the contracting parties or of any third Power.

Article IX.—No duties of tonnage, harbour, pilotage, lighthouse, quarantine, or other similar or corresponding duties of whatever nature or under whatever denomination, levied in the name or for the profits of the Government, public functionaries, private individuals, corporations, or establishments of any kind, shall be imposed in the ports of the dominions and possessions of either country upon the vessels of the other country which shall not equally and under the same conditions be imposed in the like cases on national vessels in general, or vessels of the most favoured nation. Such equality of treatment shall apply reciprocally to the respective vessels, from whatever port or place they may arrive, and whatever may be their place of destination.

Article X.—In all that regards the stationing, loading, and unloading of vessels in the ports, basins, docks, roadsteads, harbours, or rivers of the dominions and possessions of the two countries, no privilege shall be granted to national vessels which shall not be equally granted to vessels of the other country; the intention of the high contracting parties being that in this respect also the respective vessels shall be treated on the footing of perfect equality.

Article XI.—The coasting trade of both the high contracting parties is excepted from the provisions of the present Treaty, and shall be regulated according to the Laws, Ordinances, and Regulations of Japan and of Great Britain respectively. It is, however, understood that Japanese subjects in the dominions and possessions of Her Britannic Majesty and British subjects in the dominions and possessions of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan shall enjoy in this respect the rights which are or may be granted under such Laws, Ordinances, and Regulations to the subjects or citizens of any other country.

A Japanese vessel laden in a foreign country with cargo destined for two or more ports in the dominions and possessions of Her Britannic Majesty and a British vessel laden in a foreign country with cargo destined for two or more ports in the dominions and possessions of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan may discharge a portion of her cargo at one port, and continue her voyage to the other port or ports of destination where foreign trade is permitted, for the purpose of landing the remainder of her original cargo there, subject always to the Laws and Custom-house Regulations of the two countries.

The Japanese Government, however, agrees to allow British vessels to continue, as heretofore, for the period of the duration of the present Treaty, to carry cargo between the existing open ports of the Empire, excepting to or from the ports of Osaka, Niigata, and Ebisu-minato.

Article XII.—Any ship of war or merchant vessel of either of the high contracting parties which may be compelled by stress of weather, or by reason of any other distress, to take shelter in a port of the other, shall be at liberty to refit therein, to procure all necessary supplies, and to put to sea again, without paying any dues other than such as would be payable by national vessels. In case, however, the master of a merchant vessel should be under the necessity of disposing of a part of his cargo in order to defray the expenses, he shall be bound to conform to the Regulations and Tariffs of the place to which he may have come.

If any ship of war or merchant vessel of one of the contracting parties should run aground or be wrecked upon the coast of the other, the local authorities shall inform the Consul-General, Consul, Vice-Consul, or Consular Agent of the district of the occurrence, or, if there be no such Consular officer, they shall inform the Consul-General, Consul, Vice-Consul, or Consular Agent of the nearest district.

All proceedings relative to the salvage of Japanese vessels wrecked or cast on shore in the territorial waters of Her Britannic Majesty shall take place in accordance with the Laws, Ordinances, and Regulations of Great Britain, and, reciprocally, all measures of salvage relative to British vessels wrecked or cast on shore in the territorial waters of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan shall take place in accordance with the Laws, Ordinances, and Regulations of Japan.

Such stranded or wrecked ship or vessel, and all parts thereof, and all furniture, and appurtenances belonging thereunto, and all goods and merchandise saved therefrom, including those which may have been cast into the sea, or the proceeds thereof, if sold, as well as all papers found on board such stranded or wrecked ship or vessel, shall be given up to the owners or their agents, when claimed by them. If such owners or agents are not on the spot, the same shall be delivered to the respective Consuls-General, Consuls, Vice-Consuls, or Consular Agents upon being claimed by them within the period fixed by the laws of the country, and such Consular officers, owners, or agents shall pay only the expenses incurred in the preservation of the property, together with the salvage or other expenses which would have been payable in the case of a wreck of a national vessel.

The goods and merchandise saved from the wreck shall be exempt from all the duties of Customs unless cleared for consumption, in which case they shall pay the ordinary duties.

When a ship or vessel belonging to the subjects of one of the contracting parties is stranded or wrecked in the territories of the other, the respective Consuls-General, Consuls, Vice-Consuls, and Consular Agents shall be authorized, in case the owner or master, or other agent of the owner, is not present, to lend their official assistance in order to afford the necessary assistance to the subjects of the respective States. The same rule shall apply in case the owner, master, or other agent is present, but requires such assistance to be given.

Article XIII.—All vessels which, according to Japanese law, are to be deemed Japanese vessels, and all vessels which, according to British law, are to be deemed British vessels, shall, for the purposes of this Treaty, be deemed Japanese and British vessels respectively.

Article XIV.—The Consuls-General, Consuls, Vice-Consuls, and Consular Agents of each of the contracting parties, residing in the dominions and possessions of the other, shall receive from the local authorities such assistance as can by law be given to them for the recovery of deserters from the vessels of their respective countries.

It is understood that this stipulation shall not apply to the subjects of the country where the desertion takes place.

Article XV.—The high contracting parties agree that, in all that concerns commerce and navigation, any privilege, favour, or immunity which either contracting party has actually granted, or may hereafter grant to the Government, ships, subjects, or citizens of any other State, shall be extended immediately and unconditionally to the Government, ships, subjects, or citizens of the other contracting party, it being their intention that the trade and navigation of each country shall be placed, in all respects, by the other on the footing of the most favoured nation.

Article XVI.—Each of the high contracting parties may appoint Consuls-General, Consuls, Vice-Consuls, Pro-Consuls, and Consular Agents in all the ports, cities, and places of the other, except in those where it may not be convenient to recognize such officers.

This exception, however, shall not be made in regard to one of the contracting parties without being made likewise in regard to every other Power.

The Consuls-General, Consuls, Vice-Consuls, Pro-Consuls, and Consular Agents may exercise all functions, and shall enjoy all privileges, exemptions, and immunities which are or may hereafter be granted to Consular officers of the most favoured nation.

Article XVII.—The subjects of each of the high contracting parties shall enjoy in the dominions and possessions of the other the same protection as native subjects in regard to patents, trade marks, and designs, upon fulfilment of the formalities prescribed by law.

* Article XVIII.—Her Britannic Majesty's Government, so far as they are concerned, give their consent to the following arrangement:—

The several foreign Settlements in Japan shall be incorporated with the respective Japanese Communes, and shall thenceforth form part of the general municipal system of Japan.

The competent Japanese authorities shall thereupon assume all municipal obligations and duties in respect thereof, and the common funds and property, if any, belonging to such Settlements, shall at the same time be transferred to the said Japanese authorities.

When such incorporation takes place existing leases in perpetuity under which property is now held in the said Settlements shall be confirmed, and no conditions whatsoever other than those contained in such existing leases shall be imposed in respect of such property. It is, however, understood that the Consular authorities mentioned in the same are in all cases to be replaced by the Japanese authorities.

All lands which may previously have been granted by the Japanese Government free of rent for the public purposes of the said Settlements shall, subject to the right of eminent domain, be permanently reserved free of all taxes and charges for the public purposes for which they were originally set apart.

Article XIX.—The stipulations of the present Treaty shall be applicable, so far as the laws permit, to all the Colonies and foreign possessions of Her Britannic Majesty, excepting to those hereinafter named, that is to say, except to—

India.	South Australia.	Queensland.	New South Wales
The Cape.	†The Dominion of Canada.	Western Australia.	Tasmania.
Victoria.	Natal.	Newfoundland.	New Zealand.

Provided always that the stipulations of the present Treaty shall be made applicable to any of the above-named Colonies or foreign possessions on whose behalf notice to that effect shall have been given to the Japanese Government by Her Britannic Majesty's Representative at Tokyo within two years from the date of the exchange of ratifications of the present Treaty.

* Owing to serious difference of opinion which arose between Japan of the one part and Great Britain, France and Germany of the other part regarding the interpretation of this clause with regard to leases held in perpetuity, an Arbitration Tribunal was appointed. The Governments of Germany, France and Great Britain named as Arbitrator M. Louis Renault, Professor of Law in the University of Paris and Legal Adviser to the Department of Foreign Affairs, and Japan named as Arbitrator His Excellency Itchiro Motono, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, at Paris, Doctor of Law. M. Gregers Gram, formerly Norwegian Minister of State, was chosen by the Arbitrators as Umpire. The Tribunal sat at The Hague, and on May 22nd, 1905, decided by a majority of votes and declared that: "The provisions of the Treaties and other engagements mentioned in the Protocols of Arbitration exempt not only the land held in virtue of the leases in perpetuity granted by or on behalf of the Government of Japan, but they exempt the land and buildings of every description constructed or which may hereafter be constructed on such land from all imposts, taxes, charges, contributions or conditions whatsoever, other than those expressly stipulated in the leases in question." Mr. Motono recorded his entire disagreement with the decision.

† On January 31st, 1906, an agreement was signed in Tokyo making the Stipulations this Treaty applicableto the Dominion of Canada.

Article XX.—The present Treaty shall, from the date it comes into force, be substituted in place of the Conventions respectively of the 23rd day of the 8th month of the 7th year of Kayai, corresponding to the 14th day of October, 1854, and of the 13th day of the 5th month of the 2nd year of Keiou, corresponding to the 25th day of June, 1866, the Treaty of the 18th day of the 7th month of the 5th year of Ansei, corresponding to the 26th day of August, 1858, and all Arrangements and Agreements subsidiary thereto concluded or existing between the high contracting parties; and from the same date such Conventions, Treaty, Arrangements and Agreements shall cease to be binding, and, in consequence, the jurisdiction then exercised by British Courts in Japan, and all the exceptional privileges, exemptions, and immunities then enjoyed by British subjects, as a part of or appurtenant to such jurisdiction, shall absolutely and without notice cease and determine, and thereafter all such jurisdiction shall be assumed and exercised by Japanese Courts.

Article XXI.—The present Treaty shall not take effect until at least five years after its signature. It shall come into force one year after His Imperial Japanese Majesty's Government shall have given notice to Her Britannic Majesty's Government of its wish to have the same brought into operation. Such notice may be given at any time after the expiration of four years from the date hereof. The Treaty shall remain in force for the period of twelve years from the date it goes into operation.

Either high contracting party shall have the right, at any time after eleven years shall have elapsed from the date this Treaty takes effect, to give notice to the other of its intention to terminate the same, and at the expiration of twelve months after such notice is given this Treaty shall wholly cease and determine.

Article XXII.—The present Treaty shall be ratified, and the ratifications thereof shall be exchanged at Tokyo as soon as possible, and not later than six months from the present date.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the same and have affixed thereto the seal of their arms.

Done at London, in duplicate, this sixteenth day of the seventh month of the twenty-seventh year of Meiji.

PROTOCOL

The Government of Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India, and the Government of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, deeming it advisable in the interests of both countries to regulate certain special matters of mutual concern, apart from the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation signed this day, have, through their respective Plenipotentiaries, agreed upon the following stipulations:—

1.—It is agreed by the contracting parties that one month after the exchange of the ratifications of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation signed this day, the Import Tariff hereunto annexed shall, subject to the provisions of Article XXIII. of the Treaty of 1858 at present subsisting between the contracting parties, as long as the said Treaty remains in force and thereafter, subject to the provisions of Articles V. and XV. of the Treaty signed this day, be applicable to the Articles therein enumerated, being the growth, produce, or manufacture of the dominions and possessions of Her Britannic Majesty, upon importation into Japan. But nothing contained in this Protocol, or the Tariff hereunto annexed, shall be held to limit or qualify the right of the Japanese Government to restrict or to prohibit the importation of adulterated drugs, medicines, food, or beverages, indecent or obscene prints, paintings, books, cards, lithographic or other engravings, photographs, or any other indecent or obscene articles; articles in violation of patent, trade-mark, or copy-right laws of Japan, or any other article which for sanitary reasons, or in view of public security or morals, might offer any danger.

The ad valorem duties established by the said Tariff shall, so far as may be deemed practicable, be converted into specific duties by a supplementary Convention, which shall be concluded between the two Governments within six months from the date of this Protocol; the medium prices, as shown by the Japanese Customs Returns during the six calendar months preceding the date of the present Protocol, with the addition of the cost of insurance and transportation from the place of purchase, production or fabrication, to the port of discharge, as well as commission, if any, shall be taken as the basis for such conversion. In the event of the Supplementary Convention not having come into force at the expiration of the period for the said Tariff to take effect, ad valorem duties in conformity with the rule recited at the end of the said Tariff shall, in the meantime, be levied.

In respect of articles not enumerated in the said Tariff, the General Statutory Tariff of Japan for the time being in force shall, from the same time, apply, subject, as aforesaid, to the provisions of Article XXIII. of the Treaty of 1858 and Articles V. and XV. of the Treaty signed this day, respectively.

From the date the Tariffs aforesaid take effect, the Import tariff now in operation in Japan in respect of goods and merchandise imported into Japan by British subjects shall cease to be binding.

In all other respects the stipulations of the existing Treaties and Conventions shall be maintained unconditionally until the time when the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation signed this day comes into force.

2.—The Japanese Government, pending the opening of the country to British subjects, agrees to extend the existing passport system in such a manner as to allow British subjects, on the production of a certificate of recommendation from the British Representative in Tokyo, or from any of Her Majesty's Consuls at the open ports in Japan, to obtain upon application passports available for any part of the country, and for any period not exceeding twelve months, from the Imperial Japanese Foreign Office in Tokyo, or from the chief authorities in the Prefecture in which an open port is situated; it being understood that the existing Rules and Regulations governing British subjects who visit the interior of the Empire are to be maintained.

3.—The Japanese Government undertakes, before the cessation of British Consular jurisdiction in Japan, to join the International Conventions for the Protection of Industrial Property and Copyright.

4.—It is understood between the two high contracting parties that, if Japan thinks it necessary at any time to levy an additional duty on the production or manufacture of refined sugar in Japan, an increased customs duty equivalent in amount may be levied on British refined sugar when imported into Japan, so long as such additional excise tax or inland duty continues to be raised.

Provided always that British refined sugar shall in this respect be entitled to the treatment accorded to refined sugar being the produce or manufacture of the most favoured nation.

5.—The undersigned Plenipotentiaries have agreed that this Protocol shall be submitted to the two high contracting parties at the same time as the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation signed this day, and that when the said Treaty is ratified the agreements contained in the Protocol shall also equally be considered as approved, without the necessity of a further formal ratification.

It is agreed that this Protocol shall terminate at the same time the said Treaty ceases to be binding.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have affixed thereto the seal of their arms.

Done at London, in duplicate, this sixteenth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

TREATY OF COMMERCE AND NAVIGATION BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND JAPAN

PREAMBLE

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan and His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, being desirous to strengthen the relations of amity and good understanding which happily exist between them and between their subjects, and to facilitate and extend the commercial relations between their two countries, have resolved to conclude a Treaty of Commerce and Navigation for that purpose, and have named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, His Excellency Monsieur Takaaki Kato, Jusammi, First Class of the Order of the Sacred Treasure, His Imperial Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary at the Court of St. James; and His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, the Right Honourable Sir Edward Grey, a Baronet of the United Kingdom, a Member of Parliament, His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in good and due form, have agreed upon the following Articles:—

Art. I.—The subjects of each of the high contracting parties shall have full liberty to enter, travel, and reside in the territories of the other, and, conforming themselves to the laws of the country—

1.—Shall in all that relates to travel and residence be placed in all respects on the same footing as native subjects.

2.—They shall have the right, equally with native subjects, to carry on their commerce and manufacture, and to trade in all kinds of merchandise of lawful commerce, either in person or by agents, singly or in partnerships with foreigners or native subjects.

3.—They shall in all that relates to the pursuit of their industries, callings, professions, and educational studies be placed in all respects on the same footing as the subjects or citizens of the most favoured nation.

4.—They shall be permitted to own or hire and occupy houses, manufactories, warehouses, shops, and premises which may be necessary for them, and to lease land for residential, commercial, industrial, and other lawful purposes, in the same manner as native subjects.

5.—They shall, on condition of reciprocity, be at full liberty to acquire and possess every description of property, movable or immovable, which the laws of the country permit or shall permit the subjects or citizens of any other foreign country to acquire and possess, subject always to the conditions and limitations prescribed in such laws. They may dispose of the same by sale, exchange, gift, marriage, testament, or in any other manner, under the same conditions which are or shall be established with regard to native subjects. They shall also be permitted, on compliance with the laws of the country, freely to export the proceeds of the sale of their property and their goods in general without being subjected as foreigners to other or higher duties that those to which subjects of the country would be liable under similar circumstances.

6.—They shall enjoy constant and complete protection and security for their persons and property; shall have free and easy access to the Courts of Justice and other tribunals in pursuit and defence of their claims and rights; and shall have full liberty, equally with native subjects, to choose and employ lawyers and advocates to represent them before such Courts and tribunals; and generally shall have the same rights and privileges as native subjects in all that concerns the administration of justice.

7.—They shall not be compelled to pay taxes, fees, charges, or contributions of any kind whatever other or higher than those which are or may be paid by native subjects or the subjects or citizens of the most favoured nation.

8.—And they shall enjoy a perfect equality of treatment with native subjects in all that relates to facilities for warehousing under bond, bounties, and drawbacks.

Art. II.—The subjects of each of the high contracting parties in the territories of the other shall be exempted from all compulsory military services, whether in the army, navy, national guard, or militia; from all contributions imposed in lieu of personal service; and from all forced loans and military requisitions or contributions unless imposed on them equally with native subjects as owners, lessees, or occupiers of immovable property.

In the above respects the subjects of each of the high contracting parties shall not be accorded in the territories of the other less favourable treatment than that which is or may be accorded to subjects or citizens of the most favoured nation.

Art. III.—The dwellings, warehouses, manufactories, and shops of the subjects of each of the high contracting parties in the territories of the other, and all premises appertaining thereto used for lawful purposes, shall be respected. It shall not be allowable to proceed to make a domiciliary visit to, or a search of, any such buildings and premises, or to examine or inspect books, papers, or accounts, except under the conditions and with the forms prescribed by the laws for native subjects.

Art. IV.—Each of the high contracting parties may appoint Consuls-General, Consuls, Vice-Consuls, and Consular Agents in all ports, cities, and places of the other, except in those where it may not be convenient to recognise such officers. This exception, however, shall not be made in regard to one of the high contracting parties without being made likewise in regard to all other Powers.

Such Consuls-General, Consuls, Vice-Consuls, and Consular Agents, having received exequaturs or other sufficient authorisations from the Government of the country to which they are appointed, shall have the right to exercise their functions, and to enjoy the privileges, exemptions, and immunities which are or may be granted to the Consular officers of the most favoured nation. The Government issuing exequaturs or other authorisations has the right in its discretion to cancel the same on explaining the reasons for which it is thought proper to do so.

Art. V.—In case of the death of a subject of one of the high contracting parties in the territories of the other, without leaving at the place of his decease any person entitled by the laws of his country to take charge of and administer the estate, the competent Consular officer of the State to which the deceased belonged shall, upon fulfilment of the necessary formalities, be empowered to take custody of and administer the estate in the manner and under the limitations prescribed by the law of the country in which the property of the deceased is situated.

The foregoing provision shall also apply in case of a subject of one of the high contracting parties dying outside the territories of the other, but possessing property therein, without leaving any person there entitled to take charge of and administer the estate.

It is understood that in all that concerns the administration of the estates of deceased persons, any right, privilege, favour, or immunity which either of the high contracting parties has actually granted, or may hereafter grant, to the Consular officers of any other foreign State shall be extended immediately and unconditionally to the Consular officers of the other high contracting party.

Art. VI.—There shall be between the territories of the two high contracting parties reciprocal freedom of commerce and navigation. The subjects of each of the high contracting parties shall have liberty freely to come with their ships and cargoes to all places, ports, and rivers in the territories of the other, which are or may be opened to foreign commerce, and, conforming themselves to the laws of the country to which they thus come, shall enjoy the same rights, privileges, liberties, favours, immunities, and exemptions in matters of commerce and navigation as are or may be enjoyed by native subjects.

Art. VII.—Articles, the produce or manufacture of the territories of one high contracting party, upon importation into the territories of the other, from whatever place arriving, shall enjoy the lowest rates of Customs duty applicable to similar articles of any other foreign origin.

No prohibition or restriction shall be maintained or imposed on the importation of any article, the produce or manufacture of the territories of either of the high contracting parties, into the territories of the other, from whatever place arriving, which shall not equally extend to the importation of the like articles, being the produce or manufacture of any other foreign country. This provision is not applicable to the sanitary or other prohibitions occasioned by the necessity of securing the safety of persons, or of cattle, or of plants useful to agriculture.

Art. VIII.—The articles, the produce or manufacture of the United Kingdom, enumerated in Part I. of the Schedule annexed to this Treaty, shall not, on importation into Japan, be subjected to higher Customs duties than those specified in the Schedule.

The articles, the produce or manufacture of Japan, enumerated in Part II. of the Schedule annexed to this Treaty, shall be free of duty on importation into the United Kingdom.

Provided that if at any time after the expiration of one year from the date this Treaty takes effect either of the high contracting parties desires to make a modification in the Schedule it may notify its desire to the other high contracting party, and thereupon negotiations for the purpose shall be entered into forthwith. If the negotiations are not brought to a satisfactory conclusion within six months from the date of notification, the high contracting party which gave the notification may, within one month, give six months' notice to abrogate the present Article, and on the expiration of such notice the present Article shall cease to have effect, without prejudice to the other stipulation of this Treaty.

Art. IX.—Articles, the produce or manufacture of the territories of one of the high contracting parties, exported to the territories of the other, shall not be subjected on export to other or higher charges than those on the like articles exported to any other foreign country. Nor shall any prohibition or restriction be imposed on the exportation of any article from the territories of either of the two High Contracting Parties to the territories of the other which shall not equally extend to the exportation of the like article to any other foreign country.

Art. X.—Articles, the produce or manufacture of the territories of one of the high contracting parties, passing in transit through the territories of the other, in conformity with the laws of the country, shall be reciprocally free from all transit duties, whether they pass direct, or whether during transit they are unloaded, warehoused, and reloaded.

Art. XI.—No internal duties levied for the benefit of the State, local authorities, or corporations which affect, or may affect, the production, manufacture, or consumption of any article in the territories of either of the high contracting parties shall for any reason be a higher or more burdensome charge on articles the produce or manufacture of the territories of the other than on similar articles of native origin.

The produce or manufacture of the territories of either of the high contracting parties imported into the territories of the other, and intended for warehousing or transit, shall not be subjected to any internal duty.

Art. XII.—Merchants and manufacturers, subjects of one of the high contracting parties, as well as merchants and manufacturers domiciled and exercising their commerce and industries in the territories of such party, may, in the territories of the other, either personally or by means of commercial travellers, make purchases or collect orders, with or without samples, and such merchants, manufacturers, and their commercial travellers, while so making purchases and collecting orders, shall in the matter of taxation and facilities, enjoy the most favoured nation treatment.

Articles imported as samples for the purposes above-mentioned shall, in each country, be temporarily admitted free of duty on compliance with the Customs regulations and formalities established to assure their re-exportation or the payment of the prescribed Customs duties if not re-exported within the period allowed by law. But the foregoing privilege shall not extend to articles which, owing to their quantity or value, cannot be considered as samples, or which, owing to their nature, could not be identified upon re-exportation. The determination of the question of the qualification of samples for duty-tree admission rests in all cases exclusively with the competent authorities of the place where the importation is effected.

Art. XIII.—The marks, stamps, or seals placed upon the samples mentioned in the preceding Article by the Customs authorities of one country at the time of exportation, and the officially-attested list of such samples containing a full description thereof issued by them, shall by reciprocally accepted by the Customs officials of the other as establishing their character as samples and exempting them from inspection except so far as may be necessary to establish that the samples produced are those enumerated in the list. The Customs authorities of either country may, however, affix a supplementary mark to such samples in special cases where they may think this precaution necessary.

Art. XIV.—The Chambers of Commerce, as well as such other Trade Association, and other recognised Commercial Associations in the territories of the high contracting Parties as may be authorised in this behalf, shall be mutually accepted as competent authorities for issuing any certificates that may be required for commercial travellers.

Art. XV.—Limited liability and other companies and associations, commercial, industrial, and financial, already or hereafter to be organised in accordance with the laws of either high contracting party, are authorised, in the territories of the others to exercise their right and appear in the Courts either as plaintiffs or defendants, subject to the laws of such other party.

Art. XVI.—Each of the high contracting parties shall permit the importation or exportation of all merchandise which may be legally imported or exported, and also the carriage of passengers from or to their respective territories, upon the vessels of the other; and such vessels, their cargoes, and passengers, shall enjoy the same privileges as, and shall not be subjected to, any other or higher duties or charges than national vessels and their cargoes and passengers.

Art. XVII.—In all that regards the stationing, loading, and unloading of vessels in the ports, docks, roadsteads, and harbours of the high contracting parties, on privileges or facilities shall be granted by either party to national vessels which are not equally, in like cases, granted to the vessels of the other country; the intention of the high contracting parties being that in these respects also the vessels of the two countries shall be treated on the footing of perfect equality.

Art. XVIII.—All vessels which according to Japanese law are to be deemed Japanese vessels, and all vessels which according to British law are to be deemed British vessels, shall, for the purpose of this Treaty, be deemed Japanese and British vessels respectively.

Art. XIX.—No duties of tonnage, harbour, pilotage, lighthouse, quarantine, or other analogous duties or charges of whatever nature, or under whatever denomination, levied in the name or for the profit of Government, public functionaries, private individuals, corporations or establishments of any kind, shall be imposed in the ports of either country upon the vessels of the other which shall not equally, under the same conditions, be imposed in like cases on national vessels in general, or vessels to the most-favoured nation. Such equality of treatment shall apply to the vessels of either country from whatever place they may arrive and whatever may be their destination.

Art. XX.—Vessels charged with performance of regular scheduled postal service of one of the high contracting parties shall enjoy in the territorial waters of the other the same special facilities, privileges, and immunities as are granted to like vessels of the most favoured nation.

Art. XXI.—The coasting trade of the high contracting parties is excepted from the provisions of the present Treaty, and shall be regulated according to the laws of Japan and the United Kingdom respectively. It is, however, understood that the subjects and vessels of either high contracting party shall enjoy in this respect most favoured nation treatment in the territories of the other.

Japanese and British vessels may, nevertheless, proceed from one port to another, either for the purpose of landing the whole or part of their passengers or cargoes brought from abroad, or of taking on board the whole or part of their passengers or cargoes for a foreign destination.

It is also understood that, in the event of the coasting trade of either country being exclusively reserved to national vessels, the vessels of the other country, if engaged in trade to or from places not within the limits of the coasting trade so reserved, shall not be prohibited from the carriage between two ports of the former country of passengers holding through tickets or merchandise consigned on through bills of lading to or from places not within the above-mentioned limits, and while engaged in such carriage these vessels and their cargoes shall enjoy the full privileges of this Treaty.

Art. XXII.—If any seaman should desert from any ship belonging to either of the high contracting parties in the territorial waters of the other, the local authorities shall, within the limits of law, be bound to give every assistance in their power for the recovery of such deserter, on application to that effect being made to them by the competent Consular officer of the country to which the ship of the deserter may belong, accompanied by an assurance that all expense connected therewith will be repaid.

It is understood that this stipulation shall not apply to the subjects of the country where the desertion takes place.

Art. XXIII.—Any vessel of either of the high contracting parties which may be compelled, by stress of weather or by accident, to take shelter in a port of the other shall be at liberty to refit therein, to procure all necessary stores, and to put to sea again, without paying any dues other than such as would be payable in the like case by a national vessel. In case, however, the master of a merchant-vessel should be under the necessity of disposing of a part of his merchandise in order to defray the expenses, he shall be bound to conform to the Regulations and Tariffs of the place to which he may have come.

If any vessel of one of the high contracting parties should run aground or be wrecked upon the coasts of the other, such vessel, and all parts thereof, and all furniture and appurtenances belonging thereunto, and all goods and merchandise saved therefrom, including any which may have been cast into the sea, or the proceeds thereof, if sold, as well as all papers found on board such stranded or wrecked vessel, shall be given up to the owners or their agents when claimed by them. If there are no such owners or agents on the spot, then the same shall be delivered to the Japanese or British Consular officer in whose district the wreck or stranding may have taken place upon being claimed by him within the period fixed by the laws of the country, and such Consular officer, owners, or agents shall pay only the expenses incurred in the preservation of the property, together with the salvage or other expenses which would have been payable in the like case of a wreck or stranding of a national vessel.

The high contracting parties agree, moreover, that merchandise saved shall not be subjected to the payment of any Customs duty unless cleared for internal consumption.

In the case either of a vessel being driven in by stress of weather, run aground, or wrecked, the respective Consular officers shall, if the owner or master or other agent of the owner is not present, or is present and requires it, be authorised to interpose in order to afford the necessary assistance to their fellow-countrymen.

Art. XXIV.—The high contracting parties agree that in all that concerns commerce, navigation, and industry, any favour, privilege, or immunity which either high contracting party has actually granted, or may hereafter grant, to the ships subjects, or citizens of any other foreign State shall be extended immediately and unconditionally to the ships or subjects of the other high contracting party, it being their intention that the commerce, navigation, and industry of each country shall be placed in all respects on the footing of the most favoured nation.

Art. XXV.—The stipulations of this Treaty do not apply to tariff concessions granted by either of the high contracting parties to contiguous States solely to facilitate frontier traffic within a limited zone on each side of the frontier, or to the treatment accorded to the produce of the national fisheries of the high contracting parties or to special tariff favours granted by Japan in regard to fish and other aquatic products taken in the foreign waters in the vicinity of Japan.

Art. XXVI.—The stipulations of the present Treaty shall not be applicable to any of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, or Protectorates beyond the Seas, unless notice of adhesion shall have been given on behalf of any such Dominion, Colony, Possession, or Protectorate by His Britannic Majesty's Representative at Tokyo before the expiration of two years from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the present Treaty.

Art. XXVII.—The present Treaty shall be ratified, and the ratifications exchanged at Tokyo as soon as possible. It shall enter into operation on the 17th July, 1911, and remain in force until the 16th July, 1923. In case neither of the high contracting parties shall have given notice to the other, twelve months before the expiration of the said period, of its intention to terminate the Treaty, it shall continue operative until the expiration of one year from the date on which either of the high contracting parties shall have denounced it.

As regards the British Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, and Protectorates to which the present Treaty may have been made applicable in virtue of Article XXVI., however, either of the high contracting parties shall have the right to terminate it separately at any time on giving twelve months' notice to that effect.

It is understood that the stipulations of the present and of the preceding Article referring to British Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, and Protectorates apply also to the island of Cyprus.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Treaty, and have affixed thereto the seal of their arms.

THE QUADRUPLE ALLIANCE

OFFICIAL TEXT

At the fourth plenary session of the Conference on Limitation of Armaments held on December 10th, 1921, Senator Lodge made public the following draft of a treaty and accompanying reservations:—

The United States of America, the British Empire, France and Japan, with a view to the preservation of the general peace and the maintenance of their rights in relation to their insular possessions and insular dominions in the regions of the Pacific Ocean, have determined to conclude a treaty to this effect and have appointed as their plenipotentiaries :—

The President of the United States——
His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the seas, Emperor of India——

And

For the Dominion of Canada ——
For the Commonwealth of Australia——
For the Dominion of New Zealand——
For India——

The President of the French Republic——
His Majesty the Emperor of Japan——

Who, having communicated their full powers found in good and due form, have agreed as follows :—

Article I.—The high contracting parties agree as between themselves to respect their rights in relation to their insular possessions and insular dominions in the region of the Pacific Ocean. If there should develop between any of the high contracting parties a controversy arising out of any Pacific question and involving their said rights, which is not satisfactorily settled by diplomacy and is likely to affect the harmonious accord now happily subsisting between them, they shall invite the other high contracting parties to a joint conference to which the whole subject will be referred for consideration and adjustment.

Article II.—If the said rights are threatened by the aggressive action of any other Power, the high contracting parties shall communicate with one another fully and frankly in order to arrive at an understanding as to the most efficient measures to be jointly or separately taken to meet the particular situation.

Article III.—This Agreement shall remain in force for ten years from the time it shall take effect, and after the expiration of said period it shall continue to be in force subject to the right of any of the high contracting parties to terminate it upon twelve months' notice.

Article IV.—This Agreement shall be ratified as soon as possible in accordance with the constitutional methods of the high contracting parties and shall take effect on the deposit of ratifications, which shall take place at Washington, and thereupon the Agreement between Great Britain and Japan which was concluded at London on July 13th, 1911, shall terminate.

Reservations.—The signing of this Treaty is on the part of the United States subject to (reservations affecting) the island of Yap and what are termed the Mandate Islands in the Pacific Ocean, north of the Equator, the negotiations in regard to which are almost concluded, and also the reservations with respect to what are termed the Mandate Islands in the Pacific Ocean south of the Equator.

It should also be observed that the controversies to which the proposed Treaty refers do not include questions which, according to the principles of international law, lie exclusively within the domestic jurisdiction of the respective Powers.

In the course of his address, Senator Lodge stated: "To put it in a few words, the Treaty provides that the four signatory Powers will agree between themselves in regard to their insular possessions and dominions in the region of the Pacific, and that if any controversy should arise as to such rights all the high contracting parties shall be invited to a joint conference looking to the adjustment of such controversy. They agree to take similar action in the case of aggression by any other Power upon these insular possessions or dominions. This Agreement is to remain in force for ten years, and, after ratification under the constitutional methods of the high contracting parties, the existing agreement between Great Britain and Japan, which was concluded at London on July 13, 1911, shall terminate. Each signer is bound to respect the rights of the others, and before taking action in any controversy to consult with them. There is no provision for the use of force to carry out any of the terms of the Agreement, and no military or naval stations lurk anywhere in the background or under cover of these plain and direct clauses. The surest way to prevent war is to remove the cause of war. This is an attempt to remove the cause of war over a great area of the globe's surface by reliance upon the good faith and honest intentions of the nations which signed this Treaty solving all differences through a process of diplomacy and joint consideration and conciliation.

TERRITORIAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE INTEGRITY OF CHINA

The Far Eastern Committee of the Conference unanimously adopted a resolution declaring in favour of the territorial and administrative integrity of China. The resolution, which was drafted and presented by Senator Root, was signed by eight Powers, China refraining from appending her signature as being unfitting in a document regarding herself.

Following is the text of the resolution:—"It is the firm intention of the Powers attending the Conference, firstly, to respect the sovereignty, independence and territorial and administrative integrity of China; secondly, to provide the fullest, unembarrassed opportunity for China to develop and to maintain an effective and stable Government; thirdly, to use their influence for the purpose of effectively establishing and maintaining the principle of equal opportunity for commerce and industry to all nations throughout Chinese territory; fourthly, to refrain from taking advantage of present conditions in order to seek special rights and privileges abridging the rights of subjects of friendly States, and also to refrain from countenancing any action inimical to the security of such States."

The Far Eastern Committee passed a resolution, suggested by Sir Auckland Geddes, under which the Powers attending the Conference declared their intention "not to enter into any treaty, agreement, arrangement, or understanding with one another, or individually or collectively with any Power or Powers, which infringes or impairs the principles declared by the resolution adopted by the Committee on the 21st ult." (i.e., Senator Root's resolution declaring for the territorial and administrative integrity of China).

FOREIGN POST OFFICES IN CHINA

Representatives of the nine Powers sitting as a Committee on the Pacific and Far Eastern questions adopted a resolution in favour of the relinquishment of Foreign post-office privileges in China. All the Powers agreed upon January 1st, 1923, as the date of relinquishment.

The text of the resolution is:— "Recognising the justice of the desire expressed by the Chinese Government to secure the abolition of foreign postal agencies in China, save or except in leased territories or otherwise specifically provided for by treaty, it is resolved:

"I:—That the four Powers having such postal agencies agree to their abandonment, subject to the following conditions: First, that an efficient Chinese postal service be maintained; second, that an assurance be given by the Chinese Government that they contemplate no change in the present postal administration as far as the status of the foreign Co-Director-General is concerned.

"II:—To enable China and the Powers concerned to make the necessary dispositions this arrangement shall come into force not later than (date blank). Pending the complete withdrawal of foreign postal agencies the four Powers concerned severally undertake to afford full facilities to the Chinese Customs authorities to examine all postal matter (except ordinary letters, whether registered or not, which upon external examination appear to contain written matter) passing through with a view to ascertaining whether they contain articles of dutiable contraband or otherwise contravening the Customs regulations and laws of China."

EXTRA-TERRITORIAL RIGHTS IN CHINA

A resolution was unanimously adopted by the Far Eastern Committee relative to the Extra-Territorial Question. It provides that the Powers concerned shall establish a Commission, to which each shall appoint a member, to enquire into the present practice of extra-territorial jurisdiction in China, and into the laws, the judicial system and methods of judicial administration, with a view to reporting findings of fact, with recommendations regarding the means to improve the existing conditions of administration of justice in China and to assist the efforts of the Chinese Government to effect such legislation and judicial reforms as will warrant the Powers in relinquishing progressively or otherwise their rights of extra-territoriality.

The Commission shall be constituted within three months after the adjournment of the Conference, and be instructed to submit its report and recommendations within a year after the Commission's first meeting. Each of the Powers shall be deemed free to accept or reject all or any portion of the recommendations, but in no case are any of the Powers to make acceptance directly or indirectly dependent on China's granting any special concession, favour, benefit, or immunity, whether political or economic.

An additional resolution provides that non-signatory Powers having extra-territorial rights in China may accede to the resolution in regard to extra-territoriality within three months after the adjournment of the Conference.

A further additional resolution expresses China's satisfaction with the sympathy of the Powers in regard to the abolition of extra-territoriality, and declares China's intention to appoint a Chinese member of the Extra-Territoriality Commission, it being understood that China is free to accept or reject any or all of the recommendations of the Commission. China is prepared to co-operate in the work of the Commission and in every way to facilitate the successful accomplishment of its task.

RADIO STATIONS IN CHINA

A report was submitted by the Sub-Committee on Drafting relating to radio stations for China which states that representatives of the nine Powers at the Conference decided that all radio stations in China, whether maintained under the provisions of the International Protocol of September, 1901, or, in fact maintained on the grounds of any of the foreign Legations in China, shall be limited in use to sending and receiving Government messages and shall not receive or send commercial, personal, or unofficial messages, including Press matter.

It is provided, however, that in case all other telegraphic communication is interrupted, then, upon official notification, accompanied by proof of such interruption, to the Chinese Ministry of Communications such stations may afford temporary facilities for messages excluded as before-mentioned until the Chinese Government notify the termination of the interruption.

All radio stations on Chinese territory operated by foreign Governments' subjects under treaties or concessions shall limit the messages sent or received by the terms of the treaty or concession under which the respective stations are maintained. Any radio station maintained without the authority of the Chinese Government shall be transferred to China to be operated under the direction of the Chinese Ministry of Communications, against compensation to the owners for the value of the installation, as soon as the Ministry is prepared to operate the same effectively for general public benefit. Should any question arise regarding radio stations in leased territories, the South Manchuria railway zone, or the French Concession in Shanghai they shall be regarded as matters for discussion between the Chinese Government and the Governments concerned. Owners or managers of all foreign radio stations shall confer with the Chinese Ministry of Communications for the purpose of seeking a common arrangement to avoid interference in the use of wave lengths by wireless stations in China, subject to such a general arrangement as may be made by the International Conference convened for revision of the rules established by the London International Radio Telegraph Convention of 1912.

TEXT OF THE NINE-POWER AGREEMENT

The following is the text of the two treaties regarding China approved on February 4th, 1922, by the Conference at Washington :—

The United States of America, Belgium, the British Empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal :

Desiring to adopt a policy designed to stabilize conditions in the Far East, to safeguard the rights and interests of China, and to promote intercourse between China and the other Powers upon the basis of equality of opportunity, have resolved to conclude a Treaty for that purpose and to that end have appointed as their respective plenipotentiaries (Here follow the names of the plenipotentiaries), who, having communicated to each other their full powers, found to be in good and due form, have agreed as follows :—

Article I.

The contracting Powers, other than China, agree :

1.—To respect the sovereignty, the independence, and the territorial and administrative integrity of China.

2.—To provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable Government.

3.—To use their influence for the purpose of effectually establishing and maintaining the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout the territory of China.

4.—To refrain from taking advantage of conditions in China in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of subjects or citizens of friendly States, and from countenancing action inimical to the security of such States.

Article II.

The contracting Powers agree not to enter into any treaty, agreement, arrangement or understanding, either with one another or individually or collectively, with any Power or Powers, which would infringe or impair the principles stated in Article I.

Article III.

With a view to apply more effectually the principles of the open door or equality of opportunity in China for the trade and industry of all nations, the contracting Powers, other than China, agree they will not seek nor support their respective nations in seeking:

(a) Any arrangement which might purport to establish in favour of their interests any general superiority of rights with respect to commercial or economic development in any designated region in China.

(b) Any such monopoly or preference as would deprive the nationals of any other Power of the right of undertaking any legitimate trade or industry in China, or of participating with the Chinese Government or with any local authority in any category of public enterprise, or which by reason of its scope, duration or geographical extent is calculated to frustrate the practical application of the principle of equal opportunity.

It is understood that the foregoing stipulations of this article are not to be so construed as to prohibit the acquisition of such properties or rights as may be necessary to the conduct of a particular commercial, industrial or financial undertaking or to the encouragement of invention and research.

China undertakes to be guided by the principles stated in the foregoing stipulations of this article in dealing with applications for economic rights and privileges from Governments and nationals of all foreign countries, whether parties to the present treaty or not.

Article IV.

The contracting Powers agree not to support any agreements by their respective nationals with each other designed to create spheres of influence or to provide for the enjoyment of mutually exclusive opportunities in designated parts of Chinese territory.

Article V.

China agrees that throughout the whole of the railways in China she will not exercise or permit unfair discriminations of any kind. In particular there shall be no discrimination whatever, direct or indirect, in respect of charges or of facilities on the ground of the nationality of passengers or the countries from which or to which they are proceeding, or the origin or ownership of goods or the country from which or to which they are consigned, or the nationality or ownership of the ship or other means of conveying such passengers or goods before or after their transport on the Chinese railways.

The contracting Powers, other than China, assume a corresponding obligation in respect of any of the aforesaid railways over which they or their nationals are in a position to exercise any control in virtue of any concession, special agreement or otherwise.

Article VI.

The contracting parties, other than China, agree fully to respect China's rights as a neutral in time of war to which China is not a party; and China declares that when she is a neutral she will observe the obligations of neutrality.

Article VII.

The contracting Powers agree that whenever a situation arises which, in the opinion of any one of them, involves the application of the stipulations of the present treaty, and renders desirable discussion of such application, there shall be full and frank communication between the contracting Powers concerned.

Article VIII.

Powers not signatory to the present Treaty which have governments recognised by the signatory Powers and which have treaty relations with China shall be invited to adhere to the present Treaty. To this end the Government of the United States will make the necessary communications to non-signatory Powers and will inform the contracting Powers of the replies received. Adherence by any Power shall become effective on receipt of notice thereof by the Government of the United States.

Article IX.

The present treaty shall be ratified by the contracting Powers in accordance with their respective constitutional methods, and shall take effect on the date of the deposit of all the ratifications, which shall take place at Washington as soon as possible. The Government of the United States will transmit to the other contracting Powers a certified copy of the proces verbal of the deposit of ratifications.

The present treaty, of which the English and French texts are both authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States, and duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the other contracting Powers.

In faith whereof the above-named plenipotentiaries have signed the present Treaty.

Done at the City of Washington, the sixth day of February, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-two.

THE BOARD OF REFERENCE

The following resolution was adopted as a supplement to the general Far Eastern Treaty:

The United States of America, Belgium, the British Empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal:

Desiring to provide a procedure for dealing with questions that may arise in connection with the execution of the provisions or Articles III. and V. of the Treaty to be signed at Washington on February 6th, 1922, with reference to their general policy, designed to stabilize conditions in the Far East, to safeguard the rights and interests of China, and to promote interest between China and the other Powers upon the basis of equality of opportunity;

Resolve, That there shall be established in China a Board of Reference to which any questions arising in connection with the execution of the aforesaid articles may be referred for investigation and report.

The special conference, provided in Article II. of the treaty to be signed at Washington on February 6th, 1922, with reference to the Chinese Customs Tariff shall formulate for the approval of the Powers concerned a detailed plan for the constitution of the Board.

TREATY ON THE CHINESE TARIFF

The treaty relative to the Chinese Tariff and cognate matters reads:—

The United States of America, Belgium, the British Empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal:

With a view to increasing the revenues of the Chinese Government have resolved to conclude a treaty relating to the revision of the Chinese Customs Tariff and cognate matters, and to that end have appointed as their plenipotentiaries (Here follows the names of the plenipotentiaries), who, having communicated to each other their full powers, found to be in good and due form, have agreed as follows:—

Article I.

The representatives of the contracting Powers having adopted, on the 4th day of February, 1922, in the City of Washington, a resolution, which is appended as an annex to this article, with respect to the revision of Chinese customs duties for the purpose of making such duties equivalent to an effective 5 per cent., ad valorem, in accordance with existing treaties concluded by China with other nations, the contracting Powers hereby confirm the said resolution and undertake to accept the tariff rates fixed as a result of such revision. The said tariff rates shall become effective as soon as possible, but not earlier than two months after publication thereof.

Annex

With a view to providing additional revenue to meet the needs of the Chinese Government, the Powers represented at this Conference, namely, the United States of America, Belgium, the British Empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal, agree:

That the Customs schedule of duties on imports into China, adopted by the Tariff Revision Commission at Shanghai on December 19th, 1918, shall forthwith be revised so that rates of duty shall be equivalent to 5 per cent. effective, as provided for in the several commercial treaties to which China is a party.

A Revision Commission shall meet at Shanghai at the earliest practicable date to effect this revision forthwith and on the general lines of the last revision.

This Commission shall be composed of representatives of the Powers above named and of representatives of any additional Powers, having governments at present recognized by the Powers represented at this Conference and who have treaties with China providing for a tariff on imports and exports not to exceed 5 per cent. ad valorem and who desire to participate therein.

The revision shall proceed as rapidly as possible with a view to its completion within four months from the date of the adoption of this resolution by the Conference on the Limitation of Armaments and Pacific and Far Eastern Questions.

The revised tariff shall become effective as soon as possible, but not earlier than two months after its publication by the Revision Commission.

The Government of the United States, as convener of the present Conference, is requested forthwith to communicate the terms of this resolution to the Governments of Powers not represented at this Conference but who participated in the revision of 1918 aforesaid.

Article II.

Immediate steps shall be taken through a special conference to prepare the way for the speedy abolition of likin and for the fulfilment of the other conditions laid down in Article VIII. of the treaty of September 5th, 1902, between Great Britain and China; in Article IV. and V. of the treaty of October 8th, 1903, between the United States and China; and in Article 1. of the supplementary treaty of October 8th, 1903, between Japan and China, with a view to levying the surtaxes provided for in these Articles.

The special Conference shall be composed of representatives of the signatory Powers, and of such other Powers as may desire to participate and may adhere to the present treaty, in accord with the provisions of Article VIII., in sufficient time to allow their representatives to take part. It shall meet in China within three months after the coming into force of the present treaty on a day and at a place to be designated by the Chinese Government.

ARTICLE III.

The special conference provided for in Article II. shall consider the interim provision to be applied prior to the abolition of likin and the fulfilment of the other conditions laid down in the articles of the treaties mentioned in Article II.; and it shall authorize the levying of a surtax on dutiable imports as from such date, for such purposes and subject to such conditions as it may determine.

The surtax shall be at a uniform rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum ad valorem, provided that in case of certain articles of luxury which, in the opinion of the special Conference, can bear a greater increase without unduly impeding trade, the total surtax may be ncreased, but may not exceed 5 per centum ad valorem.

ARTICLE IV.

Following the immediate revision of the Customs schedule of duties on imports into China mentioned in Article I., there shall be a further revision thereof, to take effect at the expiration of four years following the completion of the aforesaid immediate revision, in order to insure that the Customs duties shall correspond to the ad valorem rates fixed by the special Couference provided in Article II.

Following this further revision there shall be for the same purpose periodical revisions of the Customs schedule of duties of imports into China every seven years, in lieu of the decennial revision authorized by existing treaties with China.

In order to prevent delay, any revision made in pursuance of this Article shall be effected in accord with rules to be prescribed by the special Conference provided for in Article II.

ARTICLE V.

In all matters relating to Customs duties there shall be effective equality of treatment and of opportunity for all the contracting Powers.

ARTICLE VI.

The principle of uniformity in the rates of Customs duties levied at all the land and maritime frontiers of China is hereby recognised. The special Conference provided for in Article II. shall make arrangements to give practical effect to this principle, and it is authorised to make equitable adjustments in those cases in which a Customs privilege to be abolished was granted in return for some local economic advantage.

In the meantime, any increase in the rates of Customs duties resulting from tariff revision or any surtax hereafter imposed in pursuance of the present Treaty shall be levied at a uniform rate ad valorem at all land and maritime frontiers of China.

ARTICLE VII.

The charge for transit passes shall be at the rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum ad valorem until the arrangements provided for by Article II. come into force.

ARTICLE VIII.

Powers not signatory to the present Treaty, whose Governments are at present recognised by the signatory Powers and whose present treaties with China provide for a tariff on imports and exports not to exceed 5 per centum ad valorem, shall be invited to adhere to the present Treaty.

The Government of the United States undertakes to make the necessary communications for this purpose and to inform the Governments of the contracting Powers of the replies received. Adherence by any Power shall become effective on receipt of notice thereof by the Government of the United States.

ARTICLE IX.

The provisions of the present Treaty shall override all stipulations of treaties between China and the respective contracting Powers which are inconsistent therewith, other than stipulations according most-favoured-nation treatment.

ARTICLE X.

The present Treaty shall be ratified by the contracting Powers in accord with their respective constitutional methods and shall take effect on the date of the deposit of all the ratifications, which shall take place at Washington as soon as possible. The Government of the United States will transmit to the contracting Powers a certified copy of the proces verbal of the deposit of ratifications.

The present Treaty, of which the English and French texts are both authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States, and duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the other contracting Powers.

In faith whereof the above-named plenipotentiaries have signed the present Treaty.

Done at the City of Washington the sixth day of February, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-two.

GENERAL REGULATIONS UNDER WHICH BRITISH TRADE IS TO BE CONDUCTED IN SIAM

Art. I.—The master of any English ship coming to Bangkok to trade must, either before or after entering the river, as may be found convenient, report the arrival of his vessel at the Custom-house at Paknam, together with the number of his crew and guns, and the port from whence he comes. Upon anchoring his vessel at Paknam, he will deliver into the custody of the Custom-house officers all his guns and ammunition; and a Custom-house officer will then be appointed to the vessel, and will proceed in her to Bangkok.

Art. II.—A vessel passing Paknam without discharging her guns and ammunition as directed in the foregoing regulation will be sent back to Paknam to comply with its provisions, and will be fined eight hundred ticals for having so disobeyed. After delivery of her guns and ammunition she will be permitted to return to Bangkok to trade.

Art. III.—When a British vessel shall have cast anchor at Bangkok, the master, unless a Sunday should intervene, will within four and twenty hours after arrival proceed to the British Consulate, and deposit there his ship's papers, bills of lading, etc., together with a true manifest of his import cargo; and upon the Consuls reporting these particulars to the Custom-house permission to break bulk will at once be given by the latter.

For neglecting so to report his arrival or for presenting a false manifest, the master will subject himself, in each instance, to a penalty of four hundred ticals; but he will be allowed to correct, within twenty-four hours after delivery of it to the Consul, any mistake he may discover in his manifest, without incurring the above-mentioned penalty.

Art. IV.—A British vessel breaking bulk, and commencing to discharge, before due permission shall be obtained, or smuggling, either when in the river or outside the bar, shall be subject to the penalty of eight hundred ticals and confiscation of the goods so smuggled or discharged.

Art. V.—As soon as a British vessel shall have discharged her cargo and completed her outward lading, paid all her duties and delivered a true manifest of her outward cargo to the British Consul, a Siamese port-clearance shall be granted her on application from the Consul, who in the absence of any legal impediment to her departure, will then return to the master his ship's papers, and allow the vessel to leave. A Custom-house officer will accompany the vessel to Paknam; and on arriving there she will be inspected by the Custom-house officers of that station, and will receive from them the guns and ammunition previously delivered into their charge. The above regulations, numbered from 1 to 5, are obligatory under the Treaty concluded between Great Britain and Siam; those which follow, numbered from 6 to 14, are equally to be observed by masters of British vessels and their crews.

Art. VI.—Masters of British vessels, when reporting their arrival at Her Majesty's Consulate at the port of Bangkok, as directed by the fourth regulation above quoted, shall notify in writing the names of all passengers and persons not forming part of the registered crew.

Notice must likewise be given of the number and names of persons, who, as passengers or in any other capacity (seamen borne on the muster-roll excepted), intend to leave Siam in a British vessel.

Art. VII.—Seamen, lascars, and others belonging to British vessels in the port are strictly prohibited to wear side knives and other weapons while on shore.

Art. VIII.—Should any seaman or apprentice absent himself without leave, the master will report his absence, if such exceeds twenty-four hours, at the Consulate offices.

Art. IX.—Any British subject who entices a seaman or apprentice to desert, incurs, according to the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, paragraph 257, a penalty not exceeding ten pounds; or any such subject who wilfully harbours or secretes a person deserted from his ship incurs a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, if it be proved that he had knowledge of his being a deserter.

In default of the payment of such fines, the offender is to be imprisoned in the Consular gaol for any term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour.

Art. X.—All cases of death, and especially of sudden death, occurring on board of British vessels in the port of Bangkok must be immediately reported at the Consulate.

Art. XI.—The discharge of guns from vessels anchored in the port of Bangkok, without notice having been previously given, and permission obtained through H.M. Consul from the proper Siamese authority, is forbidden, under a penalty not exceeding ten pounds.

Art. XII.—It is strictly prohibited to shoot birds within the precincts of the Wats or Temples, either in Bangkok or elsewhere within the Siamese dominions, or to injure or damage any of the statues or figures, the trees or shrubs in such localities of Siamese worship; any British subject or seaman of a British vessel guilty of such an act renders himself liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, or in default thereof to an imprisonment in the Consular gaol for a period of not more than one month.

Art. XIII.—When a vessel under the British flag is ready to leave the port of Bangkok, the master will give notice at the Consulate office, and hoist a blue peter twenty-four hours before departure, which is to fly until she breaks anchorage.

Art. XIV.—Should any vessel take in or discharge cargo subsequent to the issue of the Siamese port clearance, as directed by the fifth regulation above quoted, the master, as in a case of smuggling, subjects himself to a penalty of 800 ticals (equal to £100), and goods so taken or discharged will be liable to confiscation.

Art. XV.—Every fine or penalty levied under these regulations is (if not paid in sterling money) at the rate of eight ticals Siamese currency for one pound.

TREATY BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND SIAM

Signed at Bangkok, March 10th, 1909

Ratifications Exchanged at London, July 9th, 1909

His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, and His Majesty the King of Siam, being desirous of settling various questions which have arisen affecting their respective dominions, have decided to conclude a Treaty, and have appointed for this purpose as their Plenipotentiaries:

His Majesty the King of Great Britain, Ralph Paget, Esq., his Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, etc.; His Majesty the King of Siam, His Royal Highness Prince Devawongse Varoprakar, Minister for Foreign Affairs, etc.; who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, and found them to be in good and due form, have agreed upon and concluded the following Articles:—

Art. I.—The Siamese Government transfers to the British Government all rights of suzerainty, protection, administration, and control whatsoever which they possess over the States of Kelantan, Trengganu, Kedah, Perlis, and adjacent islands. The frontiers of these territories are defined by the Boundary Protocol annexed hereto.

Art. II.—The transfer provided for in the preceding Article shall take place within thirty days after the ratification of this Treaty.

Art. III.—A mixed Commission, composed of Siamese and British officers, shall be appointed within six months after the date of ratification of this Treaty, and shall be charged with the delimitation of the new frontier. The work of the Commission shall be commenced as soon as the season permits, and shall be carried out in accordance with the Boundary Protocol annexed hereto.

Subjects of His Majesty the King of Siam residing within the territory described in Article I. who desire to preserve their Siamese nationality will, during the period of six months after the ratification of the present Treaty, be allowed to do so if they become domiciled in the Siamese dominions. His Britannic Majesty's Government undertake that they shall be at liberty to retain their immovable property within the territory described in Article I.

It is understood that in accordance with the usual custom where a change of suzerainty takes place any Concessions within the territories described in Article I. hereof to individuals or companies, granted by or with the approval of the Siamese Government, and recognized by them as still in force on the date of the signature of the Treaty, will be recognized by the Government of His Britannic Majesty.

Art. IV.—His Britannic Majesty's Government undertake that the Government of the Federated Malay States shall assume the indebtedness to the Siamese Government of the territories described in Article I.

Art. V.—The jurisdiction of the Siamese International Courts, established by Article VIII. of the Treaty of the 3rd September, 1883, shall, under the conditions defined in the Jurisdiction Protocol annexed hereto, be extended to all British subjects in Siam registered at the British Consulates before the date of the present Treaty.

This system shall come to an end and the jurisdiction of the International Courts shall be transferred to the ordinary Siamese Courts after the promulgation and the coming into force of the Siamese codes, namely, the Penal Code, the Civil and Commercial Codes, the Codes of Procedure, and the Law for organization of Courts.

All other British subjects in Siam shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the ordinary Siamese Courts under the conditions defined in the Jurisdiction Protocol.

Art. VI.—British subjects shall enjoy throughout the whole extent of Siam the rights and privileges enjoyed by the natives of the country, notably the right of property, the right of residence and travel.

They and their property shall be subject to all taxes and services, but these shall not be other or higher than the taxes and services which are or may be imposed by law on Siamese subjects. It is particularly understood that the limitation in the Agreement of the 20th September, 1900, by which the taxation of land shall not exceed that on similar land in Lower Burmah, is hereby removed.

British subjects in Siam shall be exempt from all military service, either in the army or navy, and from all forced loans or military exactions or contributions.

Art. VII.—The provisions of all Treaties, Agreements, and Conventions between Great Britain and Siam, not modified by the present Treaty, remain in full force.

Art. VIII.—The present Treaty shall be ratified within four months from its date.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Treaty and affixed their seals.

[Seal] (Signed) RALPH PAGET.

ANNEX 1

Boundary Protocol Annexed to the Treaty

The frontiers between the territories of His Majesty the King of Siam and the territory over which his suzerain rights have by the present Treaty been transferred to His Majesty the King of Great Britain and Ireland are as follows:—

Commencing from the most seaward point of the northern bank of the estuary of the Perlis River and thence north to the range of hills which is the watershed between the Perlis River on the one side and the Pujoh River on the other; then following the watershed formed by the said range of hills until it reaches the main watershed or dividing line between those rivers which flow into the Gulf of Siam on the one side and into the Indian Ocean on the other; following this main watershed so as to pass the sources of the Sungei Patani, Sungei Telubin, and Sungei Perak, to a point which is the source of the Sungei Pergau; then leaving the main watershed and going along the watershed separating the waters of the Sungei Pergau from the Sungei Telubin, to the hill called Bukit Jeli or the source of the main stream of the Sungei Golok. Thence the frontier follows the thalweg of the main stream of the Sungei Golok to the sea at a place called Kuala Tabar.

This line will leave the valleys of the Sungei Patani, Sungei Telubin, and Sungei Tanjung Mas and the valley on the left or west bank of the Golok to Siam and the whole valley of the Perak River and the valley on the right or east bank of the Golok to Great Britain.

Subjects of each of the parties may navigate the whole of the waters of the Sungei Golok and its affluents.

The island known as Pulo Langkawi, together with all the islets south of mid-channel between Terutau and Langkawi and all the islands south of Langkawi shall become British. Terutau and the islets to the north mid-channel shall remain to Siam.

With regard to the islands close to the west coast, those lying to the north of the parallel of latitude where the most seaward point of the north bank of the Perlis River touches the sea shall remain to Siam, and those lying to the south of that parallel shall become British.

All islands adjacent to the eastern States of Kelantan and Trengganu, south of a parallel of latitude drawn from the point where the Sungei Golok reaches the coast at a place called Kuala Tabar shall be transferred to Great Britain, and all islands to the north of that parallel shall remain to Siam.

A rough sketch of the boundary herein described is annexed hereto.

2. The above-described boundary shall be regarded as final, both by the Governments of His Britannic Majesty and that of Siam, and they mutually undertake that, so far as the boundary effects any alteration of the existing boundaries of any State or province, no claim for compensation on the ground of any such alteration made by any State or province so affected shall be entertained or supported by either.

3. It shall be the duty of the Boundary Commission, provided for in Article III of the Treaty of this date, to determine and eventually mark out the frontier above described.

If during the operations of delimitation it should appear desirable to depart from the frontier as laid down herein, such rectification shall not under any circumstance be made to the prejudice of the Siamese Government.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Protocol and affixed their seals.

ANNEX 2

Protocol concerning the Jurisdiction applicable in the Kingdom of Siam to British Subjects and annexed to the Treaty dated March 10, 1909.

Sec. 1.—International Courts shall be established at such places as may seem desirable in the interests of the good administration of justice; the selection of these places shall form the subject of an understanding between the British Minister at Bangkok and the Siamese Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Sec. 2.—The jurisdiction of the International Courts shall extend—

1. In civil matters: To all civil and commercial matters to which British subjects shall be parties.

2. In penal matters: To breaches of law of every kind, whether committed by British subjects or to their injury.

Sec. 3.—The right of evocation in the International Courts shall be exercised in accordance with the provisions of Article VIII. of the Treaty of the 3rd September, 1883.

The right of evocation shall cease to be exercised in all matters coming within the scope of codes or laws regularly promulgated as soon as the text of such codes or laws shall have been communicated to the British Legation in Bangkok. There shall be an understanding between the Ministry for Foreign Affairs and the British Legation at Bangkok for the disposal of cases pending at the time that the said codes and laws are communicated.

Sec. 4.—In all cases, whether in the International Courts or in the ordinary Siamese Courts in which a British subject is defendant or accused, a European legal adviser shall sit in the Court of First Instance.

In cases in which a British born or naturalized subject not of Asiatic descent may be a party, a European adviser shall sit as a Judge in the Court of First Instance, and where such British subject is defendant or accused the opinion of the adviser shall prevail.

A British subject who is in the position of defendant or accused in any case arising in the provinces may apply for a change of venue, and should the Court consider such change desirable the trial shall take place either at Bangkok or before the Judge in whose Court the case would be tried at Bangkok. Notice of any such application shall be given to the British Consular officer.

Sec. 5.—Article IX. of the Treaty of the 3rd September, 1883, is repealed.

Appeals against the decisions of the International Courts of First Instance shall be adjudged by the Siamese Court of Appeal at Bangkok. Notice of all such appeals shall be communicated to His Britannic Majesty's Consul, who shall have the right to give a written opinion upon the case to be annexed to the record.

The judgment on an appeal from either the International Courts or the ordinary Siamese Courts shall bear the signature of two European Judges.

Sec. 6.—An appeal on a question of law shall lie from the Court of Appeal at Bangkok to the Supreme or Dika Court.

Sec. 7.—No plea of want of jurisdiction based on the rules prescribed by the present Treaty shall be advanced in any Court after a defence on the main issue has been offered.

Sec. 8.—In order to prevent difficulties which may arise in future from the transfer of jurisdiction contemplated by the present Treaty and Protocol, it is agreed :—

(a) All cases in which action shall be taken subsequently to the date of the ratification of this Treaty shall be entered and decided in the competent International or Siamese Court, whether the cause of action arose before or after the date of ratification.

(b) All cases pending in His Britannic Majesty's Courts in Siam on the date of the ratification of this Treaty shall take their usual course in such Courts and in any Appeal Court until such cases have been finally disposed of, and the jurisdiction of His Britannic Majesty's Courts shall remain in full force for this purpose.

The execution of the judgment rendered in any such pending case shall be carried out by the International Courts.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Protocol and affixed their seals.

Done at Bangkok, in duplicate, the 10th day of March, 1909.

ANNEX 3

Mr. Paget to Prince Devawongse

M. le Ministre, March 10, 1909.

In view of the position of British possessions in the Malay Peninsula and of the contiguity of the Siamese Malay provinces with British-protected territory, His Majesty's Government are desirous of receiving an assurance that the Siamese Government will not permit any danger to arise to British interests through the use of any portion of the Siamese dominions in the peninsula for military or naval purposes by foreign Powers.

His Majesty's Government would therefore request that the Siamese Government shall not cede or lease, directly or indirectly, to any foreign Government any territory situated in the Malay Peninsula south of the southern boundary of the Monthon Rajaburi, or in any of the islands adjacent to the said territory; also that within the limits above mentioned a right to establish or lease any coaling station, to build or own any construction or repairing docks, or to occupy exclusively any harbours, the occupation of which would be likely to be prejudicial to British interests from a strategic point of view, shall not be granted to any foreign Government or Company.

Since this assurance is desired as a matter of political expediency only, the phrase "coaling station" would not be held to include such small deposits of coal as may be required for the purposes of the ordinary shipping engaged in the Malay Peninsula coasting trade.

Prince Devawongse to Mr. Paget

M. le Ministre, Foreign Office, Bangkok, March 10, 1909.

I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your note of this date, in which you express the desire of your Government that the Siamese Government shall not cede or lease, directly or indirectly, to any foreign Government any territory situated in the Malay Peninsula south of the southern boundary of the Monthon Rajaburi or in any of the islands adjacent to the said territory; also that within the limits above-mentioned a right to establish or lease any coaling station, to build or own any construction or repairing docks, or to occupy exclusively any harbours, the occupation of which would be likely to be prejudicial to British interests from a strategic point of view, shall not be granted to any foreign Government or company.

In reply, I beg to say that the Siamese Government gives its assurance to the above effect, taking note that the phrase "coaling station" shall not include such small deposits of coal as may be required for the purposes of the ordinary shipping engaged in the Malay Peninsula coasting trade.

(Signed) DEVAWONGSE VAROPRAKAR.

M. le Ministre, Foreign Office, Bangkok, March 10, 1909.

With reference to the provision contained in Article IV. of the Jurisdiction Protocol to the effect that in all cases in which a British subject is defendant or accused a European adviser shall sit in Court, I would express the hope, on behalf of His Majesty's Government, that His Britannic Majesty's Government will be prepared in due course to consider the question of a modification of or release from this guarantee when it shall be no longer needed; and, moreover, that in any negotiations in connection with such a modification or release the matter may be treated upon its merits alone, and not as a consideration for which some other return should be expected.

The Siamese Government appreciates that a Treaty like the one signed to-day marks an advance in the administration of justice in the kingdom. The conclusion of such a Treaty is in itself a sign of progress. It is the intention of the Siamese Government to maintain the high standard in the administration of justice which it has set before it, and towards which it has been working for some time.

In this connection I take pleasure in acknowledging the contribution which Mr. J. Stewart Black has made to this work.

I wish also to say that provision will be made for the treatment of European prisoners according to the standard usual for such prisoners in Burmah and the Straits Settlements.

(Signed) DEVAWONGSE VAROPRAKAR.

Mr. Paget to Prince Devawongse

M. le Ministre, March 10, 1909.

With reference to the guarantee contained in the first paragraph of Article IV. of the Jurisdiction Protocol, I have the honour to state that His Majesty's Government will be prepared in due course to consider the question of modification of or release from this guarantee when it shall no longer be needed. His Majesty's Government are also willing that in any negotiations in connection with such a modification or release the matter shall be treated upon its merits alone, and not as a consideration for which some other return shall be expected.

His Majesty's Government learn with much satisfaction that it is the intention of the Siamese Government to maintain the high standard in the administration of justice which it has set before it, and towards which it has been working for some time; and I may assure your Royal Highness that it will be the aim of His Majesty's Government in every manner to second the efforts of His Siamese Majesty's Government in this direction.

I wish also to say that the International Courts referred to in Section 1 of the Protocol on Jurisdiction annexed to the Treaty signed to-day need not necessarily be Courts specially organized for this purpose. Provincial ("Monthon") Courts or District ("Muang") Courts may constitute International Courts, according as British subjects may be established in greater or less number within the jurisdiction of those Courts. The fact that an ordinary Court is designated as an International Court will have as a consequence the introduction into that ordinary Court of all the provisions relating to International Courts secured by the Protocol on Jurisdiction.

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNITED KINGDOM AND SIAM RESPECTING THE RENDITION OF FUGITIVE CRIMINALS BETWEEN THE STATE OF NORTH BORNEO AND SIAM

SIGNED AT BANGKOK, SEPTEMBER 18TH, 1913

The Government of His Britannic Majesty and the Government of His Siamese Majesty, being desirous of regulating the rendition of fugitive criminals between the State of North Borneo under the protection of His Britannic Majesty and the territories of His Majesty the King of Siam, hereby agree as follows:—

Art. I.—The provisions of the Extradition Treaty between His Britannic Majesty and His Majesty the King of Siam, signed at Bangkok on the 4th day of March, 1911, shall be deemed to apply, so far as local circumstances permit, to the rendition of fugitive criminals between the territories of His Majesty the King of Siam and the State of North Borneo.

Art. II.—In pursuance of the provisions of Article 3 of the said Extradition Treaty there shall reciprocally be no obligation on the part of the State of North Borneo to surrender to Siam any person who is a subject of that State or a British subject.

GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE

DECLARATION SIGNED BY GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE RESPECTING SPHERES OF INFLUENCE

SIGNED AT LONDON, 15TH JANUARY, 1896

The undersigned, duly authorised by their respective Governments, have signed the following Declaration :—

I.—The Governments of Great Britain and France engage to one another that neither of them will, without the consent of the other, in any case, or under any pretext, advance their armed forces into the region which is comprised in the basins of the Petcha Bouri, Meiklong, Menam, and Bang Pa Kong (Petriou) rivers and their respective tributaries, together with the extent of coast from Muong Bang Tapan to Muong Pase, the basins of the rivers on which those two places are situated, and the basins of the other rivers, the estuaries of which are included in that coast; and including also the territory lying to the north of the basin of the Menam and situated between the Anglo-Siamese frontier, the Mekong River, and the Eastern watershed of the Me Ing. They further engage not to acquire within this region any special privilege or advantage which shall not be enjoyed in common by, or equally open to, Great Britain and France and their nationals and dependents. These stipulations, however, shall not be interpreted as derogating from the special clauses which, in virtue of the Treaty concluded on Oct. 3, 1893, between France and Siam, apply to a zone of 25 kilom. on the right bank of the Mekong and to the navigation of that river.

II.—Nothing in the foregoing clause shall hinder any action on which the two Powers may agree and which they shall think necessary in order to uphold the independence of the Kingdom of Siam. But they engage not to enter into any separate agreement permitting a third Power to take any action from which they are bound by the present declaration themselves to abstain.

III.—From the mouth of the Nam Huok northwards as far as the Chinese frontier the thalweg of the Mekong shall form the limit of the possessions or spheres of influence of Great Britain and France. It is agreed that the nationals and dependents of each of the two countries shall not exercise any jurisdiction or authority within the possessions or sphere of influence of the other.

The police of the islands in this part of the river, which are separated from the British shore by a branch of the river, shall, so long as they are thus separated, be entrusted to the French authorities. The fishery shall be open to the inhabitants of both banks.

IV.—The two Governments agree that all commercial and other privileges and advantages conceded in the two Chinese provinces of Yunnan and Szechuen either to Great Britain or France, in virtue of their respective Conventions with China of March 1, 1894, and June 20, 1895, and all privileges and advantages of any nature which may in the future be conceded in these two Chinese provinces, either to Great Britain or France, shall, as far as rests with them, be extended and rendered common to both Powers and to their nationals and dependents, and they engage to use their influence and good offices with the Chinese Government for this purpose.

THE FOREIGN JURISDICTION ACT, 1890

53 AND 54 VICTORIA, CHAPTER 37

AN ACT TO CONSOLIDATE THE FOREIGN JURISDICTION ACTS

[4th AUGUST, 1890]

WHEREAS by treaty, capitulation grant, usage, sufferance, and other lawful means, Her Majesty the Queen has jurisdiction within divers foreign countries, and it is expedient to consolidate the Acts relating to the exercise of Her Majesty's jurisdiction out of Her dominions:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Exercise of jurisdiction in foreign country.

1.—It is and shall be lawful for Her Majesty the Queen to hold, exercise, and enjoy any jurisdiction which Her Majesty now has or may at any time hereafter have within a foreign country in the same and as ample a manner as if Her Majesty had acquired that jurisdiction by the cession or conquest of territory.

Exercise of jurisdiction over British subjects in countries without regular governments.

2.—Where a foreign country is not subject to any government from whom Her Majesty the Queen might obtain jurisdiction in the manner recited by this Act, Her Majesty shall by virtue of this Act have jurisdiction over Her Majesty's subjects for the time being resident in or resorting to that country, and that jurisdiction shall be jurisdiction of Her Majesty in a foreign country within the meaning of the other provisions of this Act.

Validity of acts done in pursuance of jurisdiction.

3.—Every act and thing done in pursuance of any jurisdiction of Her Majesty in a foreign country shall be as valid as if it had been done according to the local law then in force in that country.

Evidence as to existence or extent of jurisdiction in foreign country.

4.—(1) If in any proceeding, civil or criminal, in a Court in Her Majesty's dominions or held under the authority of Her Majesty, any question arises as to the existence or extent of any jurisdiction of Her Majesty in a foreign country, a Secretary of State shall, on the application of the Court, send to the Court within a reasonable time his decision on the question, and his decision shall for the purposes of the proceeding be final.

(2) The Court shall send to the Secretary of State, in a document under the seal of the Court, or signed by a Judge of the Court, questions framed so as properly to raise the question, and sufficient answers to those questions shall be returned by the Secretary of State to the Court, and those answers shall, on production thereof, be conclusive evidence of the matters therein contained.

Power to extend enactments in First Schedule.

5.—(1) It shall be lawful for Her Majesty the Queen in Council, if she thinks fit, by Order to direct that all or any of the enactments described in the First Schedule to this Act, or any enactments for the time being in force amending or substituted for the same, shall extend, with or without any exceptions, adaptations, or modifications in the Order mentioned, to any foreign country in which for the time being Her Majesty has jurisdiction.

(2.) Thereupon those enactments shall, to the extent of that jurisdiction, operate as if that country were a British possession, and as if Her Majesty in Council were the Legislature of that possession.

Power to send persons charged with offences for trial to a British possession.

6.—(1) Where a person is charged with an offence cognizable by a British court in a foreign country, any person having authority derived from Her Majesty in that behalf may, by warrant, cause the person so charged to be sent for trial to any British possession for the time being appointed in that behalf by Order in Council, and upon the arrival of the person so charged in that British possession, such criminal court of that possession as is authorised in that behalf by Order in Council, or, if no court is so authorised, the supreme criminal court of that possession may cause him to be kept in safe and proper custody, and so soon as conveniently may be may inquire of, try, and determine the offence, and on conviction punish the offender according to the laws in force in that behalf within that possession in the same manner as if the offence had been committed within the jurisdiction of that criminal court.

Provided that—

(a) A person so charged may, before being so sent for trial, tender for examination to a British court in the foreign country where the offence is alleged to have been committed any competent witness whose evidence he deems material for his defence and whom he alleges himself unable to produce at the trial in the British possession:

(b) In such case the British court in the foreign country shall proceed in the examination and cross-examination of the witness as though he had been tendered at a trial before that court, and shall cause the evidence so taken to be reduced into writing, and shall transmit to the criminal court of the British possession by which the person charged is to be tried a copy of the evidence, certified as correct under the seal of the court before which the evidence was taken, or the signature of a judge of that court:

(c) Thereupon the court of the British possession before which the trial takes place shall allow so much of the evidence so taken as would have been admissible according to the law and practice of that court, had the witness been produced and examined at the trial, to be read and received as legal evidence at the trial:

(d) The court of the British possession shall admit and give effect to the law by which the alleged offender would have been tried by the British court in the foreign country in which his offence is alleged to have been committed, as far as that law relates to the criminality of the act alleged to have been committed, or the nature or degree of the offence, or the punishment thereof, if the law differs in those respects from the law in force in that British possession.

(2) Nothing in this section shall alter or repeal any law, statute, or usage by virtue of which any offence committed out of Her Majesty's dominions may, irrespectively of this Act, be inquired of, tried, determined and punished within Her Majesty's dominions, or any part thereof.

Provision as to place of punishment of persons convicted.

7. Where an offender convicted before a British court in a foreign country has been sentenced by that court to suffer death, penal servitude, imprisonment, or any other punishment, the sentence shall be carried into effect in such place as may be directed by Order in Council or be determined in accordance with directions given by Order in Council, and the conviction and sentence shall be of the same force in the place in which the sentence is so carried into effect as if the conviction had been made and the sentence passed by a competent court in that place.

Validity of acts done under Order in Council.

8. Where, by Order in Council made in pursuance of this Act, any British court in a foreign country is authorised to order the removal or deportation of any person from that country, that removal or deportation, and any detention for the purposes thereof, according to the provisions of the Order in Council, shall be as lawful as if the order of the court were to have effect wholly within that country.

Power to assign jurisdiction to British Courts in cases within Foreign Jurisdiction Act.

9. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty the Queen in Council, by Order, to assign to or confer on any court in any British possession, or held under the authority of Her Majesty, any jurisdiction, civil or criminal, original or appellate, which may lawfully by Order in Council be assigned to or conferred on any British court in any foreign country, and to make such provisions and regulations as to Her Majesty in Council seem meet respecting the exercise of the jurisdiction so assigned or conferred, and respecting the enforcement and execution of the judgments, decrees, orders, and sentences of any such court, and respecting appeals therefrom.

Power to amend Orders in Council.

10. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty the Queen in Council to revoke or vary any Order in Council made in pursuance of this Act.

Laying before Parliament, and effect of Orders in Council

11. Every Order in Council made in pursuance of this Act shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament forthwith after it is made, if Parliament be then in session, and if not, forthwith after the commencement of the then next session of Parliament, and shall have effect as if it were enacted in this Act.

In what cases Orders in Council void repugnancy.

12.—(1) If any Order in Council made in pursuance of this Act as respects any foreign country is in any respect repugnant to the provisions of any Act of Parliament extending to Her Majesty's subjects in that country, or repugnant to any order or regulation made under the authority of any such Act of Parliament, or having in that country the force and effect of any such Act, it shall be read subject to that Act, order, or regulation, and shall, to the extent of such repugnancy, but not otherwise, be void.

(2) An Order in Council made in pursuance of this Act shall not be, or be deemed to have been, void on the ground of repugnancy to the law of England unless it is repugnant to the provisions of some such Act of Parliament, order, or regulation as aforesaid.

Provisions for protection of persons acting under Foreign Jurisdiction Acts.

13.—(1) An action, suit, prosecution, or proceeding against any person for any act done in pursuance or execution or intended execution of this Act, or of any enactment repealed by this Act, or of any Order in Council made under this Act, or of any such jurisdiction of Her Majesty as is mentioned in this Act, or in respect of any alleged neglect or default in the execution of this Act, or of any such enactment, Order in Council, or jurisdiction as aforesaid, shall not lie or be instituted:

(a) in any court within Her Majesty's dominions, unless it is commenced within six months next after the act, neglect, or default complained of, or in case of a continuance of injury or damage within six months next after the ceasing thereof, or where the cause of action arose out of Her Majesty's dominions within six months after the parties to the action, suit, prosecution, or proceeding have been within the jurisdiction of the court in which the same is instituted; nor

(b) in any of Her Majesty's courts without Her Majesty's dominions unless the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of that court, and the action is commenced within six months next after the act, neglect or default complained of, or, in case of a continuance of injury, or damage, within six months next after the ceasing thereof.

(2)—In any such action, suit, or proceeding, tender of amends before the same was commenced may be pleaded in lieu of or in addition to any other plea. If the action, suit, or proceeding was commenced after such tender, or is proceeded with after payment into court of any money in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, and the plaintiff does not recover more than the sum tendered or paid, he shall not recover any costs incurred after such tender or payment, and the defendant shall be entitled to costs, to be taxed as between solicitor and client, as from the time of such tender or payment; but this provision shall not affect costs on any injunction in the action, suit, or proceeding.

Jurisdiction over ships in certain Eastern seas.

14.—It shall be lawful for Her Majesty the Queen in Council to make any law that may seem meet for the government of Her Majesty's subjects being in any vessel at a distance of not more than one hundred miles from the coast of China or of Japan, as fully and effectual as any such law might be made by Her Majesty in Council for the Government of Her Majesty's subjects being in China or in Japan.

Provision as to subjects of Indian Princes.

15.—Where any Order in Council made in pursuance of this Act extends to persons enjoying Her Majesty's protection, that expression shall include all subjects of the several Princes and States in India.

Definitions.

16.—In this Act,—

The expression "foreign country" means any country or place out of Her Majesty's dominions:

The expression "British court in a foreign country" means any British court having jurisdiction out of Her Majesty's dominions in pursuance of an Order in Council whether made under any Act or otherwise:

The expression "jurisdiction" includes power.

Power to repeal or vary Acts in Second Schedule.

17.—The Acts mentioned in the Second Schedule to this Act may be revoked or varied by Her Majesty by Order in Council.

Repeal.

18.—The Acts mentioned in the Third Schedule to this Act are hereby repealed to the extent in the third column of that schedule mentioned: Provided that,—

(1) Any Order in Council, commission, or instructions made or issued in pursuance of any enactment repealed by this Act, shall, if in force at the passing of this Act, continue in force, until altered or revoked by Her Majesty as if made in pursuance of this Act; and shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to have been made or issued under and in pursuance of this Act; and

(2) Any enactment, Order in Council, or document referring to any enactment repealed by this Act shall be construed to refer to the corresponding enactment of this Act.

Short title.

19.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890.

(2) The Acts whereof the short titles are given in the First Schedule to this Act may be cited by the respective short titles given in that schedule.

ORDERS IN COUNCIL

ORDER OF HIS MAJESTY THE KING IN COUNCIL FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF HIS MAJESTY'S SUBJECTS IN CHINA AND COREA

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE, THE 24TH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1904.

PRESENT:—

THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY IN COUNCIL.

LORD PRESIDENT. LORD WINDSOR.
MR. SECRETARY BRODRICK. MR. A. GRAHAM MURRAY.

WHEREAS by Treaty, grant, usage, sufferance, and other lawful means His Majesty the King has jurisdiction within the dominions of the Emperor of China and of the Emperor of Corea;

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by virtue and in exercise of the powers in this behalf by the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, or otherwise in His Majesty vested, is pleased by and with the advice of his Privy Council to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

I.—PRELIMINARY AND GENERAL.

Division of Order.

1. This Order is divided into parts, as follows:—

PARTS.	SUBJECT.	ARTICLES.
I.	Preliminary and General	1-6
II.	Constitution and Powers of Courts	7-34
III.	Criminal Matters	35-88
IV.	Civil Matters	89-117
V.	Procedure, Criminal and Civil	118-128
VI.	Mortgages and Bills of Sale	129-150
VII.	Foreign Subjects and Tribunals	151-154
VIII.	Regulations	155-159
IX.	Miscellaneous	160-171
	Schedule of Repealed Orders.

Limits of Order.

2. The limits of this Order are the dominions of the Emperor of China and of the Emperor of Corea, including the territorial waters of those dominions respectively; but, except as provided in this Order, the said limits do not include places within the limits of the Weihaiwei Order in Council, 1901.

3. In the construction of this Order the following words and expressions have the meanings hereby assigned to them, unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant thereto, that is to say:— Interpretation.

"Administration" means letters of administration, including the same with will annexed or granted for special or limited purposes or limited in duration.

"British ship" means a merchant-ship being a British ship within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, and includes any ship provided with sailing letters from the Governor of Hongkong, or from His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea.

"British possession" means any part of His Majesty's dominions exclusive of the United Kingdom.

"British subject" includes a British protected person, that is to say, a person who either (a) is a native of any Protectorate of His Majesty, and is for the time being in China or Corea; or (b) by virtue of Section 15 of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, or otherwise enjoys His Majesty's protection in China and Corea.

"China" means so much of the Empire of China as is within the limits of this Order.

"Consular district" means the district in and for which a Consular officer usually acts, or for which he may be authorized to act, for all or any of the purposes of this Order by authority of the Secretary of State.

"Consular officer" means a Consul-General, Consul, Vice-Consul Consular Agent, or Pro-Consul of His Majesty resident in China or Corea, including a person acting temporarily, with the approval of the Secretary of State, as or for a Consul-General, Consul, Vice-Consul, or Consular Agent of His Majesty so resident.

"Commissioned Consular officer" means a Consular officer holding a commission of Consul-General, Consul, or Vice-Consul from His Majesty, including a person acting temporarily, with the approval of the Secretary of State, or of His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea, as or for such a commissioned Consular officer.

"Consulate" and "Consular office" refer to the Consulate and office of a Consular officer.

"The Court," except when the reference is to a particular Court, means any Court established under this Order, subject, however, to the provisions of this Order with respect to powers and local jurisdictions.

"Foreigner" means a subject or citizen of a State in amity with His Majesty, including China and Corea.

"Judge," except where the context intends a reference to the Judge of the Supreme Court only, includes Assistant Judge, and, except where the context intends a reference in the Supreme Court only, includes the officer for the time being holding a Provincial Court.

"Legal practitioner" includes barrister-at-law, advocate, solicitor, Writer to the Signet, and any person possessing similar qualifications.

"Lunatic" means idiot or person of unsound mind.

"Master," with respect to any ship, includes every person (except a pilot) having command or charge of that ship.

"Minister" means His Majesty's Minister in China or in Corea, as the case may be, and includes Charge d'Affaires or other chief Diplomatic Representative.

"Month" means calendar month.

"Oath" and "affidavit," in the case of persons for the time being allowed by law to affirm or declare, instead of swearing, include affirmation and declaration, and the expression "swear," in the like case, includes affirm and declare.

"Offence" includes crime, and any act or omission punishable criminally in a summary way or otherwise.

"Person" includes Corporation.

"Prescribed" means prescribed by Regulations or Rules of Court.

"Prosecutor" means complainant or any person appointed or allowed by the Court to prosecute.

"Proved" means shown by evidence on oath, in the form of affidavit, or other form, to the satisfaction of the Court or Consular officer acting or having jurisdiction in the matter, and "proof" means the evidence adduced in that behalf.

"Rules of Court" means rules of Court made under the provisions of this Order.

"Secretary of State" means one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

"Ship" includes any vessel used in navigation, however propelled, with her tackle, furniture and apparel, and any boat or other craft.

"The Treasury" means the Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury.

"Treaty" includes any Convention, Agreement, or Arrangement made by or on behalf of His Majesty with any State or Government, whether the Government of China or of Corea is a party thereto or not.

"Will" means will, codicil, or other testamentary instrument.

Expressions used in any rules, regulations, or orders made under this Order shall, unless a contrary intention appears, have the same respective meanings as in this Order.

Rules of Construction

4.—(1) In this Order, words importing the plural or the singular may be construed as referring to one person or thing, or to more than one person or thing, and words importing the masculine as referring to the feminine (as the case may require).

(2) Where this Order confers any power or imposes any duty, then, unless a contrary intention appears, the power may be exercised and the duty shall be performed from time to time as occasion requires.

(3) Where this Order confers a power, or imposes a duty on, or with respect to, a holder of an office, as such, then, unless a contrary intention appears, the power may be exercised and the duty shall be performed by, or with respect to, the holder for the time being of the office or the person temporarily acting for the holder.

(4) Where this Order confers a power to make any rules, regulations, or orders, the power shall, unless a contrary intention appears, be construed as including a power exercisable in the like manner and subject to the like consent and conditions, if any, to rescind, revoke, vary, or amend the rules, regulations, or orders.

(5) This Article shall apply to the construction of any rules, regulations, or orders made under this Order, unless a contrary intention appears.

Extent of Jurisdiction.

5. The jurisdiction conferred by this Order extends to the persons and matters following, in so far as by Treaty, grant, usage, sufferance, or other lawful means, His Majesty has jurisdiction in relation to such matters and things, that is to say:—

(1) British subjects, as herein defined, within the limits of this Order.

(2) The property and all personal or proprietary rights and liabilities within the said limits of British subjects, whether such subjects are within the said limits or not.

(3) Foreigners in the cases and according to the conditions specified in this Order and not otherwise.

(4) Foreigners, with respect to whom any State, King, Chief, or Government, whose subjects, or under whose protection they are, has by any Treaty as herein defined or otherwise agreed with His Majesty for, or consents to, the exercise of power or authority by His Majesty.

(5) British ships with their boats, and the persons and property on board thereof, or belonging thereto, being within the limits of this Order.

Exercise of Jurisdiction.

6. All His Majesty's jurisdiction exercisable in China or Corea for the hearing and determination of criminal or civil matters, or for the maintenance of order, or for the control or administration of persons or property, or in relation thereto, shall be exercised under and according to the provisions of this Order, and not otherwise.

II.—Constitution and Powers of Courts.

Constitution of Supreme Court.

7.—(1) There shall be a Court styled "His Britannic Majesty's Supreme Court for China and Corea" (in this Order referred to as the Supreme Court, and comprised in the term "the Court").

(2) Subject to the provisions of this Order, there shall be a Judge, and as many Assistant Judges of the Supreme Court as may from time to time be required, who shall respectively be appointed by His Majesty by warrant under His Royal sign manual.

Every Judge shall be at the time of his appointment a member of the Bar of England, Scotland, or Ireland, of not less than seven years' standing.

(3) The Judges, or any two of them, shall sit together for the purposes described in this Order, and the Supreme Court so constituted is hereinafter in this Order referred to as the "Full Court."

(4) When the Full Court consists of not more than two Judges, and there is a difference of opinion, the opinion of the Judge, or, in his absence, the Senior Assistant Judge, shall prevail.

(5) Subject to any Rules of Court, the Judge shall make any such arrangements as he thinks fit for the distribution of the business of the Court.

(6) If the Chief Justice in office at the passing of this Order becomes the Judge of the Supreme Court under this Order, he shall retain the title of Chief Justice during his tenure of office.

Acting Judge

8. During a vacancy in the office of Judge, or in case of the illness or incapacity of the Judge, or of his absence from the district of the Consulate of Shanghai, the Secretary of State may appoint a fit person to act as Judge, but unless or until such appointment is made, the Assistant Judge or Senior Assistant Judge shall act as Judge.

An Acting Judge shall, during the continuance of his appointment, have all the power and authority of the Judge.

Acting Assistant Judge.

9. During a vacancy or temporary vacancy in the office of Assistant Judge, or in case of the absence, or illness, or other incapacity of an Assistant Judge, the Judge may, by writing under his hand and the seal of the Supreme Court, appoint any fit person, approved by the Secretary of State, or by His Majesty's Minister in China, to act as and for such Assistant Judge for the time therein mentioned or during the vacancy, as the case may be; but every such appointment shall be revocable, at pleasure, by the Judge, by writing under his hand and the seal of the Supreme Court, or by the Secretary of State.

The person so appointed shall, during the continuance of his appointment, have all the power and authority of an Assistant Judge.

Additional Assistant Judge.

10. The Secretary of State may appoint either a person qualified as provided in Article 7, or a Consular officer to act as an additional Assistant Judge, and any person so appointed shall, during the continuance of his appointment, have all the power and authority of an Assistant Judge.

Seal of Supreme Court.

11. The Supreme Court shall have a seal, bearing the style of the Court and such device as the Secretary of State approves, but the seal in use at the commencement of this Order shall continue to be used until a new seal is provided.

Officers of Supreme Court.

12.—(1) There shall be attached to the Supreme Court a Sheriff, a Crown Advocate, a Registrar, a Chief Clerk, a Marshal, and such other officers and clerks under such designations as the Secretary of State thinks fit.

(2) The Secretary of State, or His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea, as the case may be, may temporarily attach to the Supreme Court such persons, being Consular officers, as he thinks fit.

(3) Every officer, clerk, and other person thus attached shall discharge such duties in connection with the Court as the Judge may direct subject to any instructions of the Secretary of State.

Sheriff.

13. The Sheriff shall have all the powers and authorities of the Sheriff of a county in England, with all the privileges and immunities of the office, and shall be charged with the execution of all decrees, orders and sentences made and passed by the Supreme Court, on the requisition in that behalf of the Supreme Court.

He shall be entitled to such fees and costs as the Supreme Court may direct.

Registrar.

14. The Registrar shall be appointed by His Majesty.

He shall be either a member of the Bar of England, Scotland, or Ireland, or a Solicitor of the Supreme Court in England or Ireland, or a Writer to His Majesty's Signet, or a Solicitor in the Supreme Courts of Scotland.

He may also, with the approval of the Secretary of State, hold the office of Chief Clerk of the Supreme Court.

In case of the absence from Shanghai or of the illness of the Registrar, or during a vacancy in the office of Registrar, or during the employment of the Registrar in another capacity, or on emergency, the Judge may by writing under his hand and the seal of the Supreme Court, appoint any fit person to act as Registrar for the time therein mentioned, or until the appointment is revoked by the Judge or disapproved or revoked by the Secretary of State.

15. The Judge, each Assistant Judge, and the Registrar shall hold office during the pleasure of His Majesty.

Revocation of Appointments.

16. In case at any time His Majesty thinks fit by warrant under his Royal sign manual to revoke the warrant appointing any person to be Judge, Assistant Judge, or Registrar, or while there is a Judge, Assistant Judge, or Registrar in office, thinks fit by warrant under his Royal sign manual to appoint another person to be Judge, Assistant Judge, or Registrar (as the case may be), then, and in every such case, until the warrant of revocation or of new appointment is notified by His Majesty's Minister in China to the person holding office, all powers and authorities vested in that person shall continue and be deemed to have continued in as full force—and he shall continue, and be deemed to have continued, entitled to all the privileges and emoluments of the office as fully, and all things done by him shall be and be deemed to have been as valid in law as if such warrant of revocation or new appointment had not been made.

17. The Supreme Court shall ordinarily sit at Shanghai; but may, if it seems expedient, sit at any other place within the limits of this Order, and may at any time transfer its ordinary sittings to any such place as the Secretary of State approves. Under this Article the Judges may sit at the same time at different places, and each sitting shall be deemed to be a sitting of the Supreme Court. Sittings of Supreme Court.

18. The Judge or under his directions an Assistant Judge may visit, in a magisterial or judicial capacity, any place in China or Corea, and there inquire of, or hear and determine, any case, civil or criminal, and may examine any records or order documents in any Provincial Court, and give directions as to the keeping thereof. Visitation of Judges.

(ii) Provincial Courts.

19.—(1) Every commissioned Consular officer, with the exception of those at Shanghai and with such other exceptions (if any) as the Secretary of State thinks fit to make, shall for and in his Consular district hold and form a Court, in this Order referred to as a Provincial Court. Constitution of Provincial Court.

(2) Where His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea, as the case may be, appoints any person to be Acting Consul-General, Consul, or Vice-Consul at any port or place in China or Corea, which is for the time being open to foreign trade, and at which no commissioned Consular officer is resident, that person shall hold and form a Provincial Court for the district for which he is appointed to act.

(3) Every Provincial Court shall be styled "His Britannic Majesty's Court at Canton" (or as the case may be).

(4) Every Provincial Court may, with the approval of the Judge of the Supreme Court, appoint a competent person, or persons, to perform such duties and to exercise such powers in and for that Court as are by this Order and any Rules of Court imposed or conferred upon the Registrar and Marshal respectively, and any person so appointed shall perform such duties and exercise such powers accordingly.

(5) Every Provincial Court shall have a seal bearing its style and such device as the Secretary of State from time to time directs; but where such a seal is not provided, the seal of the Consular officer holding the Court may be used.

(iii) Jurisdiction of Courts.

20. The Supreme Court, and each Provincial Court, shall, in the exercise of every part of its jurisdiction, be a Court of Record. Courts of Record.

21. All His Majesty's jurisdiction, civil and criminal, including any jurisdiction by this Order conferred expressly on a Provincial Court, shall for and within the district of the Consulate of Shanghai be vested exclusively in the Supreme Court as its ordinary original jurisdiction. Jurisdiction of Supreme Court at Shanghai.

22. All His Majesty's jurisdiction, civil and criminal, not under this Order vested exclusively in the Supreme Court, shall to the extent and in the manner provided by this Order be vested in the Provincial Courts. Jurisdiction of Provincial Courts.

23. The Supreme Court shall have in all matters, civil and criminal, an original jurisdiction, concurrent with the jurisdiction of the several Provincial Courts, to be exercised subject and according to the provisions of this Order. Concurrent Jurisdiction of Supreme Court.

24.—(1) The Registrar of the Supreme Court shall, subject to any directions of the Judge, hold preliminary examinations, and shall hear and determine such criminal cases in that Court as are not, under this Order, required to be heard and determined on a charge. Jurisdiction of Registrar

(2) The Registrar shall also have authority to hear and determine such civil actions as may be assigned to him by the Judge, but actions which under this Order are required or directed to be heard with a jury or assessors shall not be so assigned.

(3) For the purposes of this Article the Registrar shall exercise all the powers and jurisdiction of a Provincial Court, and the provisions of this Order with respect to appeal and reserved case in criminal matters and to appeal in civil matters shall apply accordingly.

Case reported or removed to Supreme Court

25.—(1) Where any case, civil or criminal, commenced in a Provincial Court, appears to that Court to be beyond its jurisdiction, or to be one which for any other reason ought to be tried in the Supreme Court, the Provincial Court shall report the case to the Supreme Court for directions.

(2) The Supreme Court may of its own motion, or upon the report of a Provincial Court, or on the application of any party concerned, require any case, civil or criminal, pending in any Provincial Court to be transferred to, or tried in, the Supreme Court, or may direct in what Court and in what mode, subject to the provisions of this Order, any such case shall be tried.

Courts auxiliary to one another.

26. The Supreme Court and every Provincial Court shall be auxiliary to one another in all particulars relative to the administration of justice, civil or criminal.

Conciliation.

27. Every Judge and Officer of Courts established under this Order shall, as far as there is proper opportunity, promote reconciliation and encourage and facilitate the settlement in an amicable way and without recourse to litigation of matters in difference between British subjects, or between British subjects and foreigners in China or Corea.

Modes of Trial.

28. Subject to the provisions of this Order, criminal and civil cases may be tried as follows:—

(a) In the case of the Supreme Court, by the Court itself, or by the Court with a jury, or with assessors.

(b) In the case of a Provincial Court by the Court itself, or by the Court with assessors.

Process of Supreme Court of Hongkong.

29. Any of His Majesty's Courts in China or Corea may cause any summons, order, or judgment issuing from the Supreme Court of Hongkong, in any civil proceeding, and accompanied by a request in writing under the seal of that Court, to be served in China or Corea.

Immunity of Legation.

30.—(1) Notwithstanding anything in this Order, the Court shall not exercise any jurisdiction in any proceeding whatsoever over His Majesty's Minister, or over his official or other residences, or his official or other property.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in this Order, the Court shall not exercise, except with the consent of the Minister signified in writing to the Court, any jurisdiction in any proceeding over any person attached to or being a member of, or in the service of, the Legation. The consent of the Minister may be given, either specially with respect to any person, or generally with respect to any class of persons so attached.

(3) If in any case under this Order it appears to the Court that the attendance of the Minister, or of any person attached to or being a member of the Legation, or being in the service of the Legation, to give evidence before the Court is requisite in the interest of justice, the Court may address to the Minister a request in writing for such attendance.

(4) A person attending to give evidence before the Court shall not be compelled or allowed to give any evidence or produce any document, if, in the opinion of the Minister, signified by him personally or in writing to the Court, the giving or production thereof would be injurious to His Majesty's service.

Operation of Imperial Acts, &c.

31. Where, by virtue of any Imperial Act, or of this Order, or otherwise, any provisions of any Imperial Acts, or of any law of a British possession, or of any Orders in Council other than this Order, are applicable in China or Corea, or any forms, regulations, or procedure prescribed or established by or under any such Act, Law or Order, are made applicable for any purpose of this Order or any other order relating to China or Corea, such Acts, Laws, Orders, Forms, Regulations, or procedure may be construed or used with such alterations and adaptations not affecting the substance as may be necessary having regard to local circumstances, and anything required to be done by, to, or before any Court, Judge, officer, or authority may be done by, to, or before a Court, Judge, officer, or authority having the like or analogous functions, or by, to, or before any officer designated by the Secretary of State or by the Court (as the case may require) for that purpose; and the seal of the Supreme or Provincial Court (as the case may be) may be substituted for any other seal, and in case any difficulty occurs in the application it shall be lawful for a Secretary of State to direct by, to, or before whom and in what manner anything is to be done, and such Act, Law, Order, Form, Regulation, or Procedure shall be construed accordingly.

Where under any such Imperial Act, Law, or Order any publication is required to be made, as respects any judicial proceeding in any Gazette or otherwise, such publication shall in China or Corea be made in such newspaper or by such other mode as the Court shall think fit to direct.

Jurors and Assessors.

Jury.

32.—(1) Every male resident British subject—being of the age of 21 years upwards—having a competent knowledge of the English language—having or earning a gross income at such rate as may be fixed by Rules of Court—not having been attainted of treason or felony, or convicted of any crime that is infamous (unless he has obtained a free pardon) and not being under outlawry—shall be qualified to serve on a jury.

(2) All persons so qualified shall be liable so to serve, except the following persons, who shall nevertheless be competent to serve, that is to say:—

Persons in His Majesty's Diplomatic, Consular, or other Civil Service, in actual employment;

Officers, clerks, keepers of prisons, messengers, and other persons attached to or in the service of the Court;

Officers and others on full pay in His Majesty's navy or army, or in actual employment in the service of any Department connected therewith;

Persons holding appointments in the civil, naval, or military service of China or Corea;

Clergymen and other ministers of religion in the actual discharge of professional duties;

Legal practitioners in actual practice;

Physicians, surgeons, and apothecaries in actual practice;

Persons who are over 60 years of age or are disabled by mental or bodily infirmity.

(3) A jury shall consist of such number of jurors, not more than twelve nor less than five, as may be determined in accordance with Rules of Court; and in such Rules different provisions may be made with respect to the several places at which the Supreme Court may sit, regard being had to the number of available jurors and any other considerations

(4) In civil and in criminal cases the like challenges shall be allowed as in England—with this addition, that in civil cases each party may challenge three jurors peremptorily.

(5) A jury shall be required to give an unanimous verdict; provided that, with the consent of parties, the verdict of a majority may be taken in civil cases.

Assessors.

33.—(1) An Assessor shall be a competent and impartial British subject, of good repute, nominated and summoned by the Court for the purpose of acting as Assessor.

(2) In the Supreme Court there may be one, two, or three Assessors, as the Court thinks fit.

(3) In a Provincial Court there shall ordinarily be not fewer than two, and not more than four, Assessors. Where, however, by reason of local circumstances, the Court is able to obtain the presence of one Assessor only, the Court may, if it thinks fit, sit with one Assessor only: and where, for like reasons, the Court is not able to obtain the presence of an Assessor, the Court may, if it thinks fit, sit without an Assessor—the Court in every case, recording in the Minutes its reasons for sitting with one Assessor only or without an Assessor.

(4) An Assessor shall not have any voice in the decision of the Court in any case, civil or criminal; but an Assessor dissenting, in a civil case, from any decision of the Court, or, in a criminal case, from any decision of the Court or the conviction or the amount of punishment awarded, may record in the Minutes his dissent, and the grounds thereof, and shall be entitled to receive without payment a certified copy of the Minutes.

Penalty for non-attendance.

34.—(1) Any person failing to attend as juror or Assessor according to a summons shall be deemed guilty of a contempt of Court, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding £10, but a person shall not be liable to fine for non-attendance unless he is resident in the Consular district in which the Court sits.

(2) Any such fine shall not be levied until after the expiration of fourteen days. The proper officer of the Court shall forthwith give to the person fined notice in writing of the imposition of the fine, and require him within six days after receipt of the notice to file an affidavit excusing non-attendance (if he desire to do so). The Court shall consider the affidavit, and may, if it seems proper, remit or reduce the fine.

III.—Criminal Matters.

Application of criminal law of England.

35.—(1) Except as regards offences made or declared such by this or any other Order relating to China or Corea, or by any Rules or Regulations made under any Order;

Any act that would not by a Court of Justice having criminal jurisdiction in England be deemed an offence in England, shall not, in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction under this Order, be deemed an offence, or be the subject of any criminal proceeding under this Order.

(2) Subject to the provisions of this Order, criminal jurisdiction under this Order shall, as far as circumstances admit, be exercised on the principles of, and in conformity with, English law for the time being and with the powers vested in the Courts of Justice and Justices of the Peace in England, according to their respective jurisdiction and authority.

Local Jurisdiction in Criminal Matters.

Power to summon Offenders.

36. Every Court may cause to be summoned or arrested, and brought before it, any person subject to and being within the limits of its jurisdiction, and accused of having committed an offence cognizable under this Order, and may deal with the accused according to the jurisdiction of the Court and in conformity with the provisions of this Order.

37. For the purposes of criminal jurisdiction every offence and cause of complaint committed or arising within the limits of this Order shall be deemed to have been committed or to have arisen, either in the place where the same actually was committed or arose, or in any place where the person charged or complained of happens to be at the time of the institution or commencement of the charge or complaint. Place of offence for purposes of trial.

38. Where a person accused of an offence escapes or removes from the Consular district within which the offence was committed, and is found within another Consular district, the Court within whose district he is found may proceed in the case to trial and punishment, or to preliminary examination (as the case may require), in like manner as if the offence had been committed in its own district; or may, on the requisition or with the consent of the Court within whose district the offence was committed, send him in custody to that Court, or require him to give security for his surrender to that Court, there to be dealt with according to law. Escape and arrest in another district

Where any person is to be so sent in custody, a warrant shall be issued by the Court within whose district he is found, and that warrant shall be sufficient authority to any person to whom it is directed to receive and detain the person therein named, and to carry him to and deliver him up to the Court within whose district the offence was committed, according to the warrant.

39.—(1) In cases of murder or manslaughter if either the death, or the criminal act which wholly or partly caused the death, happened within the jurisdiction of a Court acting under this Order, that Court shall have the like jurisdiction over any British subject who is accused either as the principal offender, or as accessory before the fact to murder, or as accessory after the fact to murder or manslaughter, as if both the criminal act and the death had happened within that jurisdiction. Admiralty offences, &c.

(2) In the case of any offence committed on the high seas, or within the Admiralty jurisdiction, by any British subject on board a British ship, or on board a foreign ship to which he did not belong, the Court shall, subject to the provisions of this Order, have jurisdiction as if the offence had been committed within the jurisdiction of that Court. In cases tried under this Article no different sentence can be passed from the sentence which could be passed in England if the offence were tried there.

(3) The foregoing provisions of this Article shall be deemed to be adaptations, for the purposes of this Order and of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, of the following enactments, that is to say:—

The Admiralty Offences (Colonial) Act, 1849.

The Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, Part. XIII.

Apprehension and Custody of Accused Persons.

40.—(1) Where a person accused of an offence is arrested on a warrant issuing out of any Court, he shall be brought before the Court within forty-eight hours after the arrest, unless in any case circumstances unavoidably prevent his being brought before the Court within that time, which circumstances shall be recorded in the Minutes. Bringing accused before Court.

(2) In every case, he shall be brought before the Court as soon as circumstances reasonably admit, and the time and circumstances shall be recorded in the Minutes.

41.—(1) Where an accused person is in custody, he shall not be remanded at any time for more than seven days, unless circumstances Remand.

appear to the Court to make it necessary or proper that he should b remanded for a longer time, which circumstances, and the time of re mand, shall be recorded in the Minutes.

(2) In no case shall a remand be for more than fourteen days a one time, unless in case of illness of the accused or other case o necessity.

Detention of ship.

42. Where the Supreme Court or a Provincial Court issues a sum mons or warrant against any person on complaint of an offence committe on board of, or in relation to, a British ship, then, if it appears to th Court that the interests of public justice so require, the Court may issu a warrant or order for the detention of the ship, and may cause th ship to be detained accordingly, until the charge is heard and deter mined, and the order of the Court thereon is fully executed, or for suc shorter time as the Court thinks fit; and the Court shall have power t make all such orders as appears to it necessary or proper for carryin this provision into effect.

Execution of writs of Supreme Court.

43. Every Provincial Court shall execute any writ, order, or warran issuing from the Supreme Court, and may take security from any perso named therein for his appearance personally or by attorney, according t the writ, order, or warrant; or may cause such person to be taken i custody or otherwise to the Supreme Court or elsewhere in China o Corea, according to the writ, order, or warrant.

44.—(1) The Court may, in its discretion, admit to bail person accused of any of the following offences, namely :—

Any felony.

Riot.

Assault on any officer in the execution of his duty, or on an person acting in his aid.

Neglect or breach of duty by an officer.

But a person accused of treason or murder shall not be admitted t bail except by the Supreme Court.

(2) In all other cases the Court shall admit the accused to ba unless the Court, having regard to the circumstances, sees good reaso to the contrary, which reason shall be recorded in the Minutes.

(3) The Supreme Court may admit a person to bail, although Provincial Court has not thought fit to do so.

(4) The accused who is to be admitted to bail, either on remand o on or after trial ordered, shall produce such surety or sureties as, in th opinion of the Court, will be sufficient to insure his appearance as an when required, and shall with him or them enter into a recognizan accordingly.

Trial with Jury or Assessors.

Trial with jury or assessors.

45.—(1) Where the offence charged is treason or murder the ca must be tried on a charge before the Supreme Court with a jury.

(2) In each of the two following cases, namely :—

(i) Where the offence charged is rape, arson, housebreaking, ro bery with violence, piracy, forgery, or perjury; or

(ii) Where the offence charged is any other than as aforesaid, b it appears to the Court at any time before the trial, the opini of the Court being recorded in the Minutes, that the offen charged, if proved, would not be adequately punished by i prisonment for three months with hard labour, or by a fine £20, or both such imprisonment and fine—

The offence shall be tried on a charge with a jury or assess (according to the provisions of this Order applicable to the Court); b may, with the consent of the accused, be tried without assessors or ju

In the Supreme Court, when the accused does not so consent, the charge shall be tried with a jury, unless the Court is of opinion that a jury cannot be obtained.

(3) The Supreme Court may, for any special reason, direct that any case shall be tried with assessors or a jury, and a Provincial Court may, for any special reason, direct that any case shall be tried with assessors. In each such case the special reason shall be recorded in the Minutes.

Speedy trial.

46.—(1) Where an accused person is ordered to be tried before a Court with a jury or with assessors, he shall be tried as soon after the making of the order as circumstances reasonably admit.

(2) As long notice of the time of trial as circumstances reasonably admit shall be given to him in writing, under the seal of the Court, which notice, and the time thereof, shall be recorded in the Minutes.

Report of sentences.

47.—(1) The Supreme Court shall, when required by the Secretary of State, send to him a report of the sentence of the Court in any case tried before that Court with a jury or assessors, with a copy of the Minutes and notes of evidence, and with any observations which the Court thinks fit to make.

(2) Every Provincial Court shall, in accordance with Rules of Court, send to the Supreme Court a report of the sentence of the Court in every case tried by the Court with assessors, with such Minutes, notes of evidence, and other documents as such Rules may direct, and with any observations which the Court thinks fit to make.

Summary Trial.

Summary trial.

48. Where the complaint discloses an offence which is not required or directed to be heard on a charge, the accused may be tried summarily on the complaint: Provided that where an offence is tried summarily no greater punishment shall be awarded than imprisonment for three months or a fine of £20, or both.

Preliminary Examination.

Preliminary Examination.

49.—(1) Where the accused is before the Court, and it appears to the Court that the complaint discloses an offence—

(a) Which ought to be tried in or reported to another Court; or the Court shall proceed to make a preliminary examination in the prescribed manner.

(b) Which ought to be tried before the same Court with a jury or assessors;

(2) On the conclusion of the preliminary examination, the Court shall bind by recognizance the prosecutor and every witness to appear at the trial to prosecute, or to prosecute and give evidence, or to give evidence (as the case may be), and if the case is to be tried in or reported to another Court, shall forthwith send the depositions, with a minute of other evidence (if any) and a report, to the Court before which the trial is to take place.

Trial before Court in His Majesty's Dominions.

50. Where a British subject is accused of an offence the cognizance whereof appertains to any Court established under this Order, and it is expedient that the offence be inquired of, tried, determined, and punished in a British possession, the accused may (under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, Section 6) be sent for trial to Hongkong or to Burma; and the Supreme Court of Hongkong and the Sessions Court at Mandalay shall respectively be the authorized Courts for the purposes of that enactment.

The Court may, where it appears so expedient, by warrant under the hand of a Judge and the seal of the Court, cause the accused to be sent for trial to Hongkong or to Mandalay accordingly.

The warrant shall be sufficient authority to any person to whom it is directed to receive and detain the person therein named, and to carry him to and deliver him up at Hongkong or Mandalay, according to the warrant.

Where any person is to be so sent to Hongkong or to Burma, the Court before which he is accused shall take the preliminary examination, and if it seems necessary and proper shall bind over such of the proper witnesses as are British subjects in their own recognizances to appear and give evidence on the trial.

Refusal to enter into recognizance.

51.—(1) If a British subject, having appeared as prosecutor or witness at a preliminary examination, refuses to enter into a recognizance to appear at the trial to prosecute or give evidence, the Court may send him to prison, there to remain until after the trial, unless in the meantime he enters into a recognizance.

(2) But if afterwards, from want of sufficient evidence or other cause, the accused is discharged, the Court shall order that the person imprisoned for so refusing be also discharged.

(3) Where the prosecutor or witness is not a British subject, the Court may require him either to enter into a recognizance or to give other security for his attendance at the trial, and if he fails to do so may in its discretion dismiss the charge.

Expenses of witnesses, jurors, &c.

52. Subject to Rules of Court made under this Order, the Court may order payment of allowances in respect of their reasonable expenses to any complainant or witness attending before the Court on the trial of any criminal case by a jury or with assessors, and also to jurors, assessors, interpreters, medical practitioners, or other persons employed in or in connection with criminal cases.

Charges.

Trial on a charge.

53.—(1) The charge upon which an accused person is tried shall state the offence charged, with such particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence, and the person (if any) against whom or the thing (if any) in respect of which it was committed, as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

(2) The fact that a charge is made is equivalent to a statement that every legal condition required by law to constitute the offence charged was fulfilled in the particular case.

(3) Where the nature of the case is such that the particulars above mentioned do not give such sufficient notice as aforesaid, the charge shall also contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will give such sufficient notice.

(4) For the purposes of the application of any Statute law, a charge framed under the provisions of this Order shall be deemed to be an indictment.

Separate charges for separate offences.

54. For every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately except in the cases following, that is to say:—

(a) Where a person is accused of more offences than one of the same kind committed within the space of twelve months from the first to the last of such offences, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for any number of them not exceeding three.

(b) If in one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction more offences than one are committed by the same person, he may be charged with and tried at one trial for every such offence.

(c) If the acts alleged constitute an offence falling within two or more definitions or descriptions of offences in any lawor laws the accused may be charged with and tried at one trial for each of such offences.

(d) If several acts constitute several offences, and also, when combined, a different offence, the accused may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, the offence constituted by such acts when combined, or one or more of the several offences, but in the latter case shall not be punished with more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of those offences.

(e) If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, the accused may be charged with having committed all or any of such offences, and any number of such charges may be tried at once; or he may be charged in the alternative with having committed some one of the offences; and if it appears in evidence that he has committed a different offence for which he might have been charged, he may be convicted of that offence, although not charged with it.

Trial of co-defendants.

55. When more persons than one are accused of the same offence or of different offences committed in the same transaction, or when one is accused of committing an offence and another of abetting or attempting to commit that offence, they may be charged and tried together or separately, as the Court thinks fit.

Alteration of charges.

56.—(1) Any Court, if sitting with a jury or assessors, may alter any charge at any time before the verdict of the jury is returned or the opinions of the assessors are expressed; if sitting without jury or assessors, at any time before judgment is pronounced.

(2) Every such alteration shall be read and explained to the accused.

(3) If the altered charge is such that proceeding with the trial immediately is likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused or the prosecutor, the Court may either direct a new trial or adjourn the trial for such period as may be necessary.

Errors and variances.

57.—(1) No error or omission in stating either the offence or the particulars shall be regarded at any stage of the case as material, unless the accused was misled by such error or omission.

(2) When the facts alleged in certain particulars are proved and constitute an offence, and the remaining particulars are not proved, the accused may be convicted of the offence constituted by the facts proved, although not charged with it.

(3) When a person is charged with an offence, and the evidence proves either the commission of a minor offence or an attempt to commit the offence charged, he may be convicted of the minor offence or of the attempt.

Charge of previous conviction.

58.—(1) If the accused has been previously convicted of any offence, and it is intended to prove such conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court is competent to award, the fact, date, and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge.

(2) If such statement is omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.

(3) The part of the charge stating the previous convictions shall not be read out in Court, nor shall the accused be asked whether he has been previously convicted, as alleged in the charge, unless and until he has either pleaded guilty to, or been convicted of, the subsequent offence.

(4) If he pleads guilty to, or is convicted of, the subsequent offence he shall then be asked whether he has been previously convicted a alleged in the charge.

(5) If he answers that he has been so previously convicted, the Court may proceed to pass sentence on him accordingly, but, if he denies that he has been so previously convicted, or refuses to, or does not, answer such question, the Court shall then inquire concerning such previous conviction, and in such case (where the trial is by jury) it shall not be necessary to swear the jurors again.

Punishments.

Limitation to powers of Courts.

59. The powers of the Courts with respect to punishments are limited as follows:—

(1) The Supreme Court may award in respect of an offence any punishment which may in respect of a similar offence be awarded in England: provided that (a) imprisonment with hard labour shall be substituted for penal servitude, and (b) the Supreme Court shall not award a fine exceeding £500; or, in case of a continuing offence, in addition to imprisonment or fine, or both, a fine exceeding £1 for each day during which the offence continues after conviction.

(2) A Provincial Court may award imprisonment, not exceeding twelve months, with or without hard labour, and with or without a fine not exceeding £100; or a fine not exceeding £100, without imprisonment; or in case of a continuing offence, in addition to imprisonment or fine, or both, a fine not exceeding 10*s*. for each day during which the offence continues after conviction.

(3) But nothing in this Article shall be deemed to empower any Court to award for any offence any punishment not authorized by law in relation to that offence.

Offences against this Order.

60.—(1) If any person is guilty of an offence against this Order not distinguished as a grave offence against this Order, he is liable:—

(i) To a fine not exceeding £5, without any imprisonment; or

(ii) To imprisonment not exceeding one month, without fine; or

(iii) To imprisonment not exceeding fourteen days, with a fine not exceeding 50*s*.

(2) Imprisonment under this Article is without hard labour.

Grave offence against this Order.

61.—(1) If any person is guilty of an offence against this Order, distinguished as a grave offence against this Order, he is liable:—

(i) To a fine not exceeding £10, without imprisonment; or

(ii) To imprisonment not exceeding two months, without fine; or

(iii) To imprisonment not exceeding one month, with a fine not exceeding £5.

(2) Imprisonment under this Article is, in the discretion of the Court, with or without hard labour.

62.—(1) The Court may, if it thinks fit, order a person convicted of an assault to pay to the person assaulted by way of damages any sum not exceeding £10.

(2) Damages so ordered to be paid may be either in addition to or in lieu of a fine, and shall be recoverable in like manner as a fine.

(3) Payment of such damages shall be a defence to an action for the assault.

63.—(1) The Court may, if it thinks fit, order a person convicted before it to pay all or part of the expenses of his prosecution, or of his imprisonment or other punishment or of both, the amount being specified in the order.

(2) Where it appears to the Court that the charge is malicious, or frivolous and vexatious, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order the complainant to pay all or part of the expenses of the prosecution, the amount being specified in the order.

(3) In these respective cases the Court may, if it thinks fit, order that the whole or such portion as the Court thinks fit of the expenses so paid be paid over to the complainant or to the accused (as the case may be).

(4) In all cases the reasons of the Court for making any such order shall be recorded in the Minutes.

Punishment of death.

64. Where any person is sentenced by the Supreme Court to suffer the punishment of death, the Judge shall forthwith send a report of the sentence, with a copy of the Minutes of Proceedings and notes of evidence in the case, and with any observations he thinks fit, to His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea as the case may be.

The sentence shall not be carried into execution without the direction of His Majesty's Minister in writing under his hand.

If His Majesty's Minister does not direct that the sentence of death be carried into execution, he shall direct what punishment in lieu of the punishment of death is to be inflicted on the person convicted, and the person convicted shall be liable to be so punished accordingly.

Prisons and punishments.

65.—(1) The Judge of the Supreme Court may by general order, approved by the Secretary of State, prescribe the manner in which and the prisons in China or Corea at which punishments passed by any Court or otherwise awarded under this Order are to be carried into execution.

(2) The warrant of any Court shall be sufficient authority to any person to whom it is directed to receive and detain the person therein named in any prison so prescribed.

(3) For the purposes of this Article "China" includes places within the limits of the Weihaiwei Order in Council, 1901.

Imprisonment in His Majesty's Dominions.

66.—(1) Where an offender is sentenced to imprisonment, and the Supreme Court thinks it expedient that the sentence be carried into effect within His Majesty's dominions, and the offender is accordingly, under Section 7 of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, sent for imprisonment to a place in His Majesty's dominions, the place shall be either Hongkong, or a place in some other part of His Majesty's dominions, the Government whereof consents that offenders may be sent thither under this Article.

(2) The Supreme Court may, by warrant under the hand of a Judge and the seal of the Court, cause the offender to be sent to Hongkong, or other such place as aforesaid, in order that the sentence may be there carried into effect accordingly.

(3) The warrant shall be sufficient authority to any person to whom it is directed to receive and detain the person therein named, and to carry him to and deliver him up at the place named, according to the warrant.

Mitigation of punishments.

67.—(1) A Judge of the Supreme Court may, if he thinks fit, report to the Secretary of State or to the Minister in China or in Corea, as the case may be, recommending a mitigation or remission of any punishment awarded by any Court, and thereupon the punishment may be mitigated or remitted by the Secretary of State or Minister.

(2) Nothing in this Order shall affect His Majesty's prerogative of pardon.

Inquests.

Inquests.

68.—(1) The Court shall have and discharge all the powers and duties appertaining to the office of Coroner in England, in relation to deaths of British subjects happening in the district of the Court.

(2) The Court may also exercise the said powers in relation to deaths of any persons having happened at sea on board British ships arriving in the district, and to deaths of British subjects having happened at sea on board foreign ships so arriving.

(3) The jurisdiction of the Court under this Article shall be exercised subject to the following provisions:—

(a) Where a British subject is charged with causing the death, the Court may, without holding an inquest, proceed forthwith with the preliminary examination.

(b) Where a British subject is not charged with causing the death, the Court shall, without any jury, hold an inquest, taking the depositions of those who know the facts. If, during or after the inquest, a British subject is so charged, the depositions shall be read over in the presence of the witnesses and of the accused, who shall be entitled to cross-examine each witness, and the procedure shall be as in other cases of preliminary examination. If after the inquest the Court does not see fit to cause any person to be charged, the Court shall certify its opinion of the cause of the death. When the inquest is held by a Provincial Court, the certificate and the depositions shall be sent forthwith to the Supreme Court, and that Court may give any directions which may seem proper in the circumstances.

(4) In this Article the expression "the Court" includes the Registrar of the Supreme Court.

Statutory or other Offences

Patents and trade-marks.

69. Any act which, if done in the United Kingdom, or in a British possession, would be an offence against any of the following Statutes of the Imperial Parliament or Orders in Council, that is to say:—

The Merchandize Marks Act, 1887;

The Patents, Designs and Trade-marks Act, 1883 to 1888;

Any Act, Statute, or Order in Council for the time being in force relating to copyright, or to inventions, designs, or trade-marks;

Any Statute amending, or substituted for, any of the above-mentioned Statutes;

Shall, if done by a British subject in China or Corea, be punishable as a grave offence against this Order, whether such act is done in relation to any property or right of a British subject, or of a foreigner or native, or otherwise howsoever;

Provided—

(1) That a copy of any such Statute or Order in Council shall be published in the public office of the Consulates at Shanghai and Seoul, and shall be there open for inspection by any person at all reasonable times; and a person shall not be punished under this Article for anything done before the expiration of one month after such publication, unless the person offending is proved to have had express notice of the Statute or Order in Council.

(2) That a prosecution by or on behalf of a prosecutor who is not a British subject shall not be entertained unless the Court is satisfied that effectual provision exists for the punishment in Consular or other Courts in China or Corea of similar acts committed by the subjects of the State or Power of which such prosecutor is a subject, in relation to, or affecting the interests of, British subjects.

Smuggling.

70.—(1) If a British subject—

(i) Smuggles, or attempts to smuggle, out of China or Corea any goods on exportation whereof a duty is payable to the Chinese or Corean Government;

(ii) Imports or exports, or attempts to import or export, into or out of China or Corea, any goods, intending and attempting to evade payment of duty payable thereon to the Chinese or Corean Government;

(iii) Imports or exports, or attempts to import or export, into or out of China or Corea any goods the importation or exportation whereof, into or out of China or Corea, is prohibited by law;

(iv) Without a proper licence, sells, or attempts to sell, or offers for sale, in China or Corea, any goods whereof the Chinese or Corean Government has by law a monopoly;

In each of the four cases aforesaid he shall be guilty of an offence against this Order, and on conviction shall be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months, and with or without a fine not exceeding £100, or to a fine not exceeding £100 without imprisonment.

(2) Where a person is charged with such an offence as in this Article is mentioned, the Court may seize the goods in relation to which the alleged offence was committed, and may hold the same until after the hearing of the charge.

(3) If a person so charged is convicted, then those goods, whether they have been so seized or not, shall be forfeited to His Majesty the King, and the Court shall dispose of them, subject to any general or special directions of the Secretary of State as the Court thinks fit.

Levying war, etc.

71.—(1) If any British subject, without His Majesty's authority, proof whereof shall lie on the party accused, does any of the following things, that is to say:—

(a) Levies war or takes any part in any operation of war against, or aids or abets any person in carrying on war, insurrection, or rebellion against the Government of China or of Corea; or,

(b) Takes part in any operation of war in the service of the Government of China or of Corea against any persons engaged in carrying on war, insurrection, or rebellion against those respective Governments he shall be guilty of an offence against this Order, and, on conviction thereof, shall be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years, and with or without a fine not exceeding £500, or to a fine not exceeding £500 without imprisonment.

(2) In addition to any such punishment every conviction under the provisions of this Article shall of itself, and without further proceedings, make the person convicted liable to deportation, and the Court may order him to be deported from China or Corea in manner provided by this Order.

(3) Where a person accused of an offence against this Article is brought before a Provincial Court, that Court shall report the case to the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court shall thereupon direct in what mode and where the case shall be heard and determined, and the case shall be heard and determined accordingly.

Piracy.

72. Any British subject being in China or Corea may be proceeded against, tried, and punished under this Order for piracy wherever committed.

If a person accused of piracy is brought before a Provincial Court, that Court shall report the case to the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court shall thereupon give such directions as it may think fit with respect to the trial.

Violation of Treaties.

73. If any British subject in China or in Corea violates or fails to observe any stipulation of any Treaty between His Majesty, his predecessors, heirs, or successors, and the Emperor of China or of Corea for the time being in force, in respect of the violation whereof any penalty is stipulated for in the Treaty, he shall be deemed guilty of an offence against the Treaty, and on conviction thereof under this Order shall be liable to the penalty stipulated in the Treaty.

International Regulations.

74.—(1) Where, by agreement among the Diplomatic or Consular representatives in China and Corea of foreign States, or some of them, in conjunction with the Chinese or Corean authorities, Sanitary, or Police, or Port, or Game, or other Regulations are established, and the same, as far as they affect British subjects, are approved by the Secretary of State, the Court may, subject and according to the provisions of this Order, entertain any complaint made against a British subject for a breach of those Regulations, and may enforce payment of any fine incurred by that subject or person in respect of that breach, in like manner, as nearly as may be, as if that breach were by this Order declared to be an offence against this Order.

(2) In any such case the fine recovered shall, notwithstanding anything in this Order, be disposed of and applied in manner provided by those Regulations.

Seditious conduct.

75. Every person subject to the criminal jurisdiction of the Court who prints, publishes, or offers for sale any printed or written newspaper or other publication containing matter calculated to excite tumult or disorder, or to excite enmity between His Majesty's subjects, and the Government of China or Corea, as the case may be, or between that Government and its subjects, shall be guilty of a grave offence against this Order, and may, in addition to, or in lieu of, any other punishment, be ordered to give security for good behaviour, and in default thereof, or on a further conviction for the like offence, he may be ordered to be deported.

An offence against this Article shall not be tried except by the Supreme Court.

Offences against religions.

76.—(1) If a British subject—

(i) Publicly derides, mocks, or insults any religion established or observed within China or Corea; or

(ii) Publicly offers insult to any religious service, feast, or ceremony established or kept in any part of those dominions, or to any place of worship, tomb, or sanctuary belonging to any religion established or observed within those dominions, or to the ministers or professors thereof; or

(iii) Publicly and wilfully commits any act tending to bring any religion established or observed within those dominions, or its ceremonies, mode of worship, or observances, into hatred, ridicule, or contempt, and thereby to provoke a breach of the public peace;

he shall be guilty of an offence, and on conviction thereof, liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without a fine not exceeding £50, or to a fine alone not exceeding £50.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in this Order, every charge under this Article shall be heard and determined by the Court alone, without jury or assessors, and any Provincial Court shall have power to impose the punishment aforesaid.

(3) Consular officers shall take such precautionary measures as seem to them proper and expedient for the prevention of such offences.

Contempt of Court.

77.—(1) If any person, subject to the criminal jurisdiction of a Court, does any of the following things, namely:—

(a) Wilfully, by act or threat, obstructs an officer of, or person executing any process of, the Court in the performance of his duty; or

(b) Within or close to the room or place where the Court is sitting wilfully misbehaves in a violent, threatening, or disrespectful manner, to the disturbance of the Court, or to the intimidation of suitors or others resorting thereto; or

(c) Wilfully insults any member of the Court, or any assessor or juror, or any person acting as clerk or officer of the Court, during his sitting or attendance in Court, or in his going to or returning from Court; or

(d) Does any act in relation to the Supreme Court or a Provincial Court or a matter pending therein, which, if done in relation to the High Court in England, would be punishable as a contempt of that Court—

he shall be guilty of a grave offence against this Order;

Provided that the Court, if it thinks fit, instead of directing proceedings as for an offence against this Order, may order the offender to be apprehended forthwith, with or without warrant, and on inquiry and consideration, and after the hearing of any defence which such person may offer, without further process or trial, may adjudge him to be punished with a fine not exceeding £10, or with imprisonment not exceeding twenty-four hours, at the discretion of the Court.

(2) A Minute shall be made and kept of every such case of punishment, recording the facts of the offence, and the extent of the punishment. In the case of a Provincial Court, a copy of the Minute shall be forthwith sent to the Supreme Court.

(3) Nothing herein shall interfere with the power of the Court to remove or exclude persons who interrupt or obstruct the proceedings of the Court.

Negligence officers.

78.—(1) If an officer of the Court employed to execute an order loses by neglect or omission the opportunity of executing it, then, on complaint of the person aggrieved, and proof of the fact alleged, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order the officer to pay the damages sustained by the person complaining, or part thereof.

(2) The order shall be enforced as an order directing payment of money.

Extortion.

79.—(1) If a clerk or officer of the Court, acting under pretence of the process or authority of the Court, is charged with extortion, or with not paying over money duly levied, or with other misconduct, the Court, if it thinks fit, may inquire into the charge in a summary way, and may for that purpose summon and enforce the attendance of all necessary persons, as in an action, and may make such order for the repayment of any money extorted, or for the payment over of any money levied, and for the payment of such damages and costs, as the Court thinks fit.

(2) The Court may also, if it thinks fit, on the same inquiry, impose on the clerk or officer such fine, not exceeding £5 for each offence, as the Court thinks fit.

(3) A clerk or officer against whom an order has been made or who has been acquitted under this Article shall not be liable to an action in respect of the same matter; and any such action, if begun, shall be stayed by the Court in such manner and on such terms as the Court thinks fit.

Offence within 100 miles of the coast.

80.—(1) Where a British subject, being in China or Corea, is charged with having committed, either before or after the commencement of this Order, any offence within a British ship at a distance of not more than 100 miles from the coast of China, or within a Chinese or Corean ship at such a distance as aforesaid, or within a ship not lawfully entitled to claim the protection of the flag of any State, at such a distance as aforesaid, any of His Majesty's Courts in China or Corea within the jurisdiction whereof he is found may cause him to be apprehended and brought before it, and may take the preliminary examination and commit him for trial.

(2) If the Court before which the accused is brought is a Provincial Court, the Court shall report to the Supreme Court the pendency of the case.

The Supreme Court shall thereupon direct in what mode and where the case shall be heard and determined, and (notwithstanding anything in this Order) the case shall be so heard and determined accordingly.

(3) The provisions of this Order relative to offences, and proceedings in criminal matters, shall in all respects, as far as may be, extend and apply to every such case, in like manner as if the offence had been committed in China or Corea.

Jurisdiction of Supreme Court at Hongkong.

81. Where a British subject, being in Hongkong, is charged with having committed, either before or after the commencement of this Order, any crime or offence within any British, Chinese, or Corean ship at such a distance as aforesaid, the Supreme Court at Hongkong shall have and may exercise authority and jurisdiction with respect to the crime or offence as fully as if it had been committed in Hongkong.

Apprehension of deserters.

82. His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea, any Judge of the Supreme Court, any Consular officer in China or Corea, or the Governor of Hongkong, on receiving satisfactory information that any soldier, sailor, marine, or other person belonging to any of His Majesty's military or naval forces, has deserted therefrom, and has concealed himself in any British ship at such a distance as aforesaid, may, in pursuance of such information, issue his warrant for a search after and apprehension of such deserter, and on being satisfied on investigation that any person so apprehended is such a deserter, shall cause him to be, with all convenient speed, taken and delivered over to the nearest military station of His Majesty's forces, or to the officer in command of a ship of war of His Majesty serving in China or Corea, as the case may require.

Deportation.

Deportation.

83.—(1) Where it is proved that there is reasonable ground to apprehend that a British subject is about to commit a breach of the public peace—or that the acts or conduct of a British subject are or is likely to produce or excite to a breach of the public peace—the Court may, if it thinks fit, cause him to be brought before it, and require him to give security to the satisfaction of the Court to keep the peace, or for his future good behaviour, as the case may require.

(2) Where a British subject is convicted of an offence before the Court, the Court may, if it thinks fit, require him to give security to the satisfaction of the Court for his future good behaviour, and for that purpose may (if need be) cause him to be brought before the Court.

(3) In either of the foregoing cases, if the person required to give security fails to do so, the Court may order that he be deported from China or Corea to such place as the Court directs.

(4) The place shall be a place in some part (if any) of His Majesty's dominions to which the person belongs, or the Government of which consents to the reception of persons deported under this Order.

(5) A Provincial Court shall report to the Supreme Court any order of deportation made by it and the grounds thereof, before the order is executed. The Supreme Court may reverse the order, or may confirm it with or without variation, and in case of confirmation, shall direct it to be carried into effect.

(6) The person to be deported shall be detained in custody until a it opportunity for his deportation occurs.

(7) He shall, as soon as is practicable, and in the case of a person onvicted, either after execution of the sentence or while it is in course of xecution, be embarked in custody under the warrant of the Supreme Court n board one of His Majesty's ships of war, or, if there is no such ship vailable, then on board any British or other fit ship bound to the place f deportation.

(8) The warrant shall be sufficient authority to the commander or naster of the ship to receive and detain the person therein named, and o carry him to and deliver him up at the place named according to the arrant.

(9) The Court may order the person to be deported to pay all or ny part of the expenses of his deportation. Subject thereto, the xpenses of deportation shall be defrayed in such manner as the Secretary f State, with the concurrence of the Treasury, may direct.

(10) The Supreme Court shall forthwith report to the Secretary of tate any order of deportation made or confirmed by it and the grounds hereof, and shall also inform His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea s the case may require.

(11) If any person deported under this or any former Order returns o China or Corea without permission in writing of the Secretary of tate (which permission the Secretary of State may give) he shall be eemed guilty of a grave offence against this Order; and he shall also be iable to be forthwith again deported.

Dealing with deported persons at Hongkong.

84. Where any person is deported to Hongkong, he shall on his rrival there be delivered, with the warrant under which he is deported, nto the custody of the Chief Magistrate of Police of Hongkong, who, on eceipt of the person deported, with the warrant, shall detain him and hall forthwith report the case to the Governor of Hongkong, who shall ither by warrant (if the circumstances of the case appear to him to nake it expedient) cause the person so deported to be taken to England, nd in the meantime to be detained in custody (so that the period of uch detention do not exceed three months), or else shall discharge him rom custody.

Appeal and Reserved Case.

Appeal and reserved case.

85.—(1) Where a person is convicted of any offence before any Court—

(a) If he considers the conviction erroneous in law, then, on his application, within the prescribed time (unless it appears merely frivolous, when it may be refused); or he Judge shall state a case, setting out the facts and the grounds of the onviction, and the question of law, and send or deliver it to the Registrar of the Supreme Court.

(b) If the Judge thinks fit to reserve for consideration of the full Supreme Court any question of law arising on the trial;

Procedure case stated.

86.—(1) Where a case is stated under the last preceding Article, he Court, before whom the trial was had, shall, as it thinks fit, either postpone judgment on the conviction, or respite execution of the judgment, and either commit the person convicted to prison, or take security or him to appear and receive judgment, or to deliver himself for xecution of the judgment (as the case may require) at an appointed ime and place.

(2) The full Supreme Court, sitting without a jury or assessors, shall hear and determine the matter, and thereupon shall reverse, affirm, or amend the judgment given, or set it aside, and order an entry to be made in the Minutes that in the judgment of the Supreme Court the person ought not to have been convicted, or order judgment to be given at a subsequent sitting of the Provincial Court, or order a new trial, or make such other order as the Supreme Court thinks just, and shall also give all necessary and proper consequential directions.

(3) The judgment of the full Court shall be delivered in open Court, after the public hearing of any argument offered on behalf of the prosecutor or of the person convicted.

(4) Before delivering judgment, the full Court may, if necessary, cause the case to be amended by the Provincial Court.

(5) The full Court shall not annul a conviction or sentence, or vary a sentence, or order a new trial on the ground—

(a) Of any objection which, if stated during the trial, might, in the opinion of the Supreme Court, have been properly met by amendment at the trial; or

(b) Of any error in the summoning of assessors; or

(c) Of any person having served as assessor who was not qualified; or

(d) Of any objection to any person as assessor which might have been raised before or at the trial; or

(e) Of any informality in the swearing of any witness; or

(f) Of any error or omission in the charge, or any informality in procedure which, in the opinion of the Supreme Court, did not affect the substance of the case or subject the convicted person to any undue prejudice.

Appeal to Privy Council.

87. There shall be no appeal in a criminal case to His Majesty the King in Council from a decision of the Supreme Court, except by special leave of His Majesty in Council.

Fugitive Offenders.

Fugitive offenders.

88. The Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, and the Colonial Prisoners Removal Act, 1884, shall apply to China and Corea, as if those places were a British possession and part of His Majesty's dominions.

Subject as follows:—

(a) His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea, as the case may require, is hereby substituted for the Governor or Government of a British possession; and

(b) The Supreme Court is hereby substituted for a Superior Court of a British possession.

(c) The Supreme Court and each Provincial Court is substituted for a Magistrate of any part of His Majesty's dominions.

(d) For the purposes of Part II. of the said Act of 1881, and of this Article in relation thereto, China, Corea, Weihaiwei and Hongkong shall be deemed to be one group of British possessions.

IV.—Civil Matters.

General provision to civil jurisdiction.

89. Subject to the provisions of this Order, the civil jurisdiction of every Court acting under this Order shall, as far as circumstances admit, be exercised on the principles of, and in conformity with, English law for the time being in force.

Procedure.

All proceedings to be taken by action.

90.—(1) Every civil proceeding in the Court shall be taken by action, and not otherwise, and shall be designated an action.

(2) For the purposes of any statutory enactment or other provision applicable under this Order to any civil proceeding in the Court, an action under this Order shall comprise and be equivalent to a suit, cause, or petition, or to any civil proceeding, howsoever required by any such enactment or provision to be instituted or carried on.

Commencement of action.

91.—(1) Every action shall commence by a summons issued from the Court, on the application of the plaintiff, and served on the defendant (in this Order referred to as an original summons); but notwithstanding this provision, proceedings may be taken in and applications may be made to the Court in particular classes of cases, in such manner as may be prescribed by Rules of Court, or, where such manner is not so prescribed, in such manner as like proceedings and applications are taken and made in England.

Trial by jury in Supreme Court.

92.—(1) Subject to the provisions of this Order, every action in the Supreme Court which involves the amount or value of £150 or upwards shall, on the demand of either party in writing, filed in the Court seven days before the day appointed for the hearing, be heard with a jury.

(2) Any other suit may, on the suggestion of any party, at any stage, be heard with a jury, if the Court thinks fit.

(3) Any suit may be heard with a jury if the Court, of its own motion, at any stage, thinks fit.

Trial by assessors.

93.—(1) The Supreme Court may, if it thinks fit, hear any action with assessors.

(2) A Provincial Court shall (subject to the provisions of this Order) hear with assessors every action which involves the amount or value of £150 or upwards.

(3) In all other cases a Provincial Court may, as it thinks fit, hear the action either with or without assessors.

Special case

94.—(1) After the issue of a summons by any Court, the decision of that Court may be given upon a special case submitted to the Court by the parties.

(2) Any decision of a Provincial Court may be given subject to a case to be stated by, or under the direction of, that Court for the opinion or direction of the Supreme Court.

Costs.

95. Subject to the provisions of this Order and the Rules of Court, the costs of and incident to all proceedings in the Court shall be in the discretion of the Court, provided that if the action is tried with a jury the costs shall follow the event, unless the Court shall for good cause (to be entered in the Minutes) otherwise order.

Arbitration.

Arbitration

96.—(1) Any agreement in writing between any British subjects or between British subjects and foreigners to submit present or future differences to arbitration, whether an Arbitrator is named therein or not, may be filed in the Court by any party thereto, and, unless a contrary intention is expressed therein, shall be irrevocable, and shall have the same effect as an order of the Court.

(2) Every such agreement is in this Order referred to as a submission.

(3) If any action is commenced in respect of any matter covered by a submission, the Court, on the application of any party to the action, may by order stay the action.

Reference of actions to special Referees.

97.—(1) In any action—

(a) If all parties consent, or

(b) If the matters in dispute consist wholly or partly of matters of account, or require for their determination prolonged examination of documents or any scientific or local examination:

the Court may at any time refer the whole action, or any question or issue arising therein, for inquiry and report, to the Registrar or any special Referee.

(2) The report of the Registrar or special Referee may be adopted wholly or partially by the Court, and if so adopted may be enforced as a judgment of the Court.

(3) The Court may also in any case, with the consent of both parties to an action, or of any parties between whom any questions in the action arise (such consent being signified by a submission) refer the action or the portions referred to in the submission to arbitration, in such manner and upon such terms as it shall think reasonable or just.

(4) In all cases of reference to a Registrar, special Referee, or Arbitrator, under any order of the Court, the Registrar, special Referee, or Arbitrator shall be deemed to be an officer of the Court, and shall have such powers and authority, and shall conduct the reference or arbitration in such manner as may be prescribed by any Rules of Court, and subject thereto as the Court may direct.

Enforcement of submission or award.

98. Subject to Rules of Court, the Court shall have authority to enforce any submission, or any award made thereunder, and to control and regulate the proceedings before and after the award, in such manner and on such terms as the Court thinks fit.

Bankruptcy.

Bankruptcy.

99. Each Court shall, as far as circumstances admit, have, for and within its own district, with respect to the following classes of persons being either resident in China or Corea, or carrying on business there, namely, resident British subjects and their debtors and creditors, being British subjects, or foreigners submitting to the jurisdiction of the Court, all such jurisdiction in bankruptcy as for the time being belongs to the High Court and the County Courts in England.

Admiralty.

Admiralty jurisdiction.

100.—(1) The Supreme Court shall have Admiralty jurisdiction for and within the limits of this Order, and over vessels and persons coming within the same.

(2) The following enactments of the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890, that is to say, Section 2, Sub-sections (2) to (4); Sections 5 and 6; Section 16, Sub-section (3); shall apply to the Supreme Court as if that Court were a Colonial Court of Admiralty, and as if China and Corea were a British possession; and for the purpose of this application the expressions "judgment" and "appeal" shall in the enactments so applied have the same respective meanings as are assigned thereto in Section 15 of the said Act.

Matrimonial.

Matrimonial jurisdiction.

101. The Supreme Court shall, as far as circumstances admit, have for and within China and Corea, with respect to British subjects, all such jurisdiction in matrimonial causes except the jurisdiction relative to dissolution or nullity or jactitation of marriage, as for the time being belongs to the High Court in England.

Lunacy.

Lunacy jurisdiction.

102.—(1) The Supreme Court shall, as far as circumstances admit, have for and within China and Corea, in relation to British subjects, all such jurisdiction relative to the custody and management of the persons and estates of lunatics, as for the time being belongs to the Lord Chancellor or other Judge or Judges in England intrusted by virtue of His Majesty's sign manual with the care and commitment of the custody of the persons and estates of lunatics, and also such jurisdiction as may be exercised in England by a judicial authority under the provisions of the Lunacy Act, 1890, or any Act amending the same.

(2) A Provincial Court shall, as far as circumstances permit, have in relation to British subjects, such jurisdiction relative to the custody and management of the persons and estates of lunatics as for the time being may be prescribed by Rules of Court, and until such Rules are made, and so far as such Rules do not apply, as may be exercised in England by a judicial authority and by the Masters in Lunacy under the provisions of the Lunacy Act, 1890, or any Act amending the same.

(3) In any such case the Provincial Court may, of its own motion, or on the application of any person interested, take or authorise such steps as to the Court may seem necessary or expedient for the p erson and property of any person appearing to the Court to be a lunatic. and may from time to time revoke, or vary, or supplement any order or proceeding taken in the matter.

(4) Subject to the provisions of this Article and to any Rules of Court, a Provincial Court shall not proceed in any such matter except under and according to the directions of the Supreme Court.

(5) Sections 5 to 7 of the Lunatics Removal (India) Act, 1851 (14 and 15 Vict., cap. 81), shall apply to China and Corea, with the substitution of "the Supreme Court" for "the Supreme Court of Judicature at any of the Presidencies of India." Provided that the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court under those sections may be exercised in and for Corea by the Provincial Court at Seoul.

Probate and Administration.

Real property to devolve as personal estate.

103. All real or immovable property situate in China or Corea, and belonging at the time of his death to any British subject dying after the commencement of this Order, shall be deemed to be personal estate, and the devolution thereof, in case of intestacy, shall be regulated according to the law of England for the time being relating to personal estate.

Jurisdiction of Courts.

104.—(1) The Supreme Court shall, as far as circumstances admit, have, for and within China and Corea, with respect to the wills and the property in China and Corea of deceased British subjects, all such jurisdiction as for the time being belongs to the High Court in England.

(2) A Provincial Court shall have power to grant probate or letters of administration where there is no contention respecting the right to the grant.

(3) Probate or administration granted by a Court under this Order shall have effect over all the property of the deceased within China or Corea, and shall effectually discharge persons dealing with an executor or administrator thereunder, notwithstanding that any defect afterwards appears in the grant.

Enactment applied.

105. Section 51 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, and any enactment for the time being in force amending or substituted for the same, are hereby extended to China and Corea with the adaptation following, namely:—

The Supreme Court is hereby substituted for a Court of Probate in a Colony.

Sealing of British or Colonial probate, &c.

106.—(1) Where a Court of Probate in the United Kingdom or in any British Possession to which the Colonial Probates Act, 1892, for the time being extends, has granted probate or letters of administration or confirmation in respect of the estate of a deceased person, the probate letters or confirmation so granted may, on being produced to, and a copy thereof deposited with, the Supreme Court, be sealed with the seal of that Court, and thereupon shall be of the like force and effect and have the same operation as if granted by that Court.

(2) Provided that the Supreme Court shall, before sealing any probate letters or confirmation under this section, be satisfied either that all probate or estate duty has been paid in respect of so much of the estate, situated in China or Corea as is liable to such duty, or that security has been given in a sum sufficient to cover the property (if any) in China or Corea, and may require such evidence, if any, as it thinks fit as to the domicile of the deceased person.

(3) The Supreme Court may, also, if it thinks fit, on the application of any creditor, require before sealing that adequate security be given for the payment of debts due from the estate to creditors residing in China or Corea.

(4) For the purposes of this Article, a duplicate of any probate, letters of administration, or confirmation sealed with the seal of the Court granting the same, or a copy thereof certified as correct by or under the authority of the Court granting the same, shall have the same effect as the original.

Custody of property of intestate.

107.—(1) Where a British subject dies in China or Corea, or elsewhere, intestate, then, until administration is granted, his property in China or Corea shall be vested in the Judge of the Supreme Court.

(2) The Court within whose jurisdiction any property of the deceased is situated shall, where the circumstances of the case appear to the Court so to require, forthwith on his death, or as soon after as may be, take possession of his property within the particular jurisdiction, or put any such property under the seal of the Court (in either case if the nature of the property or other circumstances so require, making an inventory), and so keep it until it can be dealt with according to law.

Executor failing to obtain probate.

108. If any person named executor in the will of the deceased takes possession of and administers or otherwise deals with any part of the property of the deceased, and does not obtain probate within one month after the death, or after the termination of any suit or dispute respecting probate or administration, he shall be guilty of an offence and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding £50.

Administering estate without authority.

109. If any person, other than the person named administrator or an executor or an officer of the Court, takes possession of and administers or otherwise deals with any part of the property of a deceased British subject, whether resident or not, he shall be deemed guilty of a contempt of Court, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding £50.

Death or failure of executor.

110. Where a person appointed executor in a will survives the testator, but either dies without having taken probate, or, having been called on by the Court to take probate, does not appear, his right in respect of the executorship wholly ceases: and without further renunciation the representation to the testator and administration of his property shall go and may be committed as if that person had not been appointed executor.

Testamentary papers to be deposited in Court.

111.—(1) Where a British subject dies in China or Corea, any other such subject having in his possession, or under his control, any paper or writing of the deceased, being, or purporting to be testamentary, shall forthwith bring the original to the Court within whose particular jurisdiction the death happens, and deposit it there.

If any person fails to do so for fourteen days after having knowledge of the death of the deceased, he shall be guilty of an offence and liable to a fine uot exceeding £50.

(2) Where it is proved that any paper of the deceased, being or purporting to be testamentary, is in the possession or under the control of a British subject, the Court may, whether a suit or proceeding respecting probate or administration is pending or not, order him to produce the paper and bring it into Court.

(3) Where it appears to the Court that there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person has knowledge of any paper being, or purporting to be, testamentary (although it is not shown that the paper is in his possession or under his control), the Court may, whether a suit or proceeding for probate or administration is pending or not, order that he be examined respecting it before the Court or elsewhere, and that he do attend for that purpose, and after examination order that he do produce the paper and deposit it in Court.

Administration of small estates.

112. Where it appears to the Court that the value of the property or estate of a deceased person does not exceed £50, the Court may, without any probate or letters of administration, or other formal proceeding, pay thereout any debts or charges, and pay, remit, or deliver any surplus to such persons, subject to such conditions (if any) as the Court thinks proper, and shall not be liable to any action, suit, or proceedings in respect of anything done under this Article. Provided that a Provincial Court shall not exercise the powers of this Article except with the approval of the Supreme Court. Every proceeding of the Court under this Article shall be recorded in the Minutes.

Appeals and Rehearings.

Appeal to Supreme Court.

113.—(1) Where an action in a Provincial Court involves the amount for value of £25 or upwards, any party aggrieved by any decision of that Court, with or without assessors, in the action shall have the right to appeal to the Supreme Court against the same, on such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by Rules of Court.

(2) In any other case, the Provincial Court may, if it seems just and expedient, give leave to appeal on like terms.

(3) In any case the Supreme Court may give leave to appeal on such terms as seem just.

Rehearing in Supreme Court.

114.—(1) The Supreme Court may, if it thinks fit, on the application of any party or of its own motion, order a rehearing of an action, or of an appeal, or of any arguments on a verdict or on any other question of law.

(2) The provisions of this Order respecting a hearing with a jury or assessors shall extend to a rehearing of an action.

(3) The Supreme Court may, if it thinks fit, direct any rehearing to be before the full Court.

(4) If the party applying for a rehearing has by any order been ordered to pay money or do any other thing, the Court may direct either that the order be carried into execution, or that the execution thereof be suspended pending the rehearing, as it thinks fit.

(5) If the Court directs the order to be carried into execution, the party in whose favour it is given shall before the execution give security to the satisfaction of the Court for the performance of such order as shall be made on the rehearing.

(6) If the Court directs the execution of the order to be suspended, the party against whom it is given shall, before an order for suspension is given, give security to the satisfaction of the Judge for performance of such order as shall be made on the rehearing.

(7) An application for a rehearing shall be made within the prescribed time.

Appeals to His Majesty in Council.

Appeal to Privy Council.

115.—(1) Where a final judgment or order of the Supreme Court made in a civil action involves the amount or value of £500 or upwards, any party aggrieved thereby may, within the prescribed time, or, if no time is prescribed, within fifteen days after the same is made or given, apply by motion to the Supreme Court for leave to appeal to His Majesy the King in Council.

(2) The applicant shall give security to the satisfaction of the Court to an amount not exceeding £500 for prosecution of the appeal, and for such costs in the event of the dismissal of the appeal for want of prosecution as the Supreme Court may award, and for payment of all such costs as may be awarded to any respondent by His Majesty in Council, or by the Lords of the Judicial Committee of His Majesty's Privy Council.

(3) He shall also pay into the Supreme Court a sum estimated by that Court to be the amount of the expense of the making up and transmission to England of the transcript of the record.

(4) If security and payment are so given and made within two months from the filing of the motion-paper for leave to appeal, then, and not otherwise, the Supreme Court shall give leave to appeal, and the appellant shall be at liberty to prefer and prosecute his appeal to His Majesty in Council according to the rules for the time being in force respecting appeals to His Majesty in Council from his Colonies, or such other rules as His Majesty in Council from time to time thinks fit to make concerning appeals from the Supreme Court.

(5) In any case the Supreme Court, if it considers it just or expedient to do so, may give leave to appeal on the terms and in the manner aforesaid.

Execution pending appeal.

116.—(1) Where leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council is applied for by a person ordered to pay money or do any other act, the Supreme Court shall direct either that the order appealed from be carried into execution, or that the execution thereof be suspended pending the appeal, as the Court thinks just.

(2) If the Court directs the order to be carried into execution, the person in whose favour it is made shall, before the execution of it, give security to the satisfaction of the Court for performance of such order as His Majesty in Council may think fit to make.

(3) If the Court directs the execution of the order to be suspended the party against whom it is given shall, before an order for suspension is made, give security to the satisfaction of the Court for performance of such order as His Majesty in Council may think fit to make.

Appea by special leave.

117. This Order shall not affect the right of His Majesty in Council at any time, on the humble petition of a person aggrieved by a decision of the Supreme Court, to admit his appeal thereon on such terms and in such manner as His Majesty in Council may think fit, and to deal with the decision appealed from in such manner as may be just.

V.—Procedure, Criminal and Civil.

Minutes of proceedings.

118.—(1) In every case, civil or criminal, Minutes of the proceedings shall be drawn up, and shall be signed by the Judge before whom the proceedings are taken, and shall, where the trial is held with assessors, be open for their inspection and for their signature if concurred in by them.

(2) These Minutes, with the depositions of witnesses, and the notes of evidence taken at the hearing or trial by the Judge, shall be preserved in the public office of the Court.

Rules of Court.

119. The Judge of the Supreme Court may make Rules of Court—

(a) For regulating the pleading practice and procedure in the Courts established under this Order with respect to all matters within the jurisdiction of the respective Courts;

(b) For regulating the means by which particular facts may be proved in the said Courts;
(c) For prescribing any forms to be used;
(d) For prescribing or regulating the duties of the officers of the said Courts;
(e) For prescribing scales of costs and regulating any matters in connection therewith;
(f) For prescribing and enforcing the fees to be taken in respect of any proceedings under this Order, not exceeding, as regards any matters provided for by the Consular Salaries and Fees Act, 1891, fees fixed and allowed from time to time by any Order in Council made under that Act;
(g) For prescribing the allowances to be made in criminal cases to complainants, witnesses, jurors, assessors, interpreters, medical practitioners, and other persons employed in the administration of Justice and the conditions upon which an order may be made by the Court for such allowances;
(h) For taking and transmitting depositions of witnesses for use at trials in a British possession or in the United Kingdom;
(i) For regulating the mode in which legal practitioners are to be admitted to practise as such, and for withdrawing or suspending the right to practise on grounds of misconduct, subject to a right of appeal to His Majesty in Council.

Where under any Act of Parliament which is applicable to China and Corea, Rules may or are required to be made in England by the Lord Chancellor or any Judicial authority, the powers of this Article shall include a power to make such Rules for the purposes of that Act so far as applicable.

Rules framed under this Article shall not have effect until approved by the Secretary of State and, so far as they relate to fees and costs, sanctioned by the Treasury; but in case of urgency declared in any such Rules with the approval of His Majesty's Minister, the same shall have effect unless and until they are disapproved by the Secretary of State and notification of such disapproval is recorded and published by the Judge of the Supreme Court.

Until such rules have been made, or in relation to matters to which they do not extend, a Court may adopt and use any procedure or forms heretofore in use in the Consular Courts in China or Corea, or any Regulations or Rules made thereunder and in force immediately before the commencement of this Order, with any modifications or adaptations which may be necessary.

Power to dispense with payment of Court fees.

120.—(1) The Court may, in any case, if it thinks fit, on account of the poverty of a party, or for any other reason, to be recorded in the Minutes, dispense with or remit the payment of any fee in whole or in part.

(2) Payment of fees payable under any Rules to be made in pursuance of this Order, and of costs and of charges and expenses, of witnesses, prosecutions, punishments, and deportations and of other charges and expenses, and of fines respectively payable under this Order, may be enforced under order of the Court by seizure and sale of goods, and on default of sufficient goods, by imprisonment as a civil prisoner for a term not exceeding one month, but such imprisonment shall not operate as a satisfaction or extinguishment of the liability.

(3) Any bill of sale or mortgage, or transfer of property made with a view of avoiding seizure or sale of goods or ship under any provision of this Order, shall not be effectual to defeat the provisions of this Order.

Appearance.

121.—(1) Every person doing an act or taking a proceeding in the Court as plaintiff in a civil case, or as making a criminal charge against another person, or otherwise, shall do so in his own name and not otherwise, and either—

(a) By himself; or

(b) By a legal practitioner; or

(c) By his attorney or agent thereunto lawfully authorized in writing and approved by the Court.

(2) Where the act is done or proceeding taken by an attorney or by an agent (other than a legal practitioner), the power of attorney, or instrument authorizing the agent, or an authenticated copy thereof, shall be first filed in the Court.

(3) Where the authority has reference only to the particular proceeding, the original document shall be filed.

(4) Where the authority is general, or has reference to other matters in which the attorney or agent is empowered to act, an authenticated copy of the document may be filed.

(5) Any person doing any act or taking any proceeding in the Court in the name or on behalf of another person, not being lawfully authorized thereunto, and knowing himself not to be so authorized, is guilty of a contempt of Court.

Witnesses.

122.—(1) In any case, criminal or civil, and at any stage thereof, the Court either of its own motion or on the application of any party, may summon a British subject to attend to give evidence, or to produce documents, or to be examined; but a Provincial Court shall have power so to summon British subjects in its own district only.

(2) If the person summoned, having reasonable notice of the time and place at which he is required to attend, and (in civil cases) his reasonable expenses having been paid or tendered, fails to attend and be sworn, and give evidence, or produce documents or submit to examination accordingly, and does not excuse his failure to the satisfaction of the Court, he shall be guilty of an offence against this Order.

(3) Persons of Chinese, Corean, or other Asiatic origin or nationality shall be deemed to be persons allowed by law to affirm or declare instead of swearing.

(4) Any person appearing before the Court to give evidence in any case, civil or criminal, may be examined or give evidence in the form or with the ceremony that he declares to be binding on his conscience.

(5) If in any case, civil or criminal, a British subject wilfully gives false evidence in the Court, or on a reference, he shall be deemed guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury.

Conveyance of accused persons.

123. Whenever under this Order any person is to be taken for trial or imprisonment or by way of deportation or for any other purpose, to the Supreme Court or elsewhere in China or Corea, or to Hongkong, England, or elsewhere, the Court or other authority by this Order authorized to cause him to be so taken, may for that purpose (if necessary) cause him to be embarked on board one of His Majesty's ships of war, or if there is no such ship available, then on board any British or other fit ship, at any port or place whether within or beyond the particular jurisdiction or district of that Court or authority, and in order to such embarkment may (if necessary) cause him to be taken, in custody or otherwise, by land or by water, from any place to the port or place of embarkment.

The writ, order, or warrant of the Court, by virtue whereof any person is to be so taken, shall be sufficient authority to every constable officer, or other person acting thereunder, and to the commander or master of any ship of war, or other ship (whether the constable, officer r other person, or the ship or the commander or master thereof, is amed therein or not), to receive, detain, take, and deliver up such person, according to the writ, order, or warrant.

Where the writ, order, or warrant is executed under the immediate irection of the Court or authority issuing it, the writ, order or warrant hall be delivered to the constable, officer, or other person acting thereinder, and a duplicate thereof shall be delivered to the commander or naster of any ship in which the person to whom the writ, order, or varrant relates is embarked.

Where the writ, order, or warrant issues from the Supreme Court, nd is executed by a Provincial Court, a copy thereof certified under the eal of the Court executing the same shall be delivered to the constable, fficer, or other person acting thereunder, and to the commander or naster of any ship in which the person taken is embarked; and any such opy shall be for all purposes conclusive evidence of the order of which t purports to be a copy.

124. Subject to the other provisions of this Order, all expenses of emoval of prisoners and others from or to any place in China or Corea, r from or to Hongkong, and the expenses of deportation and of the ending of any person to England, shall be defrayed in such manner as he Secretary of State from time to time directs. Expenses of removal.

Failure to register may be rectified.

148. If in any case the Court is satisfied that failure to register or to renew the registration of a bill of sale in due time, or any omission or mis-statement connected with registration or renewal, was accidental or inadvertent, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order the failure, omission, or mis-statement to be rectified in such manner and on such terms, if any, respecting security, notice by advertisement or otherwise, or any other matter, as the Court thinks fit.

Bills executed before this Order comes into force.

149. The provisions of this Order apply to a bill of sale executed before the commencement of this Order.

Rules for indexes to register of bills.

150. The power conferred on the Judge of the Supreme Court by this Order of framing Rules from time to time extends to the framing of Rules for prescribing and regulating the making and keeping of indexes and of a general index, to the registers of bills of sale and searches in those indexes, and other particulars connected with the making, keeping, and using of those registers and indexes, and for authorizing and regulating the unregistering of any bill of sale, or the registering of any release or satisfaction in respect thereof.

VII.—Foreign Subjects and Tribunals.

Actions by and against foreigners.

151.—(1) Where a foreigner desires to institute or take in the Court an action against a British subject, or a British subject desires to institute or take in the Court an action against a foreigner, the Court shall entertain the same, and shall hear and determine it, according to the ordinary course of the Court.

(2) Provided that the foreigner, if so required by the Court, first obtains and files in the Court the consent in writing of the competent authority on behalf of his own nation to his submitting, and does submit, to the jurisdiction of the Court, and, if required by the Court, give security to the satisfaction of the Court, and to such reasonable amount as the Court thinks fit, by deposit or otherwise, to pay fees, damages, costs, and expenses and abide by and perform such decision as shall be given by the Court or on appeal.

(3) A cross-action or counter-claim shall not be brought in the Court against a plaintiff, being a foreigner.

(4) Where a foreigner obtains in the Court an order against a defendant being a British subject, and in another suit that defendant is plaintiff and the foreigner is defendant, the Court may, if it thinks fit, on the application of the British subject, stay the enforcement of the order pending that other suit, and may set off any amount ordered to be paid by one party in one suit against any amount ordered to be paid by the other party in the other suit.

(5) Where a plaintiff, being a foreigner, obtains an order in the Court against two or more defendants being British subjects jointly, and in another action one of them is plaintiff and the foreigner is defendant the Court may, if it thinks fit, on the application of the British subject, stay the enforcement of the order pending that other action, and may set off any amount ordered to be paid by one party in one action against any amount ordered to be paid by the other party in the other action, without prejudice to the right of the British subject to require contribution from his co-defendants under the joint liability.

(6) Where a foreigner is co-plaintiff in a suit with a British subject who is within the particular jurisdiction, it shall not be necessary for the foreigner to give security for costs, unless the Court so directs, but the co-plaintiff British subject shall be responsible for all fees and costs.

Attendance of British subjects before Chinese or foreign Tribunals.

152.—(1) Where it is proved that the attendance within the particular jurisdiction of a British subject to give evidence, or for any other purpose connected with the administration of justice, is required in a Court of China or Corea, or before a Chinese or Corean judicial officer, or in a Court or before a judicial officer of a State in amity with His Majesty, the Court may, if it thinks fit, in a case and in circumstances in which the Court would require his attendance before the Court, order that he do attend in such Court, or before such judicial officer, and for such purpose as aforesaid.

(2) A Provincial Court, however, cannot so order attendance at any place beyond its particular jurisdiction.

(3) If the person ordered to attend, having reasonable notice of the time and place at which he is required to attend, fails to attend accordingly, and does not excuse his failure to the satisfaction of the Court, he shall (independently of any other liability) be guilty of an offence against this Order.

Actions by British subjects in Chinese or foreign Court.

153. When a British subject invokes or submits to the jurisdiction of a Chinese, Corean, or foreign Tribunal, and engages in writing to abide by the decision of that Tribunal, or to pay any fees or expenses ordered by such Tribunal to be paid by him, the Supreme Court, or any Provincial Court may, on such evidence as it thinks fit to require, enforce payment of such fees and expenses in the same manner as if they were fees payable in a proceeding by such person in that Court, and shall pay over or account for the same when levied to the proper Chinese, Corean, or foreign authority, as the Court may direct.

Garnishee proceedings in aid of judgment of foreign Court.

154.—(1) The Supreme Court may upon the application of any British subject or foreigner who has obtained a judgment or order for the recovery or payment of money in a foreign Court in China or Corea against a person subject to the jurisdiction of that Court, and upon a certificate by the proper officer of the foreign Court that such judgment has been recovered or order made (specifying the amount), and that it is still unsatisfied, and that a British subject is alleged to be indebted to such debtor and is within the jurisdiction, order that all debts owing or accruing from such British subject (hereinafter called the garnishee) to such debtor shall be attached to answer the judgment or order; and by the same or a subsequent order, may order the garnishee to pay his debt or so much as may be sufficient to satisfy the judgment or order of the foreign Court.

(2) The proceedings for the summoning of the garnishee, for the ascertainment of his liability, and for the payment of money ordered by the Court to be paid, and all matters for giving effect to this Article, may be regulated by Rules of Court.

(3) An order shall not be made under this Article unless the Court is satisfied that the foreign Court is authorized to exercise similar power in the case of a debt due from a person subject to the jurisdiction of that Court to a British subject against whom a judgment has been obtained in a Court established under this Order.

VIII.—Regulations.

King's Regulations.

155. His Majesty's Ministers in China and Corea shall have power collectively with respect to China and Corea or any parts thereof, or severally with respect to China or Corea, or any parts thereof as the case may be, to make Regulations (to be called King's Regulations) for the following purposes, that is to say:—

(a) For the peace, order, and good government of British subjects in relation to matters not provided for by this Order, and to matters intended by this Order to be prescribed by Regulations.

(b) For securing the observance of any Treaty for the time being in force relating to any place or of any native or local law or custom whether relating to trade, commerce, revenue, or any other matter.

(c) For regulating or preventing the importation or exportation in British ships or by British subjects of arms or munitions of war or any parts or ingredients thereof, and for giving effect to any Treaty relating to the importation or exportation of the same.

(d) For requiring returns to be made of the nature, quantity, and value of articles exported from or imported into his district or any part thereof, by or on account of any British subject who is subject to this Order, or in any British ship, and for prescribing the times and manner at or in which, and the persons by whom such returns are to be made.

(2) Any Regulations made under this Article may provide for forfeiture of any goods, receptacles, or things in relation to which, or to the contents of which, any breach is committed of such Regulations, or of any Treaty or any native or local law or custom, the observance of which is provided for by such Regulations.

(3) Any person committing a breach of any such Regulations shall, in addition to any forfeiture prescribed thereby, be liable, on conviction, to imprisonment, for a period not exceeding three months, or to a fine, or to both.

(4) Any fine imposed for a breach of Regulations shall not exceed £50: Provided that where the breach is of any Regulation relating to customs law, or to the importation or exportation of any goods, the fine may extend to a sum equivalent to treble the value of the goods in relation to which the breach is committed.

Municipal Regulations.

156. His Majesty's Ministers in China and Corea respectively, in the exercise of the powers aforesaid, may, if they think fit, join with the Ministers of any foreign Powers in amity with His Majesty in making or adopting Regulations for the municipal government of any foreign concession or settlement in China or Corea as the case may be; and as regards British subjects, such joint Regulations shall be as valid and binding as if they related to British subjects only.

Approval of Regulations.

157.—(a) Regulations made or adopted under this Order shall not have effect as respects British subjects unless and until they are approved by His Majesty the King, that approval being signified through the Secretary of State—save that, in case of urgency declared in any such Regulations, the same shall take effect before that approval, and shall continue to have effect unless and until they are disapproved by His Majesty the King, and until notification of that disapproval has been received and published by His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea as the case may be.

(b) Any Regulations when so approved, and published as provided by this Order, shall have effect as if contained in this Order.

Publication of Regulations.

158.—(1) All Regulations approved under this Order, whether imposing penalties or not, shall be printed, and a printed copy thereof shall be affixed, and be at all times kept exhibited conspicuously, in the public office of each Consulate in China and Corea.

(2) Printed copies of the Regulations shall be kept on sale at such reasonable price as His Majesty's Minister from time to time directs.

(3) A printed copy of any Regulations purporting to be made under this Order, and to be certified under the hand of His Majesty's Minister in China or Corea, or under the hand and Consular seal of one of His Majesty's Consular officers in China and Corea, shall be conclusive evidence of the due making of such Regulations.

Prison Regulations.

159. The respective powers aforesaid extend to the making of Regulations for the governance, visitation, care, and superintendence of prisons in China or in Corea, for the removal of prisoners from one prison to another, and for the infliction of corporal or other punishment on prisoners committing offences against the rules or discipline of a prison; but the provisions of this Order respecting penalties, and respecting the printing, affixing, exhibiting, and sale of Regulations, and the mode of trial of charges of offences against Regulations, do not apply to Regulations respecting prisons and offences of prisoners.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Customs may be observed.

160. Nothing in this Order shall deprive the Court of the right to observe, and to enforce the observance of, or shall deprive any person of the benefit of, any reasonable custom existing in China or Corea, unless this Order contains some express and specific provision incompatible with the observance thereof.

Customary powers of Consular officers.

161. Nothing in this Order shall prevent any Consular officer in China or Corea from doing anything which His Majesty's Consuls in the dominions of any other State in amity with His Majesty are, for the time being, by law, usage, or sufferance, entitled or enabled to do.

Registration of British subjects.

162.—(1) Every British subject resident shall, in January in every year, register himself at the Consulate of the Consular district within which he is resident: Provided that—

(a) The registration of a man shall comprise the registration of his wife, if living with him; and

(b) The registration of the head of a family shall be deemed to comprise the registration of all females and minors being his relatives, in whatever degree, living under the same roof with him at the time of his registration.

(2) The Consular officer may, without fee, register any British subjects being minors living in the houses of foreigners.

(3) Every British subject arriving at a place in China or Corea where there is a Consular office, unless borne on the muster-roll of a British ship there arriving, shall, on the expiration of one month after arrival, be deemed, for the purposes of this article, to be resident, and shall register himself accordingly.

(4) A person shall not be required to register himself oftener than once in a year, reckoned from the 1st January.

(5) The Consular officer shall yearly give to each person registered by him a certificate of registration, signed by him and sealed with his Consular seal.

(6) The name of a wife, if her registration is comprised in her husband's, shall, unless in any case the Consular officer sees good reason to the contrary, be indorsed on the husband's certificate.

(7) The names and descriptions of females and minors whose registration is comprised in that of the head of the family shall, unless in any case the Consular officer sees good reason to the contrary, be indorsed on the certificate of the head of the family.

(8) It shall be lawful by King's Regulations to require that every person shall, on every registration of himself, pay such fee as may therein be prescribed, not exceeding 2 dollars in China and 2 yen in Corea; and such Regulations may provide that any such fee may either be uniform for all persons, or may vary according to the position and circumstances of different classes.

(9) The mode of registration may be prescribed by King's Regulations, but if no other mode is so prescribed, every person by this Order required to register himself or herself shall, unless excused by the Consular officer, attend personally for that purpose at the Consulate on each occasion of registration.

(10) If any person fails to comply with the provisions of this Order respecting registration, and does not excuse his failure to the satisfaction of the Consular officer, he or she shall be guilty of an offence against this Order, and any Court or authority may, if it thinks fit, decline to recognize him as a British subject.

Deposit of powers of attorney.

163. Section 48 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (which relates to the deposit of instruments creating powers of attorney in the Central Office of the Supreme Court in England or Ireland), shall apply to China and Corea with these modifications, that is to say: the Office of the Supreme Court is substituted for the Central Office, and Rules of Court under this order are substituted for General Rules.

Rates of exchange for payment of fees, fines, &c.

164. All fees, fines, penalties, and other sums of money which, under the provisions of this Order or any Regulations or Rules of Court, are stated or imposed in terms of British currency, shall, if not paid in British gold, be paid in China in British or Mexican dollars at the rate of exchange fixed periodically by the Treasury; in Corea, in Japanese currency at the rate of 10 yen to the pound sterling.

The said rates of exchange shall apply to the ascertainment of the value of any income for any purpose of qualification or of any limitation or security, in any case where this Order or any Rule or Regulation contains a reference to British currency.

Accounting of fines, fees, &c.

165. Except as in this Order otherwise provided, all fees, dues, fines, and other receipts under this Order shall be carried to the public account, and shall be accounted for and paid as the Secretary of State, with the concurrence of the Treasury, directs.

Report by Judge of the Supreme Court.

166. Not later than the 31st March in each year, the Judge of the Supreme Court shall send to the Secretary of State a report on the operation of this Order up to the 31st December of the preceding year, showing for the then last twelve months the number and nature of the proceedings, criminal and civil, taken in the Court under this Order and the result thereof, and the number and amount of fees received, and containing an abstract of the registration list, and such other information, and being in such form, as the Secretary of State from time to time directs.

Report by Provincial Court.

167. Each Provincial Court shall at such time as may be fixed by Rules of Court furnish to the Supreme Court an annual report of every case, civil and criminal, brought before it, in such form as the Supreme Court directs.

Publication of Order.

168.—(1) A printed copy of this Order shall be always kept exhibited in a conspicuous place in each Consular office and in each Court-house.

(2) Printed copies shall be sold at such reasonable price as the Supreme Court directs.

(3) Judicial notice shall be taken of this Order, and of the commencement thereof, and of the appointment of Consuls, and of the constitution and limits of the Courts and districts, and of Consular seals and signatures, and of any Rules made or in force under this Order, and no proof shall be required of any of such matters.

The provisions of the Evidence Act, 1851 (14 and 15 Vict., cap. 99), Secs. 7 and 11, relating to the proof of judicial and other documents, shall extend and be applied for all purposes as if the Courts, districts, and places to which this Order applies were in a British Colony.

Repeal.

169.—(1) The Orders in Council mentioned in the Schedule to this Order are hereby repealed, but this appeal shall not—

(a) Affect the past operation of those Orders, or any of them, or any appointment made, or any right, title, obligation, or liability accrued, or the validity or invalidity of anything done or suffered under any of those Orders, before the making of this Order;

(b) Interfere with the institution or prosecution of any proceeding or action, criminal or civil, in respect of any offence committed against, or forfeiture incurred or liability accrued under or in consequence of, any provision of any of those Orders, or any Regulation confirmed by any such Order or made thereunder;

(c) Take away or abridge any protection or benefit given or to be enjoyed in relation thereto.

(2) Notwithstanding the repeal of the Orders aforesaid, all Rules and Regulations approved or confirmed by or under any Order so repealed shall continue and be as if this Order had not been made; but so that the same may be revoked, altered, or otherwise dealt with under this Order, as if they had been made under this Order.

(3) Criminal or civil proceedings begun under any of the Orders repealed by this Order, and pending at the time when this Order comes into operation, shall, from and after that time, be regulated by the provisions of this Order, as far as the nature and circumstances of each case admits.

(4) Lists of jurors and assessors in force at the passing of this Order shall continue in force until revised and settled under the provisions of this Order.

Commencement of Order.

170.—(1) This Order shall take effect on such day not less than one month nor more than three months after it is first exhibited in the public office of the Supreme Court at Shanghai, as the Minister shall by public notification appoint.

(2) The day on which this Order so takes effect is in this Order referred to as the commencement of this Order.

(3) For the purposes of this Article the Judge of the Supreme Court shall forthwith, on the receipt by him from the Minister in China of a certified printed copy of this Order, cause the same to be affixed and exhibited conspicuously in that office, together with the said notification.

(4) He shall also keep the same so affixed and exhibited until the commencement of this Order.

(5) A copy of the said notification shall, as soon as practicable, be published at each of the Provincial Consulates in such manner as the Supreme Court may direct.

NATIONAL LIBRARY OF SCOTLAND

(6) A certified printed copy of this Order shall also be affixed and exhibited in the public offices of the Provincial Court at Seoul, at the same time (or as near as circumstances admit) at which it is first exhibited at Shanghai.

(7) Proof shall not in any proceeding or matter be required that the provisions of this Article have been complied with, nor shall any act or proceeding be invalidated by any failure to comply with any of such provisions.

(8) Where this Order confers power to make any appointment, Rules, or Regulations, or to do any other thing for the purposes of this Order, that power may be exercised at any time after the passing of this Order, so, however, that any such appointment, Rules, or Regulations shall not take effect before the commencement of this Order.

Short Title.

THE CHINA (AMENDMENT) ORDER IN COUNCIL, 1914

At the Court at Buckingham Palace, the 30th day of March, 1914

Present:—

The King's Most Excellent Majesty

Lord President — Lord Colebrooke

Viscount Knollys — Lord Emmott

Whereas by treaty, grant, usage, sufferance, or other lawful means His Majesty the King has jurisdiction in China:

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by virtue and in exercise of the powers in this behalf by the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, or otherwise in His Majesty vested, is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

1. This Order may be cited as "The China (Amendment) Order in Council, 9141," and shall be read as one with the China Order in Council, 1904, hereinafter referred to as the "Principal Order," and this Order and the China Orders in Council, 1904 to 1913, may be cited together as the "China Orders in Council, 1904 to 1914."

2.—(1) In addition to the documents to be deposited and filed in the office of a consulate, in accordance with Article 46 of the China (Amendment) Order in Council, 1913, on the registration of a company in accordance with the provisions of that Order, there shall be deposited and filed a list of the directors of the company showing in respect of each director his full name and nationality and his address.

(2) Every company registered under the China (Amendment) Order in Council, 1913, shall register in the month of January in every year a list of the directors of the company, showing in respect of each director his full name and nationality and his address, and shall from time to time, as may be necessary, register any alterations in such list.

(3) On every registration under sub-article (2) of this article there shall be payable a fee of 2*s*.

3. Where any municipal regulations or byelaws have been established for any foreign concession in China the Court may entertain a complaint against a British subject for a breach of such municipal regulations or byelaws, and may enforce compliance therewith.

Provided—

(1) That the said municipal regulations or byelaws have been accepted by His Majesty's Government. Acceptance of the municipal regulations or byelaws of a foreign concession by His Majesty's Goivenment shall be signified by a copy thereof being exhibited and kept exhibited in the public office of His Majesty's consulate at such treaty port.

(2) That no punishment other in nature or greater in degree than that provided by the Principal Order shall be imposed.

(3) That the Court is satisfied that effectual provision exists for the punishment in the Court of the foreign Powers whose municipal regulations or byelaws it is sought to enforce of breaches by the subjects or citizens of that Power of the municipal regulations or byelaws of British concessions in China.

4. In article 21 of the China (Amendment) Order in Council, 1913, the reference to article 13 should be read as a reference to article 19, and in article 29 the references to articles 21 and 22 should be read as references to articles 27 and 28, and in article 50 the reference to article 41 should be read as a reference to article 48.

And the Right Honourable Sir Edward Grey, Baronet, K.G., one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, is to give the necessary directions herein.

Almeric Fitzroy.

THE CHINA (AMENDMENT) ORDER IN COUNCIL, 1915

By this Order Article 3 of "The China (Amendment) Order in Council, 1914," was repealed.

CHINA (AMENDMENT No. 2) ORDER IN COUNCIL, 1920

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE, THE 9TH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1920

PRESENT:—

The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council

Whereas by treaty, grant, usage, sufferance, and other lawful means, His Majesty the King has jurisdiction in China:

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by virtue and in exercise of the powers in that behalf by "The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890," or otherwise, in His Majesty vested, is pleased by and with the advice of His Privy Council to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

1. This Order may be cited as "The China (Amendment No. 2) Order in Council, 1920," and shall be read as one with "The China Order in Council, 1904" (hereafter called the "Principal Order"), and with any Order amending the same.

2. The words in Article 101 of the Principal Order "except the jurisdiction relative to dissolution, or nullity, or jactitation of marriage" are hereby repealed.

3. This Order shall take effect on the day on which it is first exhibited in the Public Office of the Supreme Court at Shanghai.

And the Right Honourable George Nathaniel, Earl Curzon of Kedleston, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, is to give the necessary directions herein.

ALMERIC FITZROY.

Rules of Court drawn up under this Order by Judge Skinner Turner were published in the Hongkong Government Gazette on June 10th, 1921.

THE CHINA (AMENDMENT) ORDER IN COUNCIL No. 3, 1920

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE, THE 21ST DAY OF DECEMBER, 1920

PRESENT:—

The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council

Whereas by Treaty, grant, usage, sufferance, and other lawful means, His Majesty the King has jurisdiction in China:

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by virtue and in exercise of the powers in this behalf by "The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890," or otherwise, in His Majesty vested, is pleased, by and with the advice of his Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

1. This Order may be cited as "The China (Amendment) Order in Council, No. 3, 1920," and shall be read as one with "The China Order in Council, 1904" (hereinafter called the "Principal Order"), and with any Order amending the same, and the provisions of Article 170 of the Principal Order shall in particular apply to this Order.

2. Every person subject to the criminal jurisdiction of the Court who has acted is acting, or is about to act in a manner prejudicial to the public safety, or to the defence, peace or security of His Majesty's Dominions, or of any part of them, shall be guilty of a grave offence against the Principal Order, and may, in addition to, or in lieu of, any other punishment, be ordered to give security for good behaviour or to be deported.

3. Every person subject to the criminal jurisdiction of the Court who prints, publishes, or offers for sale any printed or written newspaper or other publication containing seditious matter, or has in his possession with intent to publish or distribute any such newspaper or other publication, shall be guilty of a grave offence against the Principal Order, and may, in addition to, or in lieu of, any other punishment, be ordered to give security for good behaviour or to be deported.

4. In addition and without prejudice to any powers which the Court may possess to order the exclusion of the public from any proceedings, if, in the course of the trial of a person for an offence under this Order, application is made by the drosecutor, in the interests of national safety, that all or any portion of the public should be excluded during any part of the hearing, the Court may make an order to that effect, but the passing of sentence shall in any case take place in public.

5. Article 2 (1) of "The China and Corea (Amendment) Order in Council, 1909," and the whole of "The China (War Powers) Order in Council, 1917," are hereby repealed, but this repeal shall not (a) affect the past operation thereof or any right, title, obligation or liability thereunder; or (b) interfere with the institution or prosecution of any legal proceeding thereunder.

6. This order is in substitution for "The China (Amendment) Order in Council, 1920," which has not taken effect and is hereby revoked.

And the Right Honourable George Nathaniel, Earl Curzon of Kedleston, K.G., &c., one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, is to give the necessary directions herein.

ALMERIC FITZROY.

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE, THE 13TH DAY OF DECEMBER, 1921

PRESENT:—

The King's Most Excellent Majesty

Earl of Lytton — Sir Frederick Ponsonby

Mr. Secretary Shortt — Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer

Whereas by treaty, grant, usage, sufferance or other lawful means, His Majesty the King has jurisdiction in China:—

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by virtue and in exercise of the powers in this behalf by the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, or otherwise in His Majesty vested, is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

1.—(1) This Order may be cited as "The China (Amendment) Order in Council, 1921," and shall be read as one with the China Order in Council, 1904 (in this Order referred to as "the Principal Order"), and the said Order and any other Orders in Council amending the said Order may be cited together as "The China Orders in Council, 1904 to 1921."

(2) This Order shall not apply to places within the limits of the Consular District of Kashgar.

2.—The following provisions are substituted for Article 162 of the Principal Order:—

(1) A register of British subjects shall be kept in the office of every Consulate in China.

(2) Every British subject resident in China shall, in the month of January of each year, be registered at the Consulate of the Consular District within which he resides, provided that if some other Consulate is more easy of access, he may, with the assent of the Consular Officer, be registered there. A British subject arriving in China must apply for registration within one month after his arrival; provided that a person who fails to apply for or to obtain registration within the time limited by this Article may be registered at any time if he excuses his failure to the satisfaction of the Consular Officer.

(3) Where a person is in possession of a valid British passport, the Consular Officer shall, on the first registration of any such person, endorse on the passport without further fee than that provided for in sub-article (6) hereunder a certificate of registration in such form as may be prescribed by the Secretary of State. Where any such person applies for the renewal of the registration and produces his passport, renewal of his registration need not attend personally unless that provided for in sub-article (6) hereunder be endorsed thereon.

(4) Every person who has not previously been registered applying to be registered under this Order shall, unless excused by the Consular Officer, attend personally for that purpose at the Consulate, but any person applying for the renewal of his registration need not attend personally unless directed by the Consular Officer so to do, provided that the registration of the wife or wives of a man who is registered under this Order may, if living with him, be effected without their personal attendance being required, and provided also that the registration of minors, being his relatives in whatever degree, living with the head of a family who is registered under this Order may, if living with him, be effected without attendance being required.

(5) A person registered in any register of British subjects established under the provisions of any Order in Council which have been repealed shall be registered under the provisions of this Order, unless the Consular Officer is satisfied after inquiry that the previous registration was erroneous or that such person is not entitled to registration under the provisions of this Order.

(6) Every person shall, on every registration of himself, and on every renewal of the registration, pay a fee of two dollars, or such other fee as the Secretary of State from time to time appoints. The amount of the fee may be uniform for all persons, or may vary according to the position and circumstances of different classes, if the Secretary of State from time to time so directs, but may not in any case exceed four dollars.

(7) Where any person applies to be registered he shall be entitled without a fee to the assistance of the Consular Officer in the preparation of any affidavit that may be required.

(8) The Consular Officer may require the production of such evidence that an applicant for registration is entitled to the status of a British subject as he may see fit, but subject to such directions as may be issued by the Secretary of State.

(9) If any British subject neglects to obtain registration under the provisions of this Order, he shall not be entitled to be recognised or protected as a British subject in China, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty dollars for each instance of such failure, but he shall, although not registered, be subject to the jurisdiction of his Majesty's Courts in China.

3.—From and after the commencement of this Order, Article 162 of the Principal Order is hereby repealed, but such repeal shall not prejudice any rights, obligations or liabilities accrued thereunder.

THE CHINA (COMPANIES) ORDER IN COUNCIL, 1915

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE, THE 30TH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1915

PRESENT :—

Lord President. Mr. Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Lord Stamfordham. Sir Frederick Ponsonby.

Whereas by Treaty, grant, usage, sufferance, and other lawful means His Majesty the King has jurisdiction in China:

And whereas it is desirable to make further provision with reference to the exercise of jurisdiction over British Companies carrying on business within the limits of this Order:

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by virtue and in exercise of the powers in this behalf by "The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890" or otherwise, in His Majesty vested, is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

1.—This Order may be cited as "The China (Companies) Order in Council, 1915," and shall be read as one with the "China Order, 1904" (hereinafter called the "Principal Order"), and with any Order amending the same.

2.—In this Order—

"The Ordinance" means "The Companies Ordinance, 1911, of the Colony of Hongkong," and includes any Ordinance amending or substituted for the same.

"The Life Insurance Companies Ordinance," means the Life Insurance Companies Ordinance, 1907, of the Colony of Hongkong, and includes any Ordinance amending or substituted for the same.

"China Company" means a Company limited by shares or by guarantee incorporated under the Ordinance, and the operations of which are directed and controlled from some place within the limits of this Order.

"Hongkong China Company" means a Company incorporated under the Ordinance which carries on some part of its business within the limits of this Order, and the operations of which are directed and controlled from some place in Hongkong.

"British Company" means a Company incorporated in the United Kingdom, or in a British Possession, and includes a China Company and a Hongkong China Company.

3.—(1) The Consul-General at Shanghai, including any person acting for such Consul-General, shall be Registrar of Companies at Shanghai.

(2) All acts done within the limits of this Order in pursuance of the provisions of the Ordinance or of the Life Insurance Companies Ordinance by, to, with, or before the Registrar of Companies at Shanghai, shall, subject to the provisions of this Order, be of the same force and validity as if they had been done by, to, with, or before the Registrar of Companies in Hongkong.

(3) The Registrar of Companies at Shanghai shall be entitled to initiate such proceedings in the Court as he may think necessary to enforce compliance with the provisions of this Order on the part of British Companies in China.

4.—The Judge may by Rules of Court confer upon Provincial Courts jurisdiction in matters dealt with in the Ordinance, and may specify in such Rules the Courts by which, and the classes of cases in which, such jurisdiction shall be exercised, but subject thereto the jurisdiction conferred by the Ordinance upon any Court shall within the limits of this Order be exercised by the Supreme Court.

5.—In all matters relating to a Hongkong China Company the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court and of the Supreme Court of Hongkong shall be concurrent, and the said two Courts shall in all respects be auxiliary to each other.

6.—Where any proceedings relating to a Hongkong China Company, or for the winding up of any such Company, are commenced in the Supreme Court, and it appears that the principal part of such Company's business is carried on within the limits of Hongkong, or that for any other reason such proceedings might more conveniently be carried on at Hongkong, the Supreme Court may, of its own motion, or on the application of any party, make an Order transferring the proceedings to the Supreme Court of Hongkong.

7.—The Supreme Court shall enforce within the limits of this Order any Order or Decree made by the Supreme Court of Hongkong in the course of any proceedings relating to a Hongkong China Company, or for the winding up of any such Company.

8.—(1) The majority of the Directors of a China Company shall be British Subjects resident within the limits of this Order.

(2) If at any time the proportion of Directors who are British Subjects resident within the limits of this Order falls to or below one-half, it shall be the duty of the Directors and also of the Shareholders of the Company to take within 30 days, or such further period as the Court may allow, all necessary steps for the appointment of such number of Directors who are British Subjects resident within the limits of this Order as may be necessary to comply with the provisions of this article.

(3) If default is made in compliance with this article the Company shall be liable to a fine not exceeding 50 dollars for every day during which the default continues, and every Director and every Manager of the Company who knowingly authorizes or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty.

(4) Failure to comply with the provisions of this article shall be a ground upon which an Order for winding up the Company may be made by the Court.

9.—No person other than a British Subject shall be entitled to act as the auditor of a China Company. The appointment of any such person as the auditor of a China Company shall be void, and any certificate or other document given, or act done, by any person who is not a British Subject purporting to act as auditor of a China Company shall not be held to comply with any requirements of the Ordinance.

10.—No person other than a British Subject shall be appointed to act within the limits of this Order as liquidator of a British Company or as receiver or manager on behalf of the debenture-holders of the property of a British Company except with the sanction of the Court.

11.—(1) All documents and other written information which a Company is required by the Ordinance to file with the Registrar of Companies shall, in the case of a China Company, be filed with the Registrar of Companies at Shanghai, and a copy of all such documents and other written information shall, in the case of a Hongkong China Company, be filed with the Registrar of Companies at Shanghai.

(2) If any Company to which this Article applies fails to comply with its provisions, the Company and every Officer and Agent of the Company who is knowingly a party to the default shall be liable to a fine not exceeding 50 dollars for every day during which such default has continued.

12.—The registered office of a China Company shall be situated within the limits of this Order.

13.—(1) No shares shall be issued by a China Company except either as fully paid up shares or upon the term that the shares shall be paid up in full within a specified period not exceeding three months after allotment.

(2) Shares issued by a China Company otherwise than as fully paid up shares shall be deemed to be issued upon the condition that if not paid for in full before the expiration of one week from the date upon which the final payment was due, they shall be forfeited by the Directors, and it shall be the duty of the Directors at the expiration of that period to forfeit the said shares. Notice of the forfeiture of any such shares shall forthwith be given to the registered holder.

Any shares so forfeited shall be deemed to be the property of the Company, and the Directors may sell, re-allot, or otherwise dispose of the same in such manner as they think fit. Certificates or other documents of title relating to shares forfeited under this article shall be returned to the Company.

(3) Within one month of the expiration of the time allowed for the completion of the payment of all sums due upon the shares, the Secretary of the Company shall forward to the Registrar of Companies at Shanghai a return signed by the auditor of the Company giving particulars of the shares issued, of the amounts paid thereon, of the shares in respect of which default has been made in payment of sums due, and of the shares forfeited.

(4) If shares are issued by a China Company on terms which fail to comply with the provisions of this article, or if other default is made in complying therewith, the Company, and every Director, Manager, Secretary, and other Officer, who is knowingly a party to such issue or default, shall be guilty of an offence, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding 500 dollars for every day during which such offence continues.

(5) Where on application made it is established to the satisfaction of the Court that there has been a failure to comply with the provisions of this article through inadvertence or accidental miscalculation or from some other reasonable cause, and not from any want of good faith, the Court may, if under all the circumstances it considers it just so to do, give relief from any forfeiture or penalty which has been incurred by the applicant, or to which he is, or may be, liable upon such terms as it may think fit.

(6) The provisions of this Article shall only apply to shares issued by a China Company after the date when this Order comes into effect:

14.—(1) No China Company limited by guarantee shall be allowed to operate in China without the consent of the Minister.

(2) As a condition of this consent the Minister may require that no persons other than a British Subject shall be a Member of the Company, or that any Member of the Company who is not a British Subject shall deposit in Court or give security for or conform to such arrangement as the Minister shall think fit, for ensuring the payment of the amount for which he would be liable under the guarantee.

(3) If any China Company limited by guarantee operates in China without the consent of the Minister, or if any terms imposed by him as a condition of his consent are not complied with, the Company and every Director, or Manager, Secretary, and other Officer, who is knowingly a party thereto, shall be guilty of an offence, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding 500 dollars for every day during which such offence continues.

(4) Where on application made it is established to the satisfaction of the Court that there has been a failure to comply with the provisions of this article through inadvertence or accidental miscalculation or from some other reasonable cause, and not from any want of good faith, the Court may, if under all the circumstances it considers it just so to do, give relief from any forfeiture or penalty which has been incurred by the applicant, or to which he is, or may be, liable upon such terms as it may think fit.

(5) The provisions of this article shall not apply to China Companies limited by guarantee operating in China at the date of this Order.

15.—(1) Subject to the provisions of this Order, the jurisdiction of the Court in respect of all British Companies carrying on business in China shall be exercised, so far as circumstances admit, in conformity with the provisions of the Ordinance and of the Life Insurance Companies Ordinance, except that Section 16 of the Companies Amendment Ordinance, 1913, shall not apply in China.

(2) Where reference is made or inferred in any Section of the said Ordinances to any other Ordinance of the Colony of Hongkong which does not apply within the limits of this Order, such Section shall be read as though the corresponding law or enactment applicable in England were referred to therein.

(3) The duties of the Governor, or of the Governor in Council, or of the Colonial Treasurer under Sections 20, 21, 120 (4), 219, 253, and 255 of the Ordinance shall, within the limits of this Order, be exercised by the Minister, and under Sections 141 (1), 149, 185, 217, and 261 shall within the limits of this Order be exercised by the Judge.

(4) In the application of the said Ordinance "legal practitioner" is substituted for "counsel" or "solicitor" or "solicitor and counsel," and "such newspaper as the Judge may direct" is substituted for "The Gazette."

(5) All offences under the said Ordinances made punishable by fine may, if committed within the limits of this Order, be prosecuted summarily under Article 48 of the Principal Order, provided that the maximum fine which can be imposed in the case of offences under the Ordinances tried summarily shall be £200 instead of £20.

16.—(1) The power of the Judge under Article 119 of the Principal Order to make Rules of Court shall extend to any matter which under the Ordinance or under the Life Insurance Companies Ordinance is to be regulated by Rules.

(2) Any Rules in force at Hongkong at the date of this Order relating to matters dealt with in the said Ordinances shall, unless and until they are repealed by Rules made under this Article, apply, so far as circumstances admit, within the limits of this Order.

17. All fees prescribed by or under the Ordinance or by or under the Life Insurance Companies Ordinance which are paid to the Registrar of Companies at Shanghai shall be paid by him to the Colonial Treasurer at Hongkong.

18. Nothing in this Order shall prejudice or affect the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court over British Companies other than China Companies and Hongkong China Companies within the meaning of this Order.

19. This Order shall come into effect on the 1st day of January, 1916.

ALMERIC FITZROY.

THE CHINA (COMPANIES) AMENDMENT ORDER IN COUNCIL, 1919

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE, THE 9TH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1919

PRESENT:—

The King's Most Excellent Majesty

Lord Steward — Sir Francis Villiers

Mr. Secretary Shortt — Sir George Buchanan

Whereas by treaty, grant, usage, sufferance, and other lawful means, His Majesty the King has jurisdiction in China:

And whereas it is desirable to make further provision with reference to the exercise of jurisdiction over British companies carrying on business within the limits of this Order:

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by virtue and in exercise of the powers in this behalf by "The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890," or otherwise, in His Majesty vested, is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

1. This Order may be cited as "The China (Companies) Amendment Order in Council, 1919," and shall be read as one with "The China (Companies) Order in Council, 1915."

2. In this Order:—

"The Fire and Marine Insurance Companies Ordinance" means "The Fire and Marine Insurance Companies Ordinance, 1917, of the Colony of Hongkong," and includes any Ordinance amending or substituted for the same.

"The Ordinance" means "The Companies Ordinance, 1911, of the Colony of Hongkong," and includes any Ordinance amending or substituted for the same.

3. Where the general or substantial control of the business of a Company incorporated under the Ordinance is exercised by a person or persons ordinarily resident within the limits of this Order, such Company shall, irrespective of the place at which the Board of Directors may meet, or of any other circumstances, be deemed to be a Company of which the operations are directed and controlled from a place within the limits of this Order and shall be a China Company within the meaning of "The China (Companies) Order in Council, 1915."

4. (1) No person, other than a British subject resident within the limits of this Order, shall act as managing-director or in any position similar to that of managing-director, or shall otherwise exercise general or substantial control of the business of a China Company.

(2) If default is made in compliance with this Article the Company shall be liable to a fine not exceeding 50 dollars for every day during which the default continues, and every director and every manager of the Company who knowingly authorizes or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty.

(3) Failure to comply with the provisions of this Article shall be a ground upon which an order for winding up the Company may be made by the Court.

(4) This Article shall come into force 60 days after the publication of this Order.

5. All documents and other written information which a company is required by the Ordinance to file with the Registrar of Companies shall, in the case of a China Company, be filed with the Registrar of Companies at Shanghai, and a copy of all such documents and other written information shall, in the case of a Hongkong China Company, be filed with the Registrar of Companies at Shanghai.

6.—(1) The provisions of the Fire and Marine Insurance Companies Ordinance shall be applied to China Companies and Hongkong China Companies.

(2) All acts done within the limits of this Order in pursuance of the Fire and Marine Insurance Companies Ordinance by, to, with, or before the Registrar of Companies at Shanghai shall, subject to the provisions of this Order, be of the same force and validity as if they had been done by, to, with, or before the Registrar of Companies in Hongkong.

(3) The Registrar of Companies at Shanghai shall be entitled to initiate such proceedings as he may think necessary to enforce compliance with the provisions of this Order.

7.—(1) Subject to the provisions of this Order the jurisdiction of the Court in respect of China Companies and Hongkong China Companies shall be exercised, so far as circumstances admit, in conformity with the provisions of the Fire and Marine Insurance Companies Ordinance.

(2) The duties of the Governor or of the Governor in Council under Sections 5 (2), 5 (5), 6 (2), and 7 (1), and of paragraphs 2, 3 and 7 of the First Schedule of the Fire and Marine Insurance Companies Ordinance shall, within the limits of this Order, be exercised by the Minister.

(3) All offences under the Fire and Marine Insurance Companies Ordinance made punishable by fine may, if committed within the limits of this Order, be prosecuted summarily under Article 48 of "The China Order in Council, 1904," provided that the maximum fine which can be imposed in the case of offences tried summarily shall be £200 instead of £20.

8. All fees prescribed by or under the Fire and Marine Insurance Companies Ordinance which are paid to the Registrar of Companies at Shanghai shall be paid by him to the Colonial Treasurer at Hongkong.

9. This Order shall come into effect on the first day of January, 1920.

And the Right Honourable Arthur James Balfour, O.M., one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, is to give the necessary directions herein.

ALMERIC FITZROY.

STATUTORY RULES AND ORDERS, 1909. No. 751

THE CHINA AND COREA (CONSULAR FEES) ORDER IN COUNCIL, 1909

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE, THE 28TH DAY OF JUNE, 1909

PRESENT:—

The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas by "The Consular Salaries and Fees Act, 1891," His Majesty the King is authorized by Order in Council to fix the fees to be taken in respect of any matter or thing done by a Consular officer in the execution of his office, and to vary such fees by way of increase or decrease, and to abolish fees and to create new fees;

And whereas it is expedient that the Table of Fees fixed by the China and Corea (Consular and Marriage Fees) Order in Council, 1906, should, in certain respects, be added to, and that fees should be created in respect of the attendance of Consular officers in the Mixed Court at Shanghai, and in respect of the assistance rendered by Consular officers to British litigants in such Court:

Now, therefore, in pursuance of the before-mentioned Act, His Majesty is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:

1. This Order may be cited as "The China and Corea (Consular Fees) Order in Council, 1909."

2. The several fees set forth in the Table annexed to this Order are hereby established, and the said Table shall be construed as part of this Order.

3. This Order shall come into operation on such date as His Majesty's Consul-General at Shanghai shall appoint.

4. This Order shall extend to all places in China and Corea.

A. W. FITZROY.

TEXT OF RECENT SINO-FOREIGN TREATIES, ETC.

[DECLARATION OF THE NATIONALIST GOVERNMENT ON JULY 7, 1928.]

On July 7, 1928, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Nationalist Government* made the following declaration (translation) on the conclusion of new Treaties with the Powers:

"The Nationalist Government, with a view to adapting themselves to the present day circumstances and with the object of promoting the welfare of and the friendly relations between China and different countries, have always considered the abrogation of all the unequal Treaties and the conclusion of new Treaties on the basis of equality and mutual respect for territorial sovereignty as the most pressing problem at the present time. These aims have been embodied in declarations repeatedly made by the Nationalist Government.

"Now that the unification of China is an accomplished fact, it is the task of the Nationalist Government to make every effort to fully realize these aims. While they will continue to afford protection to foreign lives and property in China, according to law, the Nationalist Government hereby make the following specific declaration with regard to all the unequal Treaties:

"(1) All the unequal Treaties between the Republic of China and other countries, which have already expired, shall be ipso facto abrogated, and new Treaties shall be concluded.

"(2) The Nationalist Government will immediately take steps to terminate, in accordance with proper procedure, those unequal Treaties which have not yet expired, and conclude new Treaties.

"(3) In the case of old Treaties which have already expired, but which have not yet been replaced by new Treaties, the Nationalist Government will promulgate appropriate interim regulations to meet the exigencies of such situation."

INTERIM REGULATIONS.

At the same time the Nationalist Government issued the following Provisional Regulations Governing the Relations between China and the Powers after the Abrogation of the Old Treaties and pending the Conclusion of New Treaties:—

"1 Foreign countries and foreigners, as designated in these Regulations, apply only to those foreign countries and the nationals thereof whose Treaties with China have already expired, and with whom new Treaties have not yet been concluded.

"2 All diplomatic officials and consular officials of foreign countries stationed in China shall be entitled to proper treatment accorded under international law.

"3. The persons and properties of foreigners in China shall receive due protection under Chinese Law.

"4. Foreigners in China shall be subject to the regulations of Chinese Law and the jurisdiction of Chinese Law Courts.

* Since October 10, 1928, the English designation has been altered to the "National Government of the Republic of China."

"5. Pending the enforcement of the National Tariff Schedule, the regular customs duties on commodities imported into China from foreign countries or by foreigners, and those exported from Chtna to foreign countries, shall be collected in accordance with the existing tariff schedule.

"6. All taxes and duties which Chinese citizens are under obligation to pay shall be payable equally by foreigners in accordance with the law.

"7. Matters not provided for by the foregoing Regulations, shall be dealt with in accordance with International Law and Chinese Municipal Law."

SINO-FRENCH TARIFF TREATY

Treaty Regulating Customs Relations between the Republic of China and the French Republic.

(Translation from the French).

On September 29, 1928, Dr C. T. Wang sent to Mr. Cosmé, the French Chargé d'Affaires at Peiping, a Note, suggesting that the tariff relations between China and France be readjusted on the basis of the principles which had been proposed to the British and other friendly Governments. As a result of the subsequent negotiations between Dr. Wang and Count de Martel, the French Minister, the following treaty was concluded on December 22, 1928:

The Republic of China and the French Republic, animated by the desire to further consolidate the ties of friendship which happily subsist between the two countries and to develop their commercial relations, have decided to conclude a Treaty and have, for this purpose, named as their respective Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

The President of the National Government of the Republic of China:
His Excellency Dr. Chengting T. Wang, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the National Government of the Republic of China;

The President of the French Republic:
His Excellency Count D. de Martel, Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary of the French Republic to China, Commander de la Legion d'Honneur,

Who, having communicated to each other their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following Articles:

Article I.—All the provisions which appear in the treaties hitherto concluded and in force between China and France relating to rates of duty on imports and exports of merchandise, drawbacks, transit dues and tonnage dues in China shall be annulled and become inoperative, and the principle of complete autonomy shall henceforth apply in respect of the Customs tariff and related matters, subject, however, to the condition that each of the High Contracting Parties shall enjoy in the territories, possessions, colonies and protectorates of the other, in relation to the above specified and related matters, treatment in no way less favourable than that effectively enjoyed by any other country.

Article II.—The Nationals of either of the High Contracting Parties shall not be compelled under any pretext whatever to pay within the territories possessions, colonies and protectorates of the other any duties, internal charges or taxes upon their importations and exportations higher or other than those paid by nationals of the country or by nationals of any other country.

Article III.—The present Treaty has been written in Chinese and French and the two texts have been carefully compared and verified, but in the event of there being a difference of meaning between the two, the French text shall be held to prevail.

The present Treaty shall be ratified as soon as possible and the ratifications shall be exchanged in Paris. It shall come into force on the day on which the two Governments shall have notified each other that ratification has been effected.

In faith whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Treaty in duplicate and have affixed thereto their seals.

THE SINO-BELGIAN TREATY

On August 4, 1928, Dr. C. T. Wang notified Baron Guillaume, the Belgian Chargé d'Affaires at Peiping, that the Sino-Belgian Treaty of November 2, 1864 had long expired, and that for the purpose of readjusting the relations between the two countries the early conclusion of a new treaty was necessary. Dr. Wang suggested that negotiations be opened in Nanking and on November 22, 1928, the following Treaty was concluded between China and Belgium:

Preliminary Treaty of Amity and Commerce between the Republic of China and the Union of Belgium and Luxemburg.

The National Government of the Republic of China and His Majesty the King of the Belgians, acting in his name and in the name of Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess of Luxemburg in virtue of existing agreements, being mutually animated by a desire to further strengthen the ties of friendship already happily existing between China and the Union of Belgium and Luxemburg, have decided to conclude a Preliminary Treaty of Amity and Commerce and have, for this purpose, named as their plenipotentiaries that is to say:

His Excellency the President of the National Government of the Republic of China:

Dr. Chengting T. Wang, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the National Government of the Republic of China;

His Majesty the King of the Belgians:

Baron J. Guillaume, Charge d'Affaires ad interim of Belgium in China;

Who, having exchanged their full powers found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon and concluded the following Articles:

Article I.—The two High Contracting Parties recognize that, in the matter of customs and all related matters, they are on a footing of perfect equality, and on the basis of this principle they agree that such matters shall be regulated exclusively by their respective national laws.

It is further agreed that, in respect of all questions of customs as well as all questions relating thereto, neither of the two High Contracting Parties shall be subject, in the territory of the other, to a treatment less favourable than that accorded to any other country.

In no case shall the nationals of one of the High Contracting Parties be compelled to pay, in the territory of the other, with respect to the importation as well as exportation of merchandise, customs dues, transit taxes, or taxes of any other kind other or higher than those which are paid by the nationals or the nationals of any other country.

Article II.—The nationals of each of the two High Contracting Parties shall be subject, in the territory of the other Party, to the laws and the jurisdiction of the law courts of that Party.

Article III.—The two High Contracting Parties shall as soon as possible enter into negotiations with a view to the conclusion of a Treaty of Commerce and Navigation based upon the principle of reciprocity and equality of treatment.

Article IV.—The present Treaty is written in Chinese, French and English; in case of any difference of interpretation, the English text shall be held to be authoritative.

Article V.—The present Treaty shall be ratified as soon as possible and shall come into force on the day on which the two Governments shall have notified each other that the ratification has been effected.

In faith whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Treaty and have affixed thereunto their seals.

SINO-DANISH TREATY

On December 12, 1928, the new Sino-Danish preliminary treaty was signed, the text of which is as follows:

Preliminary Treaty of Amity and Commerce between the Republic of China and the Kingdom of Denmark.

The Republic of China and the Kingdom of Denmark, being equally animated by the desire to strengthen the ties of friendship which happily subsist between the two countries and to promote and consolidate their commercial relations, have resolved to conclude a Preliminary Treaty for Amity and Commerce, and have, for this purpose, named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

His Excellency the President of the National Government of the Republic of China:

Dr Chengting T. Wang, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the National Government of the Republic of China;

His Majesty the King of Denmark and Iceland:

Mr. Henrik de Kauffmann, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Majesty the King of Denmark and Iceland, to China;

Who, having met and communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles:

Article I.—The two High Contracting Parties agree that the Customs tariff and all matters related thereto shall be regulated exclusively by their respective national legislations.

It is further agreed that each of the High Contracting Parties shall enjoy in the territory of the other, with regard to Customs and all related matters, treatment in no way less favourable than the treatment accorded to any other country.

The nationals of each of the High Contracting Parties shall not be compelled, under any pretext whatever, to pay within the territories of the other Party any duties, internal charges or taxes upon the importation or exportation of goods, other or higher than those paid by the nationals of the country or by the nationals of any other country.

Article II.—The nationals of each of the two High Contracting Parties shall be subject, in the territory of the other Party, to the laws and jurisdiction of the law courts of that Party, to which they shall have free and easy access for the enforcement and defence of their rights.

Article III.—The two High Contracting Parties have decided to enter as soon as possible into negotiations for the purpose of concluding a Treaty of Commerce and Navigation based on the principles of absolute equality and non-discrimination in their commercial relations and mutual respect for sovereignty.

Article IV.—The present Treaty has been drawn up in two copies in the Chinese, Danish and English languages. In the event of there being any difference of meaning, the English text shall be held to prevail.

Article V.—The present Treaty shall be ratified as soon as possible and shall come into force on the day on which the two Governments shall have notified each other that the ratification has been effected.

In faith whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Treaty and have affixed thereto their seals.

Done at Nanking this twelfth day of the twelfth month of the seventeenth year of the Republic of China, corresponding to the twelfth day of December, nineteen hundred and twenty-eight.

THE SINO-GERMAN TREATY

The Sino-German tariff treaty was signed on August 17, 1928.

Treaty between China and Germany.

The Republic of China, and the German Reich, animated by the desire to further consolidate the ties of friendship which happily exist between the two countries and to extend and facilitate the commercial relations between the two countries, have, for this purpose, decided to conclude a treaty and have named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

The President of the Council of the Nationalist Government of the Republic of China:
Dr. Chengting T. Wang, Minister for Foreign Affairs;

The President of the German Reich:
Mr. H. von Borch, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotiary of the German Reich to China.

Who, having communicated to each other their full powers and found them to be in good and due form, have agreed upon the folowing treaty between the two countries:

Article I.—For the purpose of attaining absolute equality of treatment in Customs matters and in supplementing the arrangements between China and Germany of the 20th of May 1921, the two High Contracting Parties agree that in all Customs and related matters either of the High Contracting Parties shall not, within the territories of the other Party, be subject to any discriminatory treatment as compared with the treatment accorded to any other country.

The nationals of each of the High Contracting Parties shall under no circumstances be compelled to pay within the territories of the other Party higher or other duties, internal charges or taxes whatsoever upon the importation or exportation of goods than those paid by nationals of the country or by nationals of any other country.

The provision in the exchange of notes annexed to the Sino-German agreement of May 20, 1921, according to which German import goods shall pay duties in accordance with the General Tariff Regulations prior to the general application of the Automous Tariff Regulations, shall be hereby annulled.

Article II.—The two High Contracting Parties will enter as soon as possible into negotiations for the purpose of concluding a Treaty of Commerce and Navigation based on the principle of perfect parity and equality of treatment.

Article III. The present treaty has been drawn up in Chinese, German and English; in case of a difference of interpretation the English text shall prevail.

Article IV.—The present treaty shall be ratified as soon as possible and shall become valid on the day on which the two Governments shall have notified each other that the ratifications have been effected.

Done in duplicate at Nanking on the seventeenth day of the Eighth month of the seventeenth year of the Republic of China, corresponding to the seventeenth day of August, nineteen hundred and twenty-eight.

THE ANTI-WAR TREATY (KELLOGG PACT)

1.—UNITED STATES, INVITATION TO CHINA.

Legation of the United States of America
Peking, August 27, 1928.

Excellency:

I have the honour to inform you that the Governments of Germany, the United States of America, Belgium, France, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, The Irish Free State, India, Italy, Japan, Poland, and Czecho-Slovakia have this day signed in Paris a treaty binding them to renounce war as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another and to seek only by pacific means the settlement of or solution of all disputes which may arise among them.

This treaty, as Your Excellency is aware, is the outcome of negotiations which commenced on June 20, 1927, when M. Briand, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the French Republic, submitted to my Government a draft of a pact of perpetual friendship between France and the United States. In the course of the subsequent negotiations this idea was extended so as to include as original signatories of the anti-war treaty not only France and the United States but also Japan, the British Empire and all the Governments which participated with France and Great Britain in the Locarno agreements, namely, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, Germany, Italy, and Poland. This procedure met the point raised by the British Government in its note of May 19, 1928, where it stated that the treaty from its very nature was not one which concerned that Government alone but was one in which that Government could not undertake to participate otherwise than jointly and simultaneously with the Government in the Dominions and the Government of India; it also settled satisfactorily the question whether there was any inconsistency between the new treaty and the treaties of Locarno, thus meeting the observations of the French Government as to the necessity of extending the number of original signatories.

The decision to limit the original signatories to the Powers named above, that is, to the United States, Japan, the parties to the Locarno treaties, the British Dominions, and India was based entirely upon practical considerations. It was the desire of the United States that the negotiations be successfully concluded at the earliest possible moment and that the treaty become operative without the delay that would inevitably result were prior universal acceptance made a condition precedent to its coming into force. My Government felt, moreover, that if these Powers could agreed upon a simple renunciation of war as an instrumtnt of national policy, there could be no doubt that most if not all the other Powers of the world would find the formula equally acceptable and would hasten to lend their unqualified support to so impressive a movement for the perpetuation of peace. The United States has, however, been anxious from the beginning that no state should feel deprived of an opportunity to participate promptly in the new treaty and thus not only align itself formally and solemnly with this new manifestation of the popular demand for world peace but also avail itself of the identical benefits enjoyed by the original signatories Accordingly, in the draft treaty proposed by it, the United States made specific provision for participation in the treaty by any and every Power desiring to identify itself therewith and this same provision is found in the definitive instrument signed to-day in Paris. It will also be observed that the Powers signing the treaty have recorded in the preamble their hope that every nation of the world will participate in the treaty and in that connection I am happy to be able to report that my Government has already received from several Governments informal indications that they are prepared to do so at the earliest possible moment. This convincing evidence of the world wide interest and sympathy which the new treaty has evoked is most gratifying to all the Governments concerned.

In these circumstances I have the honour formally to communicate to Your Excellency for your consideration, and for the approval of your Government, if it concurs therein, the text of the above-mentioned treaty as signed to-day in Paris, omitting only that part of the preamble which names the several plenipotentiaries. The text is as follows:

"The President of the German Reich, the President of the United States of America, His Majesty the King of the Belgians, the President of the French Republic, His Majesty the King of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, His Majesty the King of Italy, His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, the President of the Republic of Poland, the President of the Czecho-Slovakian Republic, deeply sensible of their solemn duty to promote the welfare of mankind;

"Persuaded that the time has come when a frank prescription of war as an instrument of national policy should be made to the end that the peaceful and friendly relations now existing between their peoples may be perpetuated;

"Convinced that all changes in the relations with one another should be sought only by pacific means and be the result of peaceful and orderly process and that any signatory Power which shall hereafter seek to promote its national interests by resort to war should be denied the benefits furnished by this treaty;

"Hopeful that encouraged by their example all the other nations of the world will join in this humane endeavour and by adhering to the present treaty as soon as it comes into force, bring their peoples within the scope of its beneficent provisions, thus uniting the civilized nations of the world in a common renunciation of war as an instrument of their national policy:

"Have decided to conclude a treaty and for that purpose have appointed as their respective plenipotentiaries (here follows the list of plenipotentiaries) who, having communicated to one another their full powers found in good and due form have agreed upon the following articles:

"Article I.—First, solemnly declare in the name of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the solution of international controversies, and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another.

"Article II.—The High Contracting Parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes of conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means.

Article III.—The present treaty shall be ratified by the High Contracting Parties named in the preamble in accordance with their respective constitutional requirements, and shall take effect as between them as soon as all their several instruments of ratification shall have been deposited at Washington.

"This treaty shall, when it has come into effect as prescribed in the preceding paragraph, remain open as long as may be necessary for adherence by all the other Powers of the world. Every instrument evidencing the adherence of a Power shall be deposited at Washington and the treaty shall immediately upon its deposit become effective as between the Power thus adhering and the other Powers parties hereto.

"It shall be the duty of the Government of the United States to furnish each Government named in the preamble and every Government subsequently adhering to this treaty with a certified copy of the treaty and of every instrument of ratification or adherence. It shall also be the duty of the Government of the United States telegraphically to notify such Governments immediately upon the deposit with it of each instrument of ratification or adherence.

"In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed this treaty in the French and English languages, both texts having equal force, and hereunto affixed their seals.

"Done at Paris the 27th day of August in the year one thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight."

The provisions regarding ratification and adherence are, as Your Excellency will observe, found in the third and last Article. That Article provides that the treaty shall take effect as soon as the ratifications of all the Powers named in the preamble shall have been deposited in Washington and that it shall be open to adherence by all the other Powers of the world, instruments evidencing such adherence to be deposited in Washington also. Any Power desiring to participate in the treaty may thus exercise the right to adhere thereto and my Government will be happy to receive at any time appropriate notices of adherence from those Governments wishing to contribute to the success of this new movement for world peace by bringing their peoples within its beneficent scope. It will be noted, in this connection that, the treaty expressly provides that when it has once come into force it shall take effect immediately between an adhering Power and the other Parties thereto, and it is therefore clear that any Government adhering promptly will fully share in the benefits of the treaty at the very moment it comes into effect.

I shall shortly transmit for Your Excellency's convenient reference a printed pamphlet containing the text in translation of M. Briand's original proposal to my Government of June 20, 1927, and the complete record of the subsequent diplomatic correspondence on the subject of a multilateral treaty for the renunciation of war. I shall also transmit, as soon as received from my Government, a certified copy of the signed treaty.

I avail myself of this opportunity to extend to Your Excellency the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

2.—CHINA'S ACCEPTANCE.

Nanking, Sept. 13, 1928.

Excellency:

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your communication dated August 27 in which the Government of the United States of America presents for my consideration and for the approval of my Government the text of a treaty that was signed on the same day in Paris by the Governments of Germany, the United States of America, Belgium, France, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Irish Free State, India, Italy, Japan, Poland, and Szecho-Slovakia binding them to renounce war as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another and to seek only by pacific means the settlement or solution of all disputes which may arise among them.

"The ideals which are embodied in this treaty of extraordinary significance are the foundation on which the national life of the Chinese people is constructed and I wish, therefore, immediately to avail myself of this opportunity to inform you that this impressive movement for the perpetuation of universal peace and for the advancement of world civilization, aroused our sympathetic interest from the very beginning and that in its present form as a definitive treaty, my Government has decided to adhere to it without delay.

The Chinese Government and people feel deeply confident that the interdependence of the different nations of the world is making it increasingly manifest to all thinking minds that the renunciation of war and a frank avowal of the need of friendly relations is the only means to save civilization from the danger of destruction. We are, indeed, brought before the supreme test whether, after those painful experiences of a few years ago which still linger in our memory, we are not yet convinced of the absolute necessity of a real spirit of mutual co-operation to guide us in our national policies towards one another. It is therefore a source of profound satisfaction to see that this action of momentous importance, so ably sponsored by the United States of America, is receiving universal response.

As you are aware, the whole conception of life among our people centres round the ideal of harmony. It is indeed difficult, if not impossible, to find in all our thinkers a view of life which justifies conflict in any form as the basis of a national policy, and I venture to think that it is this idea of harmony and peace which accounts for the stability of our civilization and the extraordinary length of our history. The present treaty to renounce war is, in fact, a vindication of the teachings of our revered ancestors, and especially as these teachings, which have been amplified by our late leader, Dr. Sun Yat-sen, so clearly embodied in such noble principles as Universal Justice and The Brotherhood of Nations, are also at the present moment being applied in the building up of a new China, the Chinese people are prepared to join with America and the other signatory Powers with more than the usual enthusiasm in endeavouring to attain the noble ends of peace.

We are deeply sensible, however, that in order to make war really impossible, it is necessary to eliminate all causes which are likely to give rise to any international dispute, and rigidly to uphold the principle of equality and mutual respect for territorial sovereignty among all nations. My Government, therefore, firmly believes that all the signatory Powers will abide by the spirit of the present treaty and remove, at the earliest opportunity, all of China's unequal treaties and encroachments upon her sovereignty, as for instance, the stationing of large numbers of alien troops on her soil. For it is clear that a free and independent China is one of the most vital factors whereby permanent world peace may be promoted and strengthened.

I avail myself of this opportunity to extend to you the assurance of my highest consideration.

Minister for Foreign Affairs.

EXTRATERRITORIALITY.

On April 27, 1929, the Minister for Foreign Affairs addressed Notes to the British, American, Brazilian, Dutch, French and Norwegian Envoys urging the early abolition of extraterritoriality. The Notes were similar in wording, those addressed to the British, American and French Ministers being identical.

The text of the Notes to the British, American and French Ministers is as follows:—

Nanking.
April 27, 1929.

Your Excellency:

I have the honour to recall to Your Excellency that the Chinese Government, through its representatives, had had occasion to express at the Paris Peace Conference its strong desire for the removal of limitations on China's jurisdictional sovereignty imposed upon her by the old treaty concluded between China and the foreign Powers and that the Chinese Delegation emphatically reiterated the same desire at the Washington Conference, which placed on record its sympathetic disposition towards furthering the aspiration of China for the removal of restrictions on her political, jurisdictional and administrative freedom of action.

With the unification of China and the establishment upon a firm foundation of the National Government, a new era has been happily inaugurated in the relations between our two countries through the conclusion of the recent Tariff Treaty, and it is to be confidently hoped that the material well-being of our two countries will henceforth be greatly enhanced. But it is the belief and the conviction of the Chinese Government that the promotion of such material well-being will be accelerated by a readjustment of the relations between our two countries on a basis of friendly equality in matters of jurisdiction, and if Your Excellency's Government could see its way to meet the wishes of the Chinese Government and people in this regard, it is certain that another obstacle to the full and frank co-operation, in trade or otherwise, between the Chinese people and foreign nationals in this country would be happily removed and that the desire of the Chinese Government for promoting to the fullest extent the material interests of all who choose to associate themselves with our own people would find its early realization.

It goes without saying that extraterritoriality in China is a legacy of the old regime, which has not only ceased to be adaptable to the present-day conditions, but has become so detrimental to the smooth working of the judicial and administrative machinery of China that her progress as a member of the Family of Nations has been unnecessarily retarted. The inherent defects and inconveniences of the system of consular jurisdiction have been most clearly pointed out by the Chinese Government on various occasions and also by the jurists and publicists of other countries in their official utterances a ell as in their academic discussions. It is a matter for sincere regret that, hile many Governments which are playing an important role in internaonal affairs are eager and persistent in their endeavour to promote geniune iendship and harmony among nations, such anachronistic practices as only nd to mar the friendly relations between the Chinese people and foreign ationals should be allowed to exist at a time when justice and equity are pposed to govern the relations of nations.

With the close contact between China and the foreign Powers, the assiilation of western legal conceptions by Chinese jurists and incorporation western legal principles in Chinese jurisprudence have proceeded very pidly. In addition to the numerous codes and laws now in force, the Civil ode and the Commercial code have reached the final stage of preparation nd will be ready for promulgation before January 1st, 1930. Courts and risons, along modern lines, have been established, and are being established, roughout the whole country.

Inasmuch as doubt has been entertained with regard to the advisability relinquishing extraterritorial privileges at this juncture by the interested owers, it may be pointed out that certain countries, having ceased to enjoy xtraterritorial privileges in China, have found satisfaction in the protection ven to their nationals by Chinese law and have had no cause for complaint at their interests have been in any way prejudiced. Your Excellency's overnment may, therefore, rest assured that the legitimate rights and inrests of your nationals will not be unfavourably affected in the least by the linquishment of the exceptional privileges which they now possess.

As Your Excellency's Government has always maintained a friendly attide towards China and has always shown its readiness in the adoption of easures for the removal of limitations on China's sovereignity, I am happy express to Your Excellency, on behalf of the Chinese Government, the esire of China to have the restrictions on her jurisdictional sovereignty reoved at the earliest possible date and confidently hope that Your Excellency's overnment will take this desire of China into immediate and sympathetic nsideration and favour me with an early reply so that steps may be taken enable China, now unified and with a strong Central Government, to rightlly assume jurisdiction over all nationals within her domain.

I avail myself of this opportunity to renew to Your Excellency the asrnce of my highest consideration.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.

THE AMERICAN REPLY.

Peking, Aug. 10, 1929.

is Excellency
Dr. Chengting T. Wang,
Minister for Foreign Affairs,

xcellency:

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the Chinese Government's ote of April 27th in which there is expressed the desire that the United tates should relinquish the farther exercise of extraterritorial jurisdiction ver its citizens in China and the hope that the American Government will ake this desire into immediate and sympathetic consideration.

I am directed by my Government to state that it is prepared to give ympathetic consideration to the desires expressed by the Chinese Governnent, giving at the same time, as it must, due consideration to the responsiilities which rest upon the Government of the United States in connection with the problem of jurisdiction over the persons and property of American citizens in China. My Government, has, in fact, for some time past given constant and sympathetic consideration to the national aspirations of the people of China, and it has repeatedly given concrete evidence of its desire to promote the realization of these aspirations in so far as action of the United States may contribute to that result. As long ago as the year 1903, in Article 15 of the Treaty concluded in that year between the United States and China, the American Government agreed that it would be prepared to relinquish the jurisdiction which it exercised over its nationals in China "when satisfied that the state of the Chinese laws, the arrangements for their administration, and other considerations warrant it in so doing." As recently as last year, the American Government gave very definite evidence of its desire to promote the realization of China's aspirations by concluding with the Government of China, on July 23, 1928, a Treaty by which the two countries agreed to cancellation of provisions in earlier treaties whereby China's authority in reference to Customs duties on goods imported into China by American nationals had been restricted.

The exercise by the United States of jurisdiction over its citizens in China had its genesis in an early agreement that, because of differences between the customs of the two countries and peoples, and differences between their judicial systems, it would be wise to place upon the American Government the duty of extending to American nationals in China the restraints and the benefits of the system of jurisprudence to which they and their fellow nationals were accustomed in the United States.

My Government deems it proper at this point to remind the Government of China that this system of American jurisdiction as administered by the extraterritorial courts has never been extended by the United States beyond the purposes to which it was by the Treaties originally limited. Those purposes were the lawful control and protection of the persons and property of American citizens who have established themselves in China in good faith in accordance with the terms of the Treaties and with the knowledge and consent of China in the normal development of the commercial and cultural relations between the two countries. The United States has never sought to extend its sovereignty over any portion of the territory of China.

Under the provisions of the Treaty of 1844, and other agreements concluded thereafter which established that system, American citizens have lived and have carried on their legitimate enterprises in China with benefit both to the Chinese and to themselves. They have engaged extensively in cultural and in commercial enterprises involving large sums of money and extensive properties, and, as your Government has so graciously indicated in the Note under acknowledgement, there has grown up and existed between the peoples and the Governments of the two countries a friendship that has endured. The American Government believe that this condition of affairs has been due in large part to the manner in which the relations between the two peoples have been regulated under the provisions of these agreements, the existence of which has assured to the lives and property of American citizens in China the security so necessary to their growth and development.

For the safety of life and property, the development and continuance of legitimate and beneficial business depend in the last resort, in China, as elsewhere, upon the certainty of protection from injury or confiscation by a system of known law consistently interpreted and faithfully enforced by an independent judiciary. Where such protection fails, the life and liberty of the individual become subject to the constant threat of unlawful attack, while his property suffers the ever-present danger of confiscation in whole or in part through arbitrary administrative action. To exchange an assured and tried system of administration of justice, and under which it is acknowledged that life and property have been protected and commerce has grown and prospered, for uncertainties in the absence of an adequate body of law and of an experienced and independent judiciary would be fraught with danger in both of the foregoing respects.

My Government has instructed me to say that the statement of the inister of Foreign Affairs of China, telegraphed to the press of the United tates on July 26th, to the effect that "all foreign interests in China purely r legitimate purposes will be duly respected" has been noted by it with easure as indicating that the Government of China has not failed to appreate the value to its foreign relations of the factors above mentioned. My overnment bids me add that it is therefore persuaded that the Government China will concur in its belief based as it is upon the facts set forth in cceeding paragraphs, that the sudden abolition of the system of protection its extraterritorial courts in the face of conditions prevailing in China -day would in effect expose the property of American citizens to danger of lawful seizure and place in jeopardy the liberty of the persons of American tizens.

The Chinese Government has, on several occasions during recent years, xpressed the desire that the Powers relinquish the exercise of extraterritorial risdiction over their citizens In the Note under acknowledgment reference made to the position taken at the Washington Conference. It will be reilled that, in pursuance of the resolution adopted at that Conference, there as created a Commission to inquire into the present practice of extraterriorial jurisdiction in China and into the laws and the judicial system and the ethods of judicial administration of China, and that, under date of Septnber 16, 1926, that Commission made its report. This report contained an ccount of the conditions then prevailing in the judicial system of China, as eil as a number of recommendations carefully suggested as indicating the hanges and improvements which would be necessary before there would be dequately developed a system of known law and an independent judiciary apable of justly controlling and protecting the lives and property of the tizens of foreign countries doing business in China. Your Government will ecall that the Commission on Extraterritoriality which made these recomendations was composed of representatives from thirteen countries including oth China and the United States and that its recommendations thoughtfully nd reasonably conceived were unanimously adopted and were signed by all f the Commissioners.

Because of its friendship for the Chinese people and its desire, to which llusion has been already made, to relinquish as soon as possible extraterriorial jurisdiction over its own citizens in China, my Government has followed ith attentive consideration this entire subject, including particularly the rogress which has been made in carrying out its recommendations since the endition of this report.

It fully appreciates the efforts which are being made in China to assimilate hose western judical principles to which your Government has referred in ts Note, but it would be lacking in sincerity and candour, as well as disreardful of its obligations towards its own nationals, if it did not frankly point ut that the recommendations aforesaid have not been substantially carried out nd that there does not exist in China to-day a system of independent Chinese ourts free from extraneous influence which is capable of adequately doing ustice between Chinese and foreign litigants. My Government believes that ot until these recommendations are fulfilled in far greater measure than is he case to-day will it be possible for American citizens safely to live and do usiness in China and for their property adequately to be protected without he intervention of the consular courts.

In conclusion, my Government has directed me to state that it observes ith attentive and sympathetic interest the changes which are taking place n China. Animated as it is by the most friendly motives and wishing as ar as lies within Government power to be helpful, the American Government would be ready, if the suggestion should meet with the approval of the Chinese Government, to participate in negotiations which would have as their object he devising of a method for the gradual relinquishment of extraterritorial rights, either as to designated territorial areas, or as to particular kinds of jurisdiction, or as to both, provided, that such gradual relinquishment proceeds at the same time as steps are taken and improvements are achieved by the Chinese Government in the enactment and effective enforcement of laws based on modern concepts of jurisprudence.

I avail myself of this opportunity to extend to Your Excellency the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

(Signed) J. V. A. MacMurray.

BRITISH REPLY.

British Legation, Peking, at Peitaiho,

Sir,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Note of April 27th in which you inform me of the desire of the National Government of the Republic of China that the restrictions imposed on the jurisdictional sovereignty of China by the system of extraterritoriality now in force should be removed at the earliest possible date with a view to the assumption of jurisdiction by China over all nationals in her domain.

2. I have communicated the contents of your letter to my Government and I am now instructed to transmit to you a reply in the following sense:

3. Animated by the friendly feelings which they have always entertained towards the Government and people of China His Majesty's Government have given their sympathetic consideration to the request of the Chinese Government relating to the abolition of extraterritorial jurisdiction in China.

The high importance of this subject in its bearing both on the political development of China and the future relations between China and Great Britain appears to demand that it should be closely examined from every aspect. In particular a just appreciation of the reasons for which and the manner in which the present system of extraterritoriality came into existence seems essential to a consideration of the proper method for dealing with the problem.

4. The system of extraterritoriality in force in China has its root deep down in the past. For thousands of years before science had improved communications, the Chinese people were secluded from the rest of the world by deserts and the ocean and they developed a civilisation and a policy peculiar to themselves. A wide gulf was thus fixed between Europe and America on the one hand and China on the other.

5. In particular the conception of international relations as being intercourse between equal and independent states—a conception which was woven into the very texture of the political ideas of the nations of the West—was entirely alien to Chinese modes of thought When traders of the West first found their way to the coast of China, the Chinese Government found it difficult to allow them freely to enter into their country and mingle with their people nor did they recognise that the nations to which they belonged were the equals of China. These traders were therefore confined to a small section of a single city in one corner of the Empire and while on the one hand they were subjected to many disabilities and to grave humiliations, on the other hand, by a species of amorphous and unregulated extraterritoriality, which was the natural outcome of these conditions, the responsibility of managing their own affairs and maintaining order amongst themselves was in some measure left to their own initiative.

6. Relations continued for many years upon this insecure and unsatisfactory footing. Friction was often dangerously intense and conflicts not infrequently arose, generally out of demands that some innocent person should be surrendered for execution to expirate perhaps an accidental homicide or that foreign authority should assume the responsibility for enforcing the revenue laws of China.

7. The object of the first treaties was to secure recognition by China of Great Britain's equality with herself and to define and regulate the extraterritorial status of British subjects. Relations between the two countries having thus been placed on a footing of equality and mutual respect, Great Britain was content that her nationals should continue to bear those responsibilities and to labour under those disabilities which respect for the sovereignty of China entailed upon them. Conditions did not permit the general opening of the interior of China and the residence of foreigners has consequently continued down to the present day to be restricted to a limited number of cities known as Treaty Ports.

8. His Majesty's Government recognise the defects and inconveniences of the system of consular jurisdiction to which the Government of China have on various occasions drawn attention. In 1902 in Article 12 of the Treaty of Commerce between Great Britain and China signed in that year, His Majesty's Government stated their readiness to relinquish their extraterritorial rights when they were satisfied that the state of Chinese laws the arrangements for their administration and other considerations warranted them in so doing.

They have since watched with appreciation the progress which China has made in the assimilation of western legal principals to which reference is made in your Note under reply and they have observed with deep interest the facts set out and recommendations made in the report of the Commission on Extraterritoriality in the year 1926.

9. More recently in the declaration which they published in December 1926 and the proposals which they made to the Chinese authorities in January 1927 His Majesty's Government have given concrete evidence of their desire to meet in a spirit of friendship and sympathy the legitimate aspirations of the Chinese people. They have already travelled some distance along the road marked out in those documents and they are willing to examine in collaboration with the Chinese Government the whole problem of extraterritorial jurisdiction with a view to ascertaining what further steps in the same direction it may be possible to take at the present time.

10. His Majesty's Government would however observe that the promulgation of codes embodying Western legal principles represents only one portion of the task to be accomplished before it would be safe to abandon in their entirety the special arrangements which have hitherto regulated the residence of foreigners in China. In order that those reforms should become a living reality it appears to His Majesty's Government to be necessary that Western legal principles should be understood and be found acceptable by the people at large, no less than by their rulers, and that the Courts which administer these laws should be free from interference and dictation at the hands, not only of military chiefs, but of groups and associations who either set up arbitrary and illegal tribunals of their own or attempt to use legal courts for the furtherance of political objects rather than for the administration of equal justice between Chinese and Chinese and between Chinese and foreigners. Not until these conditions are fulfilled in a far greater measure than appears to be the case to-day will it be practicable for British merchants to reside, trade and own property throughout the territories of China with the same equality of freedom and safety as these privileges are accorded to Chinese merchants in Great Britain. Any agreement purporting to accord with privileges to British merchants would remain for some time to come a mere paper agreement to which it would be impossible to give effect in practice. Any attempt prematurely to accord such privileges would not only be of no benefit to British merchants but might involve the Government and people of China in political and economic difficulties

11. So long as these conditions subsist there appears to be no practicable alternative to maintaining though perhaps in a modified form the Treaty Port system that has served for nearly a century to regulate intercourse between China and British subjects with her domain. Some system of extraterritoriality is the natural corollary for the maintenance of the Treaty Port system and the problem as it present itself to His Majesty's Government at the present moment is to discover what further modifications in that system beyond those already made and alluded to above it would be desirable and practicable to effect.

12. His Majesty's Government await further proposals from the National Government as to the procedure now to be adopted for examining this question and they instruct me to assure Your Excellency that they will continue to maintain towards any such proposals the same friendly and helpful attitude to which Your Excellency has paid so generous a tribute in the concluding paragraph of your Note under reply.

I avail myself of this opportunity to renew to Your Excellency the assurance of my highest consideration.

FRENCH REPLY.

The following is the English translation of the reply of the French Government to China's Note concerning the abolition of extraterritoriality:

August 10, 1929.

Monsieur le Ministre,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the note dated April 27 in which you express the hope that the French Government would take into immediate and favourable consideration the desire of the Chinese Government to be enabled to exercise its jurisdiction over all nationals residing in China.

Having taken note of this communication which has been the object of its careful attention, the French Government authorizes me to recall to Your Excellency that during the Washington Conference it gave voluntarily its approval to the resolution of December 10, 1921, according to the terms of which an international Commission was established to study the question of extraterritoriality in China.

This Commission, in its report of September 16, 1926, made recommendations, the application of which, might, in its judgment, permit the Powers to relinquish extraterritoriality.

Taking into consideration the facts stated by the said Commission, the French Government considers that, in order to realize the conditions favourable for the renunciation of extraterritorial rights enjoyed by its nationals in virtue of the treaty of 1858, it is indispensable that the Chinese Government proceed to the reform of its laws, its judicial institutions and its method of judicial administration, in conformity with the recommendations of the Commission, recommendations to which the Chinese Delegate has given his approval. It is when these reforms have been carried out and effectively put into practice that the rights of residence, of property owning and trade throughout the whole of China, the necessary counterpart of the relinquishment of extraterritoriality, might constitute for the French nationals a real advantage equivalent to that which the Chinese enjoy in France.

The French Government, animated by the friendly feelings which it was always cherished towards the Chinese people and of which another proof was given last year by the signing of the Tariff Autonomy Treaty, has no doubt that the Chinese Government will make every effort to fulfill the conditions necessary to the examination of the problem of extraterritoriality.

It is in this spirit that the French Government, faithful to its liberal traditions, has authorized me to give you assurance that it will continue to take an active interest in the reforms to that end which remain to be accomplished and that it will carefully note all the facts which tend to show that these reforms are effectively carried out in the administration and judicial practice of the Government authorities and the people of China.

On the other hand, the French Government will not fail to avail itself of the opportunities as they arise to co-operate profitably with Chinese authorities in the endeavour to hasten a state of affairs which would permit it to modify with the necessary guarantees the present jurisdictional status of the French nationals in China.

THE NETHERLANDS' REPLY.

The following is the English translation of the reply of the Netherlands Government to China's note concerning the abolition of extraterritoriality.

Légation des Pays-Bas,

Peking, Aug. 10. 1929.

Monsieur le Ministre,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's Note of April 27 last in which the Chinese Government expresses the hope that Her Majesty's Government would take into sympathetic consideration the desire of China to come to an agreement by which the limitation on China's jurisdictional sovereignty will be removed and which will enable the Chinese Government to assume jurisdiction over all nationals within its domain.

Your Excellency expressed the conviction that the reciprocal advantages resulting from the tariff convention recently concluded between our two countries would be considerably enhanced if the relations between our two countries were regulated on the basis of equality in matters of jurisdiction, and that by the abolition of the system of consular jurisdiction an obstacle would be removed for the full co-operation between the Chinese people and foreign nationals especially in commercial matters; the desire of the Chinese Government for promotig the material interests of all who choose to associate themselves with the Chinese people would in that case find its early realization.

Her Majesty's Government has given this request its most careful consideration, and now instructs me to inform Your Excellency that just as it was happy to join the other powers in bringing about the Resolution adopted on December 10th 1921 by the Washington Conference on the Limitation of Armaments, which placed on record its sympathetic disposition towards China's aspiration, so it will be pleased to co-operte with these Powers and with China for the realization and fulfilment of China's desire with regard to the question of jurisdiction.

It may here be recalled that with this end in view Her Majest's Government wholeheartedly participated in the work of the International Commission which was instituted as a result of the above-mentioned Resolution and which drew up a number of valuable recommendations for the benefit of the Chinese Government.

It cannot be gainsaid that there exists a close relationship between the internal situation of China, the guarantees which the laws offer to foreign rights and interests and their administration in the whole of China on the one hand, and the measure of progress which it will be possible to make on the road to abolition of the special arrangements now in force with regard to foreigners on the other. The possibility for Netherlands subjects to enjoy liberty of trade, of residence and of the exercise of civil rights including that of owing property throughout the whole of China is in the same way closely connected with the degree of security existing in the interior of the country and with the question of what safeguards the Chinese judicial institutions offer with a view to their independence and their immunity from interference by military and political authorities.

I am desired by Her Majesty's Government to assure with Excellency of its unalterable sympathy towards China with regard to this question and of its readiness when the introduction and the effective acceptance by the country of modern institutions guaranteeing the administration of just laws by an independent and unassailable judiciary will have rendered useful reforms possible in the matter of jurisdiction over Netherlands nationals, to act in unison with the Governments of the Powers who were represented at the Conference of Washington with the object object of examining the possibility of meeting the aspiration to which the Chinese Delegation at the said Conference gave expression and which is reiterated in Your Excellency's Note under reply.

I avail myself, etc.,

NORWEGIAN REPLY.

The following is the English translation of the reply of the Norwegian Government to China's Note concerning the abolition of extraterritoriality.

Légation de Norvége
Peking, Aug. 14, 1929.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's note of April 27 expressing on behalf of the Chinese Government the desire of China to have the restriction on her jurisdictional sovereignty removed and the hope that the Norwegian Government will take this desire into immediate and sympathetic consideration in order to enable China to assume jurisdiction over all nationals within her domain

Having communicated the contents of the Note to my Government I am now instructed to recall to Your Excellency that the Norwegian Government has already, in concluding, on November 12 last year, a new treaty with the Chinese Government, given concrete evidence of the friendly feeling which Norway has always entertained towards China and the Chinese people.

My Government now desires me to reiterate, the assurance, already expressed on that occasion, that the same friendly feelings will not be found to have changed when the question of revising other clauses of the treaty of 1847 between Norway and China is brought up for discussion.

As to the question of removing the restrictions on China's jurisdictional sovereignty (by relinquishing the consular jurisdiction) this question was already given sympathetic consideration when, in 1926, a Norwegian delegate joined the international Commission to inquire into extraterritorial jurisdiction in China.

I may add that the administration of the Norwegian jurisdiction in China has never been extended beyond the purpose for which it was introduced, and I am directed to state in conclusion that my Government has no desire to maintain the Consular Court longer than considered necessary and is prepared to abolish the same when all the other Treaty Powers will do so.

CHINESE REPLY TO AMERICA.

Monsieur le Ministre:

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's Note of August 10th in which you are good enough to transmit to me the views of your Government in regard to the request of the Chinese Government, contained in my Note of April 27, for the removal of restrictions on China's jurisdictional sovereignty.

The Chinese Government is pleased to be reminded by the American Government that it has, for some time past, given constant and sympathetic consideration to the national aspirations of the people of China and that it has repeatedly given concrete evidence of its desire to promote the realisation of those aspirations. The traditional friendship between China and America has not only a common material basis, but is also deeply rooted in the idealism which is common to the Chinese and the American people. The American people, with their love of liberty, their zeal for justice, their desire to further the advance of civilisation and their sympathy for the aspirations of nations in their spiritual re-birth all of which reveal unmistakably the noble attitude of the American mind, have aroused the admiration and won the love of the Chinese people. This idealism has manifested itself in the abolition of slavery, the growth of democracy, and the endeavour to establish a reign of universal peace, which has given a new hope to the human race. It is this idealism that accounts for the steadfastness of the American Government and people in their friendship for China through all the vicissitudes of her fortunes. It is again this idealism that has prompted the American Government to give sympathetic consideration to the desire of the Chinese Government in connection with the question of jurisdiction and to decide to enter into negotiations for the devising of a method leading to the eventual abolition of Extraterritorial privileges.

It seems to me, however, from a careful consideration of your Note that the America Government is not yet free from misgivings as to the safety of American lives and property after the abolition of Extraterritoriality. The American Government is undoubtedly aware of the fact that the liberty of American citizens and the security of their property rights do not so much depend upon the continued exercise of jurisdiction by their own Consular Courts, as upon the timely removal of hindrances to the free and full assertion of China's sovereign rights. Extraterritorial privileges, while apparently beneficial to foreigners in China in giving the impression of security and safety, have really had the most injurious effect on their relations with the Chinese by producing in the latter the feeling of humiliation and a sense of resentment which have always caused mutual suspicion and the consequent loss of mutual confidence, thus undermining the very foundations of friendly relations and not infrequently giving rise to complications and conflicts. Such conflicts and complications could be easily avoided were there none of those special privileges. In this connexion, it may be pointed out that towards nationals of certain countries who have lost their extraterritorial privileges and have submitted to the jurisdiction of China, the Chinese people enterian the most friendly feelings and repose in them great confidence, a valuable asset, it will be admitted, in the intercourse, commercial or otherwise, of any two peoples. Such marked difference in the relations between Chinese and nationals of Extraterritorial Powers on the one hand and those between the Chinese and the nationals of non-extraterritorial Powers on the other will, as long as the extraterritorial system is retained, become more and more pronounced, and much as the Chinese Government may try to discountenance this difference of attitude on the part of its citizens, it will not be within its powers to control the natural expression of their feelings.

In the event, however, of American citizens relinquishing their Extraterritorial privileges, they may rest assured that they will enjoy the same confidence of the Chinese people and hence the same material benefits as the nationals of non-extraterritorial Powers. Moreover, the Chinese Government will continue to exercise, in accordance with the well established principle of international law, due diligence in preventing any possible violations of the private rights of American citizens and perform its duty, in the fullest possible measure, in all matters relating to the redress of wrongs.

In your Note under acknowledgment reference is made to the report of the Commission on Extraterritoriality submitted to the interested Governments pursuant to a resolution adopted at the Washington Conference. The American Government must be aware of the fact that since the completion of that report, conditions in China have greatly changed, and in particular both the political and judicial systems have assumed a new aspect. To pass judgment on the present state of law and judicial administration in China in the light of what is contained in the report of 1926 is doing no justice to the steadfast policy of the National Government.

At this point, it may be worth while to recall the circumstances under which the American Government renounced its rights under the Capitulations with Turkey. The Chinese judicial system, it will be admitted, does not suffer the least in comparison with that of Turkey at the time of the abolition of the Capitulations. And yet the American Government, realising that the Turkish people, with legitimate aspirations and under the guidance of a new and strong Government, could accomplish great things in a short space of time, had the wisdom and foresight to relinquish its special privileges similar to those enjoyed hitherto by its nationals in China, and has had the satisfaction to find that the life and property of American citizens in Turkey have subsequently received full and adequate protection. The American Government, which did full justice to the Turkish people in the matter of jurisdiction without any apprehension and with satisfactory results, will no doubt solve the problem of Extraterritoriality in China in the same friendly and sympathetic spirit.

It has been perhaps brought to the knowledge of the American Government that the Chinese Government has recently concluded treaties with several other Powers which have agreed to relinquish Extraterritoriality on January 1, 1930. If it had appeared to the Government of those Powers, as it appears to the American Government, that there did not yet exist in this country a judiciary capable of rendering justice to their nationals and a body of laws adequate to give protection to their lives and property, they would certainly have refused to give up their privileged position and enter into the engagements they have made. Now that many of the Powers which participated in the discussions of Extraterritoriality at the Washington Conference have already shown by an overt act that that system has outlived its usefulness and should be replaced by one in harmony with the actual state of things, there is no reason why the United States, upon which fell the honour of initiating the labours of that Conference, should not act in unison with those Powers, thus removing the difficulties which the Chinese Government might otherwise encounter in extending jurisdiction over all foreign nationals.

It is the hope of the Chinese Government that whatever misgivings and apprehensions the American Government may have in considering the subject under discussion will be now dispelled, and that, in the further examination of this subject, it will be actuated by much weighter considerations, namely, the enhancement of friendship between the Chinese and the American people, and hence the promotion of the material interests of both. It is with this last object in view that the Chinese Government now requests the American Government to enter into immediate discussions with the authorised representative of the Chinese Government for making the necessary arrangements whereby Extraterritoriality in China will be abolished to the mutual satisfaction of both Governments.

"I avail myself, etc.,

WANG CHENGTING."

CHINESE REPLY TO FRANCE.

Nanking, September 7, 1929.

onsieur le Ministre,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's Note August 10th in which you are good enough to transmit to me the views of our Government in regard to the request of the Chinese Government, contained in my Note of April 27th for the removal of restrictions on China's risdictional Government.

The Chinese Government is pleaded to be reminded by the French Government that it gave another proof of the friendly feelings it always entertained wards the Chinese people by signing the Tariff Autonomy Treaty last year. he friendship between China and France rests not only on common material terests, but also on close cultural ties and the ideals which have been an nfailing source of inspiration both to the Chinese and the French people in eir political evolution. It is therefore with pleasure that the Chinese overnment takes note of the sympathetic response of the French Government the desire of China expressed in my last Note.

In your Note under acknowledgment, however, reference is made to the eport of the Commission on Extraterritoriality submitted to the interested overnments, pursuant to a resolution adopted at the Washington Conference. he French Government is undoubtedly aware of the fact that since the mpletion of that report, conditions in China have greatly changed, and, particular, both the political and judicial systems have assumed a new spect. To pass judgment on the present state of laws and judicial administraon in China in the light of what is contained in the Report of 1926 is doing o justice to the steadfast policy of the National Government.

Furthermore, it may be worth while to recall the circumstances under hich the French Government renounced its rights under the Capitulations ith Turkey. The Chinese judicial system, it will be admitted, does not suffer he least in comparison with that of Turkey at the time of the abolition f the Capitulations. And yet the French Government, realizing that the urkish people with legitimate aspirations and under the guidance of a new nd strong Government could accomplish great things in a short space of me, had the wisdom and foresight to relinquish its special privileges similar o those enjoyed hitherto by its nationals in China and has had the satisfaction o find that the life and property of French citizens in Turkey have subsequently eceived full and adequate protection. The French Government which did ull justice to the Turkish people in the matter of jurisdiction without any pprehensions and with satisfactory results will no doubt solve the problem of xtraterritoriality in China in the same friendly and sympathetic spirit.

It has been perhaps brought to the knowledge of the French Government hat the Chinese Government has recently concluded treaties with several other owers which have agreed to relinquish extraterritorial privileges on January st, 1930. If it had appeared to the Governments of those Powers, as it appears o the French Government, that there did not yet exist in this country a udiciary capable of rendering justice to their nationals and a body of laws dequate to give protection to their lives and property, they would certainly ave refused to give up their privileged position and enter into the engagenents they have made. Now that many of the Powers which participated in he discussions of Extraterritoriality of the Washington Conference have lready shown by an overt act that that system has outlived its usefulness and hould be replaced by one in harmony with the actual state of things, there is o reason why the French Government, which played an important part in the leliberation of that Conference, should not act in unison with those Powers, hus removing the difficulty which the Chinese Government might otherwise enounter in extending jurisdiction over all foreign nationals.

It is the hope of the Chinese Government that whatever misgiving and apprehensions the French Government may have in considering the subject under discussion will be now dispelled, and that, in the further examination of this subject, it will be actuated by much weightier considerations, namely the enhancement of friendship between the Chinese and the French people, and hence the promotion of the material interests of both. BELGIAN CONCESSION AT TIENTSIN

Agreement for Rendition.

The Belgian Government being desirous, with a view to strengthening the bonds of friendship existing between Belgium and China, to restore on its own initiative and without compensation to the National Government of the Republic of China the Belgian Concession in Tientsin which was granted to it by the Sino-Belgian Convention of February 6th, 1902 (28th day of the 12th month of the 27th year of Kuang Hsu), the two Governments have for this purpose appointed their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

His Excellency the President of the National Government of the Republic of China:

Dr. Ping Ling, Adviser of the Commission of the ministry of Foreign Affairs;

Mr. Kwang-ting Chao, Section Chief of the Land Department of the Ministry of the Interior;

Mr. H. H. Tcheng, Commissioner of the First Special Area in Tientsin;

Dr. Tzong Fah Hwang, Minister Plenipotentiary, Attorney at Law;

His Majesty the King of the Belgians:

Baron Jules Guillaume, Counsellor of Legation, Chevalier de Leopold;

Who, having communicated to each other their respective full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed upon the following Articles:

Article I.—The Belgian Government will restore to the National Government of the Republic of China, on the day of the coming into force of the present Agreement, the administration of the Belgian Concession in Tientsin which was granted to it by the Sino-Belgian Convention of February 6th, 1902 (28th day of the 12th month of the 27th year of Kingdom Hsu). The said Convention and contract relating thereto shall cease to be operative.

Article II.—The Provisional Belgian Municipal Council of the said Concession shall cease to exist on the day of the coming into force of the present Agreement.

All the documents, registers, and all other papers belonging to the Belgian Administration shall be immediately handed over to the National Government of the Republic of China, whereupon the Provisional Municipal Council will be entirely relieved of all responsibility for its administration.

Article III.—Beginning from the day of the coming into force of the present Agreement, the former Belgian Concession in Tientsin shall be entirely administered under Chinese laws and regulations and protected by the same. It shall likewise be subject to all Chinese imports and taxes in force.

Article IV.—All public properties of the Belgian Concession, such as wharfs, piers, roads, railways together with the land occupied by them, including block Q. lot b, in accordance with the map hereto annexed, and also machines, implements, furniture, police equipment, as per inventory list hereto attached, belonging to the Belgian Municipality, as well as the bank deposits of the Belgian Municipality, shall be handed over to the National Government of the Republic of China on the day of the coming into force of the present Agreement.

Article V.—The name and the status of the Societé Anonyme de la Concession Belge de Tientsin shall be modified in accordance with the new state of things and the provisions of Article 6 of the present Agreement shall equally be applicable thereto.

Article VI.—Within one month after the coming into force of the present Agreement, the title deeds and certificates of private property issued by the Belgian Consulate for land situated in the Belgian Concession shall be handed over to the Chinese authority concerned who shall issue in exchange certificates for perpetual lease. A registration fee of one dollar per mow shall be charged. The Chinese authority concerned will issue the new certificates within a period of a month.

Article VII.—The present Agreement shall be ratified as soon as possible and shall come into force on the day on which the two Governments shall have notified each other that the ratification has been effected.

Article VIII.—The present Agreement has been written in three languages, Chinese, French and English, and in case of divergence of interpretation the English text shall be authoritive.

In witness whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have siged the present Agreement in duplicate and have affixed their seals thereto.

Done at Tientsin this thirty first day of the eighth month of the eighteenth year of the Republic of China, corresponding to the thirty first day of August, nineteen hundred and twenty nine.

SINO-JAPANESE AGREEMENT

Article I.—The Chinese and the Japanese Governments agree that all matters relating to rates of duty on the import and export of articles, drawbacks, transit dues and tonnage dues in the territories of China and the territories of Japan shall be regulated exclusively by the laws of China and of Japan respectively.

Article II.—The Governments of China and of Japan shall reciprocally grant to each other and to the nationals of the other country, in customs duties, drawbacks and transit dues and all other similar internal charges, applied to the import and export of articles, and in tonnage dues, as well as in all matters connected therewith, treatment not less favourable than that accorded or to be accorded to its own nationals or to the Government and nationals of any other foreign country.

Articles produced or manufactured in the territories of China or of Japan and imported into the territories of the other, from whatever place arriving, shall receive, in import duties, drawbacks and transit dues and all other similar internal charges, and in all matters connected therewith, treatment not less favourable than that accorded or to be accorded to the like articles produced or manufactured in any other foreign country.

Articles produced or manufactured in the territories of China or of Japan and exported to the territories of the other shall receive, in export duties, drawbacks and transit dues and all other similar internal charges, and in all matters connected therewith, treatment not less favourable than that accorded or to be accorded to the like articles produced or manufactured in the same territories and exported to any other foreign country.

In regard to tonnage dues and all matters connected therewith vessels of China and of Japan shall each receive in the territories of the other treatment not less favourable than that accorded or to be accorded to the vessels of any other foreign country.

Article III.—The stipulations contained in the foregoing Articles as well as in the exchanged Notes annexed to the present Agreement shall be incorporated in, and form part of, a Treaty of Commerce and Navigation to be negotiated and concluded as soon as possible between the Republic of China and the Empire of Japan.

Article IV.—The Chinese, Japanese and English texts of this Agreement have been carefully compared and verified: but in the event of there being any difference of meaning between them, the sense as expressed in the English text shall be held to prevail.

Article V.—The present Agreement shall enter into force on the tenth day following the date of the signature thereof.

Done in duplicate at the city of Nanking, this sixth day of the fifth month of the nineteenth year of the Republic of China, corresponding to the sixth day of the fifth month of the fifth year of Showa.

Convention Regulating the Relations Between China and France Concerning French Indo-China and the Chinese Provinces Adjoining.

(Translation)

The National Government of the Republic of China and the Government of the Republic of France, animated by the desire to further consolidate the ties of friendship which happily subsist between the two countries, and to promote the commercial relations between China and French Indo-China, have decided to conclude a new Convention and have, for this purpose, named as their respective Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

The President of the National Government of the Republic of China: His Excellency Dr. Chengting T. Wang, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the National Government of the Republic of China;

The President of the Republic of France;

His Excellency Comte de Martel, Ambassador, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Republic of France to China, Commander of the Legion of Honour;

Who, having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following Articles:

Article I.—The Sino-French Commercial Convention of Tientsin of the twenty-second day of the third moon of the twelfth year of Kwang Hsu (April 25, 1886), the Additional Commercial Convention, signed at Peking on the sixth day of the fifth moon of the thirteen year of Kwang Hsu (June 26, 1887) together with the notes relating to this Convention exchanged at Peking on the third day of the fifth moon of the thirteenth year of Kwang Hsu (June 23, 1887), and the Supplementary Convention signed at Peking on the twenty-eighth day of the fifth moon of the twenty-first year of Kwang Hsu (June 20, 1895) are abrogated and cease to be operative. The provisions of Articles 4, 5 and 6 of the Treaty of Tientsin of the twenty-seventh day of the fourth moon of the eleventh year of Kwang Hsu (June 9, 1885) are also abrogated.

Article II.—The city of Lungchow of Kwangsi and those of Szemao, Hokow and Mengtze of Yunnan shall remain open to the trade across the land frontier of China and French Indo-China.

Article III.—The Chinese Government may send Consuls to Hanoi or Haiphong and to Saigon, cities of French Indo-China, and the French Government may continue to send Consuls to the localities mentioned in the preceding Article.

The heads and acting heads of Consulates and vice-Consulates, as well as the members of the Consular service shall be nationals of the country which appoints them. They shall not engage in commerce or industry.

Article IV.—Chinese nationals entering the territory of French Indo-China and French nationals of Indo-China entering the territory to China must be provided with passports issued by the competent authorities of their country of origin. Such passports shall be visaed by a Consulate of the country of destination or by the proper authorities of the said country.

The High Contracting Parties undertake to grant to each other, in conformity with their respective laws and regulations, the most-favoured-nation treatment with regard to the fulfilment of formalities, including those relating to identification, concerning (1) passports (2) the system of internal laissez-passer and visa for departure (3) the entry or departure of Chinese nationals and French nationals of Indo-China going to Indo-China or the three provinces of Yunnan, Kwangsi and Kwangtung.

Nothing is changed in the system of temporary or permanent passes issued to inhabitants of the frontier who are necessitated by their work or business to stay temporarily in or to go frequently to the territory of the other country in the neighbourhood of the boundary.

Article V.—The nationals of China in French Indo-China and the French nationals in the above-mentioned Chinese localities shall have the right to reside, travel and engage in industry or commerce. The treatment accorded to them for the exercise of such rights, in conformity with the laws and regulations in force in China or French Indo-China, shall in no way be less favourable than that of the nationals of any other Power.

The nationals of China in French Indo-China and the French nationals in the above specified Chinese localities shall not be subjected to taxes, imposts or contributions higher or other than those to which nationals of the most-favoured-nation may be subjected.

Article VI.—Chinese goods exported from any Chinese port and transported without transhipment or with a through bill of lading to the Provinces of Yunnan, Kwangsi or Kwangtung and using the territory of Tonking, shall enjoy a preferential treatment and shall not be subjected to the transit duty of the general tariff.

They will only pay a duty of 1% ad valorem.

Likewise, Chinese goods exported from the Provinces of Yunnan, Kwangsi and Kwangtung to any authorized destination and using the territory of Tonkin shall enjoy a preferential treatment and shall not be subjected to the transit duty of the general tariff.

Minerals of any kind, raw tin, and raw hides, as well as articles hereafter set down or to be set down subsequently in List A annexed to the present Convention shall be exempted from all duties. Other goods shall pay a duty of 1% ad valorem.

War materials, arms and ammunitions which the National Government may desire to transport in transit over the territory of Tonkin shall be exempted from all duties.

Indo-Chinese vessels, excepting warships and vessels for the transportation of troops, arms and ammunitions, may ply between Lang Son and Caobang by way of the rivers Long Ki Kong and Long Ban Giang which connect Lang Son with Lungchou and Caobang. Such vessels and the goods transported on them in transit shall be exempted from the payment of any duties for their entry in China.

Article VII.—The two Governments respectively undertake not to establish upon the importation, exportation or transit in French Indo-China and the three Provinces of Yunnan, Kwangsi and Kwangtung, any prohibition or restriction which is not immediately applicable to other countries.

The two Governments, however, reserve to themselves the right of imposing any prohibitions or restrictions upon the importation, exportation or transit of any goods from one country to the other for reasons of national defence and national food supply, for the protection of art objects and scientific properties, for the prevention of epidemics or epizootics, for the protection of harvests, for the maintenance of public morality or government monopolies, provided that such prohibitions or restrictions are justified by absolute necessity and shall be applicable to any country or countries under the same conditions.

Article VIII.—The Chinese Government in the Provinces of Yunnan, Kwangsi and Kwangtung and the French Government on the territory of French Indo-China shall not levy under any pretext whatsoever upon goods respectively imported or exported by French or Chinese nationals excise duties or internal taxes other or higher than those which are paid their own nationals or by nationals of any other Power.

Article IX.—The nationals of China guilty or accused of crimes or misdemeanours committed in China and taking refuge on the territory of French Indo-China and the French nationals guilty or accused of crimes or misdemeanours committed in French Indo-China and taking refuge on the territory of China shall, at the request of the authorities concerned and upon the proof of their culpability, be searched for, arrested and extradited, it being understood that exception will be made of all cases in which according to international usage extradition is not effected.

Article X.—The present Convention shall be in force for a period of five years. Either of the High Contracting Parties may notify the other, six months before the expiration of the said period, of its desire to revise or terminate the Convention. In case both Parties fail to notify each other in time of their desire to revise or terminate the Convention, it shall continue to be in force, provided, however, that at any time after the expiration of the said five-year period either Party may notify the other of its desire to revise or terminate the Convention, which shall then become null and void one year after the date of such notification.

The present Convention with its annexes shall be ratified as soon as possible and the exchange of ratifications shall take place in Paris. It shall be promulgated in Indo-China and shall come there into force at the same time as in the three Provinces of Yunnan, Kwangsi and Kwangtung, two months after the exchange of ratifications.

Article XI.—The present Convention has been drawn up in Chinese and French, both texts having been carefully compared and verified.

In faith whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Convention in duplicate and have affixed thereto their seals.

Done at Nanking this sixteenth day of the fifth month of the nineteenth year of the Republic of China, corresponding to the sixteenth day of May, nineteen hundred and thirty.

REORGANIZATION OF THE SHANGHAI PROVISIONAL COURT

On May 8, 1929, the Ministry for Foreign Affairs addressed identic notes to the Ministers of Great Britain, The United States, France, Netherlands, Norway and Brazil requesting them forthwith to begin negotiations for the reorganization of the Provisional Court of the Shanghai International Settlement. Mr. Oudendijk, the Dutch Minister, on behalf of the interested Powers, replied on June 7, stating that the Court was a strictly local affair, and its reorganization should be examined on behalf of the Legations concerned by a Commission chosen from among their local representatives together with the representatives of the Chinese Government. Dr. C. T. Wang protested on July 3, and insisted on the settlement of the affair directly with the Ministers themselves. On August 2, Mr. Oudendijk accepted Dr. Wang's proposal.

Beginning from December 9, 1929, the resultant conference held twenty-eight meetings at Nanking. A draft agreement was drawn up and referred by the Delegates to their respective Governments. On February 17, 1930, the Agreement was signed at Nanking by the representatives of the Ministers of the interested Powers, with the exception of the French delegate Mr. Koechlin, who had not then received the necessary instructions from his Government. The latter's signature was, however, affixed on behalf of the French Minister, at Shanghai, five days later.

Agreement Relating to the Chinese Courts in the International Settlement at Shanghai.

Article I.—From the date on which the present Agreement comes into force, all former rules, agreements, exchange of notes et cetera having special reference to the establishment of a Chinese court in the International Settlement at Shanghai shall be abolished.

Article II.—The Chinese Government shall, in accordance with Chinese laws and regulations relating to the judiciary and subject to the terms of the present Agreement, establish in the International Settlement at Shanghai a District Court (Ti Fang Fa Yuan) and a Branch High Court (Kao Teng Fa Yuen Fen Yuan). All Chinese laws and regulations, substantive as well as procedural, which are now in force, or which may hereafter be duly enacted and promulgated shall be applicable in the Courts, due account being taken of the Land Regulations and Bye-Laws of the International Settlement, which are applicable pending their adoption and promulgation by the Chinese Government, and of the terms of the present Agreement.

Judgments, decisions and rulings of the Branch High Court are subject to appeal, according to Chinese law, to the Supreme Court of China.

Article III.—The former practice of consular deputies or consular officials appearing to watch proceedings or to sit jointly in the Chinese Court now functioning in the International Settlement shall be discontinued in the Courts established under the present Agreement.

Article IV.—When any person is arrested by the municipal or judicial police he shall, within twenty-four hours, exclusive of holidays, be sent to the Courts established under the present Agreement to be dealt with, failing which he shall be released.

Article V.—The Courts established under the present Agreement shall each have a certain number of procurators to be appointed by the Chinese Government, who shall hold inquests and autopsies (Chien Yen) within the jurisdiction of these Courts and shall otherwise perform their functions in accordance with Chinese law in all cases involving the application of Articles 103 to 186 of the Chinese Criminal Code, except where the municipal police of the International Settlement or the party concerned has already initiated prosecution, provided that all preliminary investigations conducted by the procurator shall be held publicly and counsel for the accused shall have the right to be present and heard.

In other cases arising within the jurisdiction of the courts, the municipal police or the party concerned shall prosecute. The procurator shall have the right to express his views in court in all criminal cases in which the prosecution is initiated by the Municipal Police or the party concerned.

Article VI.—All judicial processes, such as summonses, warrants, orders et cetera, shall be valid only after they have been signed by a judge of the Courts established under the present Agreement, whereupon they shall be served or executed by the judicial police or, as provided below, by the process-servers thereof.

No person found in the International Settlement shall be handed over to the extra-Settlement authorities without a preliminary investigation in court, at which counsel for the accused shall have the right to be present and heard, except in the case of requests emanating from other modern law courts when the accused may be handed over after his identity has been established by the Court.

All judgments, decisions, and rulings of the Courts shall be executed as soon as they become final as a result of the judicial procedure in force in the said Courts. Whenever necessary, the Municipal Police shall render any assistance within their power as may be requested of them.

The process-servers of the Courts shall be appointed by the Presidents of the Courts respectively and their duties shall be to serve all summonses and deliver other documents of the Courts in connection with civil cases. For the execution of judgments in civil cases, the process-servers shall be accompanied by the judicial police. The officers and members of the judicial police of the Courts shall be appointed by the President of the Branch High Court upon the recommendation of the Municipal Council and shall be subject to dismissal by the President of that Court upon cause shown. Their services will also be terminated by the President at the request of the Municipal Council upon cause shown. They shall wear the uniform designed by the Chinese judicial authorities, and shall be subject to the orders and direction of the Courts and faithful to their duties.

Article VII.—The House of Detention for civil cases and the Women's Prison attached to the Chinese court now functioning in the International Settlement at Shanghai shall be transferred from that Court to the Courts established under the present Agreement and shall be supervised and administered by the Chinese authorities.

All prisoners now serving sentences in the prison attached to the Chinese Court now functioning in the International Settlement and those sentenced by the Courts established under the present Agreement shall, at the discretion of the said Courts, serve their sentences either in such prisons in the Settlement or in Chinese prisons outside the Settlement, except that offenders against the Police Offices Code and the Land Regulations and Bye-laws and persons under arrest awaiting trial shall serve their periods of detention in the Settlement. The prisons in the Settlement shall be operated as far as practicable, in conformity with Chinese prison regulations and shall be subject to inspection, from time to time, by officers appointed by the Chinese judicial authorities.

Persons sentenced to death by the Courts established under the present Agreement shall be sent to the Chinese authorities outside of the Settlement for execution of such sentence.

Article VIII.—Foreign lawyers duly qualified will be admitted to practice in the Courts established under the present Agreement in all cases in which a foreigner is a party, provided such foreign lawyer can only represnt the foreign party concerned. The Municipal Council may also be represented in the same manner by duly qualified lawyers, Chinese or foreign, in any proceedings in which the Council is complainant or plaintiff or the Municipal Police is prosecutor.

In other cases or proceedings in which the Council considers the interests of the Settlement to be involved, it may be represented by a duly qualified lawyer, Chinese or foreign, who may submit to the Court his views in writing during the proceedings and who may, if he deems necessary, file a petition in intervention in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Foreign lawyers who are entitled to practice under this Article in the above-mentioned Courts shall apply to the Ministry of Justice for lawyers' certificates and shall be subject to Chinese laws and regulations applicable to lawyers, including those governing their disciplinary punishment.

Article IX.—Four permanent representatives shall be appointed, two by the Chinese Government and two by the Governments of the other Powers signatory to the present Agreement, who together shall seek to reconcile such differences of opinion regarding the interpretation or application of the present Agreement as may be referred to them by the President of the Branch High Court or by the authorities of the signatory foreign Powers, provided that their Report shall have no binding force upon either party except by mutual consent, it being understood that no judgments, decisions, rulings or orders of the Courts as such shall be referred to the aforesaid representatives for consideration.

Article X.—The present Agreement and the attached notes shall enter into effect on April 1, 1930 and shall continue in force for a period of three years from that date, provided that they may be extended for an additional period upon mutual consent of the parties thereto.

NOTE FROM HEADS OF LEGATIONS CONCERNED TO MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Nanking, February 17, 1930.

Sir,

With reference to the Agreement which we have signed to-day concerning the establishment of a District Court and a Branch High Court in the International Settlement at Shanghai, we have the honour to request your confirmation of our understanding on the following points:

1.—It is understood that the Courts established under the present Agreement shall exercise jurisdiction over civil and criminal cases as well as police offences and inquests in the International Settlement at Shanghai, provided that the jurisdiction of the said Courts over persons shall be the same as that of other Chinese Courts and provided that their territorial jurisdiction shall be the same as that of the Chinese Court now functioning in the International Settlement at Shanghai, except (a) mixed criminal cases arising on private foreign property outside the limits of the Settlement and (b) mixed civil cases arising in areas surrounding the Settlement.

2.—It is understood that the present practice regarding the respective jurisdictions of the Chinese Court now functioning in the International Settlement and the Court existing in the French Concession shall be followed, pending a definite arrangement between the Chinese Government and the authorities concerned.

3.—It is understood that as far as practicable Chinese shall be recommended by the Municipal Council to serve as officers and members of the judicial police of the Courts established under the present Agreement. It is further understood that among the officers of the judicial police appointed by the President of the Branch High Court under Article VI of the present Agreement, there will be one to be designated by the Municipal Council, to whom will be allotted by the President an office on the court premises and who will make an entry of all judicial processes of the Courts, such as summonses, warrants, orders and judgments, for the purpose of service or execution in accordance with the provisions of the above-mentioned Article.

4.—It is understood that the establishment of the Courts provided for in the present Agreement in no way affects the validity of judgments rendered by the Court now functioning in the International Settlement and its predecessor, and that such judgments shall be considered as final and valid except where an appeal has been lawfully taken or reserved. It is further understood that the judgments of the Courts established under the present Agreement shall be on the same footing as regards validity as the judgments of all other Chinese Courts.

5.—It is understood that the present Agreement does not in any way affect or prejudice any future negotiations regarding the status of extra-Settlement roads.

6.—It is understood that the sum of $60,000 (sixty thousand dollars) now on deposit with the Bank of China to the credit of the present Chinese Court in the International Settlement shall be maintained by the Chinese Government to the credit of the new Courts established under the present Agreement.

7.—It is agreed that in accordance with Chinese law, there shall be maintained by the Courts established under the present Agreement, a storage room for articles confiscated by the Courts, which remain the property of the Chinese Government, it being understood that confiscated opium and instruments for the smoking and preparation thereof shall be burned publicity in the International Settlement every three months and that the Municipal Council may present to the Presidents of the Courts for transmission to the Ministry of Justice such suggestions as it may desire to make regarding the disposal of confiscated arms.

8.—It is understood that upon the coming into force of the present Agreement, all cases pending in the Chinese Court now functioning in the International Settlement shall be dealt with in the Courts established under the present Agreement in accordance with the procedure in force in the latter courts, provided that the proceedings in mixed cases shall, as far as practicable, be continued from the point where they are taken over and concluded with a period of twelve months which period may be extended at the discretion of the Court when the circumstances in any case so warrant.

ROYAL INSTRUCTIONS

CONSTITUTION OF THE EXECUTIVE AND LEGISLATIVE COUNCILS

Instructions passed under the Royal Sign Manual and Signet to the Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of Hongkong and its Dependencies.

Dated 14th February, 1917.

Instructions to Our Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over Our Colony of Hongkong and its Dependencies or other Officer for the time being administering the Government of Our said Colony and its Dependencies.

Preamble.

Recites Letters Patent of even date.

Whereas by certain Letters Patent under the Great Seal of Our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing even date herewith, We have made provision for the office of Governor and Commander-in-Chief (therein and hereinafter called the Governor) in and over Our Colony of Hongkong, and its Dependencies (therein and hereinafter called the Colony):

And whereas We have thereby authorised and commanded the Governor to do and execute all things that belong to his said office according to the tenour of Our said Letters Patent and of any Commission issued to him under Our Sign Manual and Signet and according to such Instructions as may from time to time be given to him under Our Sign Manual and Signet or by Order in Our Privy Council or by Us through one of Our Principal Secretaries of State and to such laws as are now or shall hereafter be in force in the Colony:

Recites Instructions of 19th January, 1888, and Additional Instructions of 7th July, 1896.

And whereas Her Majesty Queen Victoria did issue certain Instructions to the Governor under Her Sign Manual and Signet bearing date the Nineteenth day of January, 1888, and certain Additional Instructions bearing date the Seventh day of July, 1896:

And whereas We are minded to substitute fresh Instructions for the aforesaid Instructions and Additional Instructions:

Revokes Instructions of 19th January, 1888, and Additional Instructions of 7th July 1896.

Now therefore We do, by these Our Instructions under Our Sign Manual and Signet, revoke as from the date of the coming into operation of Our said recited Letters Patent, the aforesaid Instructions of the Nineteenth day of January, 1888, and the aforesaid Additional Instructions of the Seventh day of July, 1896, but without prejudice to anything lawfully done thereunder, and instead thereof We do direct and enjoin and declare Our will and pleasure as follows:—

Administration of Oaths.

I.—The Governor may, whenever he thinks fit, require any person in the public service of the Colony to take the Oath of Allegiance, in the form prescribed by the Act mentioned in Our said recited Letters Patent, together with such other Oath or Oaths as may from time to time be prescribed by any laws in force in the Colony. The Governor is to administer such Oaths, or to cause them to be administered by some public officer of the Colony.

II.—The Executive Council of the Colony shall consist of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Colony (if any), the Senior Military Officer for the time being in command of Our regular troops within the Colony, the persons for the time being lawfully discharging the functions of Colonial Secretary, of Attorney-General, of Secretary for Chinese Affairs, and of Treasurer of the Colony, who are hereinafter referred to as ex officio Members, and of such other persons as at the date of the coming into operation of Our said recited Letters Patent are Members of the said Council, or as We may from time to time appoint by any Instructions or Warrant under Our Sign Manual and Signet, or as the Governor in pursuance of Instructions from Us through one of Our Principal Secretaries of State may from time to time appoint under the Public Seal of the Colony. [As amended by Additional Instruction dated 15-11-28.]

Constitution of Executive Council.

III.—Whenever any Member, other than an ex officio Member, of the Executive Council of the Colony shall, by writing under his hand, resign his seat in the Council, or shall die, or be declared by the Governor by an Instrument under the Public Seal of the Colony to be incapable of exercising his functions as a Member of the Council, or be absent from the Colony, or shall be acting in an office the holder of which is an ex officio Member of the Council, or shall be suspended from the exercise of his functions as a Member of the Council, the Governor may, by an Instrument under the Public Seal of the Colony, provisionally appoint any public officer to be temporarily an Official or Unofficial Member of the Council, and any person not a public officer to be temporarily an Unofficial Member of the Council in the place of the Member so resigning, or dying, or being suspended, or declared incapable, or being absent, or sitting as an ex officio Member.

Provisional appointment of Members of the Executive Council.

Such person shall forthwith cease to be a Member of the Council if his appointment is disallowed by Us, or if the Member in whose place he was appointed shall be released from suspension, or, as the case may be, shall be declared by the Governor by an Instrument under the Public Seal capable of again discharging his functions in the Council, or shall return to the Colony, or shall cease to sit in the Council as an ex officio Member.

IV.—The Governor shall without delay, report to Us, for Our confirmation or disallowance, through one of Our Principal Secretaries of State, every provisional appointment of any person as a Member of the said Executive Council. Every such person shall hold his place in the Council during Our pleasure, and the Governor may by an Instrument under the Public Seal revoke any such appointment.

Such provisional appointments to be immediately reported.

V.—The Official Members of the Executive Council shall take precedence of the Unofficial Members, and among themselves shall have seniority and precedence as We may specially assign, and, in default thereof, first, the ex officio Members in the order in which their offices are above mentioned (except that the Senior Military Officer, if below the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in Our Army, shall take precedence after the person lawfully discharging the functions of Attorney-General), and then other Official Members and all Unofficial Members according to the priority of their respective appointments, or if appointed by or in pursuance of the same Instrument, according to the order in which they are named therein.

Precedences.

VI.—The Governor shall forthwith communicate these Our Instructions to the Executive Council, and likewise all such others, from time to time, as We may direct, or as he shall find convenient for Our service to impart to them.

Governor to communicate Instructions to Executive Council.

Executive Council not to proceed to business unless summoned by Governor's authority. Quorum.

VII.—The Executive Council shall not proceed to the despatch of business unless duly summoned by authority of the Governor, nor unless two Members at the least (exclusive of himself or of the Member presiding), be present and assisting throughout the whole of the meetings at which any such business shall be despatched.

Who to preside.

VIII.—The Governor shall attend and preside at all meetings of the Executive Council, unless when prevented by illness or other grave cause, and in his absence such Member as the Governor may appoint, or in the absence of such Member the senior Member of the Council actually present, shall preside.

Minutes of Executive Council to be kept.

IX.—Minutes shall be regularly kept of all the proceedings of the Executive Council; and at each meeting of the Council the Minutes of the last preceding meeting shall be confirmed or amended, as the case may require, before proceeding to the despatch of any other business.

To be transmitted home twice a year.

Twice in each year a full and exact copy of all Minutes for the preceding half year shall be transmitted to Us through one of Our Principal Secretaries of State.

Governor to consult Executive Council.

X.—In the execution of the powers and authorities granted to the Governor by Our said recited Letters Patent, he shall in all cases consult with the Executive Council, excepting only in cases which may be of such a nature that, in his judgment, Our service would sustain material prejudice by consulting the Council thereupon, or when the matters to be decided shall be too unimportant to require their advice, or too urgent to admit of their advice being given by the time within which it may be necessary for him to act in respect of any such matters. In all such urgent cases he shall, at the earliest practicable period, communicate to the Executive Council the measures which he may so have adopted, with the reasons therefor.

Governor alone entitled to submit questions.

XI.—The Governor shall alone be entitled to submit questions to the Executive Council for their advice or decision; but if the Governor decline to submit any question to the Council when requested in writing by any Member so to do, it shall be competent to such Member to require that there be recorded upon the Minutes his written application together with the answer returned by the Governor to the same.

Governor may act in opposition to Executive Council.

Reporting grounds for so doing.

Member may require their adverse opinion to be recorded on Minutes.

XII.—The Governor may, in the exercise of the powers and authorities granted to him by Our said recited Letters Patent, act in opposition to the advice given to him by the Members of the Executive Council, if he shall in any case deem it right to do so; but in any such case he shall fully report the matter to Us by the first convenient opportunity, with the grounds and reasons of his action. In every such case it shall be competent to any Member of the said Council to require that there be recorded at length on the Minutes the grounds of any advice or opinion he may give upon the question.

Constitution of Legislative Council.

XX.—The Members of the Legislative Council shall take precedence as We may specially assign, and in default thereof, as follows:—

(1) First, the Official Members in the following order:—

(a) The ex Officio Members in the order in which their offices are mentioned (except that the Senior Military Officer, if below the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in Our Army, shall take precedence after the person lawfully discharging the functions of Attorney-General).

(b) Other Official Members according to the priority of their respective appointments, or if appointed by or in pursuance of the same Instrument, according to the order in which they are named therein.

(2) Secondly, the Unofficial Members in the following order:—

(a) The Unofficial Members who are also Members of the Executive Council of the Colony according to the precedence taken as between themselves as Members of the Executive Council.

(b) Other Unofficial Members according to the priority of their respective appointments, or if appointed by or in pursuance of the same Instrument, according to the order in which they are named therein: Provided that any such Unofficial Member who is re-appointed immediately on the termination of his term of office shall as between himself and other Unofficial Members who are not also Members of the Executive Council take precedence according to the date from which he has been continously a Member of the Legislative Council.

[As amended by Additional Instructions of 20-11-29]

Who to preside.

XXI.—The Governor shall attend and preside in the Legislative Council, unless prevented by illness or other grave cause; and in his absence any Member appointed by him in writing shall preside, or, in default of such Member, the Member who is first in precedence of those present shall preside.

Questions to be decided by a majority. Governor to have original and casting vote.

XXII.—All questions proposed for debate in the Legislative Council shall be decided by the majority of votes, and the Governor or the Member presiding shall have an original vote in common with the other Members of the Council, and also a casting vote, if upon any question the votes shall be equal.

Rules and order to be made.

XXIII.—The Legislative Council may from time to time make standing rules and orders for the regulation of their own proceedings; provided such rules and orders be not repugnant to Our said recited Letters Patent, or to these Our Instructions, or to any other Instructions from Us under Our Sign Manual and Signet.

XXIV.—It shall be competent for any Member of the Legislative uncil to propose any question for debate therein; and such question, if conded by any other Member, shall be debated and disposed of according the standing rules and orders. Provided always that every ordinance te, resolution, or question, the object or effect of which may be to spose of or charge any part of Our revenue arising within the Colony, all be proposed by the Governor, unless the proposal of the same shall ve been expressly allowed or directed by him. Question, &c. for debate.

XXV.—In the passing of Ordinances the Governor and the Council all observe, as far as practicable, the following Rules:— Rules and regulations under which Ordinances are to be enacted.

1.—All laws shall be styled "Ordinances," and the enacting words all be, "enacted by the Governor of Hongkong, with the advice and nsent "of the Legislative Council thereof." Form of enacting Ordinances.

2.—All Ordinances shall be distinguished by titles, and shall be vided into successive clauses or paragraphs, numbered consecutively, and every such clause there shall be annexed in the margin a short summary its contents. The Ordinances of each year shall be distinguished by nsecutive numbers, commencing in each year with the number one. Ordinances to be numbered and methodically arranged.

Except in the case of Bills reserved for the signification of Our pleare, all Ordinances passed by the Legislative Council in any one year shall, assented to by the Governor, be assented to by him in that year, shall dated as of the day on which the assent of the Governor is given, and all be numbered as of the year in which they are passed. Bills not so sented to by the Governor, but reserved by him for the signification of ur pleasure, shall be dated as of the day and numbered as of the year on nd in which they are brought into operation.

3.—Each different matter shall be provided for by a different rdinance, without intermixing in one and the same Ordinance such things have no proper relation to each other; and no clause is to be inserted or annexed to any Ordinance which shall be foreign to what the title of ch Ordinance imports, and no perpetual clause shall be part of any mporary Ordinance. Different subjects not to be mixed in same Ordinance. No clause to be introduced foreign to what title of Ordinance imports. Temporary Ordinances.

9.—Any Bill whereby persons not of European birth or descent may be subjected or made liable to any disabilities or restrictions to which persons of European birth or descent are not also subjected or made liable.

10.—Any Bill containing provisions to which Our assent has been once refused, or which have been disallowed by Us:

Proviso in cases of emergency for immediate operation of an Ordinance.

Unless in the case of any such Bill as aforesaid the Governor shall have previously obtained Our instructions upon such Bill through one of Our Principal Secretaries of State, or unless such Bill shall contain a clause suspending the operation of such Bill until the signification of Our pleasure thereupon, or unless the Governor shall have satisfied himself that an urgent necessity exists requiring that such Bill be brought into immediate operation, in which case he is authorised to assent in Our name to such Bill, unless the same shall be repugnant to the law of England, or inconsistent with any obligations imposed on Us by treaty. But he is to transmit to Us, by the earliest opportunity, the Bill so assented to together with his reasons for assenting thereto.

Private Bills.

XXVII.—Every Bill intended to affect or benefit some particular person, association or corporate body shall contain a section saving the rights of Us, Our heirs and successors, all bodies politic and corporate, and all others except such as are mentioned in the Bill and those claiming by, from and under them. No such Bill, not being a Government measure, shall be introduced into the Legislative Council until due notice has been given by not less than two successive publications of the Bill in the Hongkong Government Gazette, and in such other manner as may be required by the Standing Rules and Orders for the time being in force; and the Governor shall not assent thereto in Our name until it has been so published. A certificate under the hand of the Governor shall be transmitted to Us with the Bill signifying that such publication has been made.

Ordinances, &c., to be sent home duly authenticated.

XXVIII.—When any Ordinance shall have been passed or when any Bill shall have been reserved for the signification of Our pleasure, the Governor shall transmit to Us, through one of Our Principal Secretaries of State, for Our final approval, disallowance or other direction thereupon, a full and exact copy in duplicate of the same, and of the marginal summary thereof, duly authenticated under the Public Seal of the Colony, and by his own signature. Such copy shall be accompanied by such explanatory observations as may be required to exhibit the reasons and occasion for passing such Ordinance or Bill.

ADDITIONAL ROYAL INSTRUCTIONS

Additional Instructions passed under the Royal Sign Manual and Signet to the Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of Hongkong in regard to the precedence of Members of the Legislative Council thereof.

Dated 20th November, 1929. GEORGE R.I.

Additional Instructions to Our Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over Our Colony of Hongkong and its Dependencies, or other Officer for the time being administering the Government of Our said Colony and its Dependencies.

Preamble.

Whereas by certain Letters Patent under the Great Seal of Our Realm bearing date at Westminster the Fourteenth day of February, 1917, We did make provision for the Government of Our Colony of Hongkong and its Dependencies (hereinafter called the Colony) and did amongst other things declare that there should be a Legislative Council in and for the Colony which should consist of such persons as We might direct by Instructions under Our Sign Manual and Signet:

Recites Letters Patent of 14th February, 1917.

Recites Instructions of 14th February 1917.

And whereas by Our Instructions under Our Sign Manual and Signet bearing date the Fourteenth day of February, 1917, We did constitute the said Legislative Council as therein is set forth, and by the Twentieth Clause of the said Instructions did direct that the Members of the said Council should have such precedence as therein is set forth:

And whereas We are minded to make other provision in regard to the precedence of the Members of the said Legislative Council:

Substitutes fresh Clause for Clause XX of Instructions of 14th February, 1917.

Now therefore We do, as from the date of the receipt in the Colony of these Our Additional Instructions under Our Sign Manual and Signet, hereby revoke the Twentieth Clause of Our said Instructions of the Fourteenth day of February, 1917, without prejudice to anything lawfully done thereunder, and instead thereof We do direct and enjoin and declare Our will and pleasure that from the date of such receipt the aforesaid Instructions shall henceforth be construed and take effect as if the following clause had been inserted therein in place of the Twentieth Clause thereof:—

Precedence of Members.

XX.—The Members of the Legislative Council shall take precedence as We may specially assign, and in default thereof, as follows:—

(1) First, the Official Members in the following order:—

(a) The ex officio Members in the order in which their offices are mentioned (except that the Senior Military Officer, if below the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in Our Army, shall take precedence after the person lawfully discharging the functions of Attorney-General).

(b) Other Official Members according to the priority of their respective appointments, or if appointed by or in pursuance of the same Instrument, according to the order in which they are named therein.

(2) Secondly, the Unofficial Members in the following order:—

(a) The Unofficial Members who are also Members of the Executive Council of the Colony according to the precedence taken as between themselves as Members of the Executive Council.

(b) Other Unofficial Members according to the priority of their respective appointments, or if appointed by or in pursuance of the same Instrument, according to the order in which they are named therein: Provided that any such Unofficial Member who is re-appointed immediately on the termination of his term of office shall as between himself and other Unofficial Members who are not also Members of the Executive Council take precedence according to the date from which he has been continuously a Member of the Legislative Council.

Given at Our Court at Saint James's this Twentieth day of November, 1929, in the Twentieth Year of Our Reign.

* On the subject of decision by the majority, and on the Governor's original and casting vote, See Clause XXII of the Royal Instructions of the 14th February, 1917.

and the result shall be declared by the President or Chairman, but any member ay claim a division when the votes shall be taken by the Clerk asking each member parately how he desires to vote and recording the votes accordingly.

(3) In taking the division the names of all the unofficial members shall be called fore the names or official titles of any of the official members. In both cases the mes, or official titles as the case may be, shall be called in order, beginning with the nior member, provided that the President, or in any committee the Chairman, shall te last.

(4) When a division is claimed either in Council or in any committee every ember present shall, unless he expressly state that he declines to vote, record his te either for the ayes or noes. The Clerk shall enter on the minutes the record each member's vote and shall add a statement of the names of members who clined to vote.

(5) As soon as the Clerk has collected the votes the President, or in any committee the Chairman, shall state the numbers voting for the ayes and the noes spectively and shall then declare the result of the division or give his casting vote the case may be.

(6) If a member state that he voted in error or that his vote has been counted rongly, he may claim to have his vote altered, provided that such request is made soon as the President has announced the numbers and before he shall have eclared the result of the division.

(7) A member shall not vote on any subject in which he has a direct personal ecuniary interest, but a motion to disallow a member's vote on this ground shall e made only as soon as the numbers of the members voting on the question shall ave been declared. If the motion for the disallowance of a member's vote shall e agreed to, the President, or in committee the Chairman, shall direct the Clerk to orrect the numbers voting in the division accordingly. In deciding whether a otion for the disallowance of a member's vote shall be proposed from the chair, e President, or, in any committee the Chairman, shall have regard to the haracter of the question upon which the division was taken and to the onsideration whether the interest therein of the member whose vote is challenged direct and pecuniary and not an interest in common with the rest of His Majesty's ubjects and whether his vote was given on a matter of state policy.

25.—First Reading of a Bill

(1) The mover of a bill, on moving the first reading thereof, shall state the bject and intention of the measure and the reasons on which it is founded.

(2) After such motion has been seconded by another member, and has been dopted, the bill shall be read a first time. The President may address the Council n the first reading of a bill should he desire to do so, but no further discussion hall be permitted.

(3) Except as provided for in paragraph (2) of Standing Order 29, every bill hall be published in the Gazette after having been read a first time and before it is ead a second time.

26.—Second Reading of a Bill

When a motion for a second reading of a bill shall have been made and econded, a debate may be taken only upon the general merits and principles of the Bill.

27.—Committee Stage of a Bill

(1) When a bill has been read the second time the Council may, at the same r any subsequent meeting, upon motion made and seconded, resolve itself into a committee of the whole Council to consider the bill clause by clause, or may refer the bill to a standing committee or to a select committee.

(2) The principle of a bill shall not be discussed in committee but only its details.

(3) In committee the Clerk shall read the marginal notes to the bill, clause by clause, unless the Chairman directs him to read the clauses, or any particular clause in full.

(4) Subject to the provisions of paragraph (5) of this Order, the committee may make in the bill such amendments as they shall think fit, provided that the amendments are in the opinion of the Chairman relevant to the subject matter of the bill, and provided that if any amendments are in the opinion of the Chairman not within the title of the bill the committee shall amend the title accordingly.

(5) No amendment shall be moved which is inconsistent with any clause already agreed upon or with any decision already come to by the committee, and the Chairman may at any time during the discussion of a proposed amendment withdraw it from the consideration of the committee if in his opinion the amendment violates the provisions of this paragraph.

(6) The Chairman may require any proposed amendment to be handed to the Clerk in writing.

(7) If no amendment be proposed to any particular clause when the marginal note has been read by the Clerk, or when all the proposed amendments shall have been disposed of, the Chairman shall put the question "That the clause (or the clause as amended) stand part of the bill." If any amendment is proposed which the Chairman considers need not be disposed of separately he may put the question "That the Clause amended as proposed, stand part of the bill."

(8) If a new clause or a new schedule be proposed the Chairman may put the question "That the proposed clause (or schedule) stand part of the bill", and if the question is agreed to the clause (or schedule) shall thereupon stand part of the bill. A new clause or a new schedule may be proposed at any time which seems convenient to the Chairman.

(9) On consideration of the schedules the Clerk shall call out the word "Schedule" if there is only one schedule, or shall read out the ordinal numbers of the schedules if there are more schedules than one, unless the Chairman directs him to read the schedules or any particular schedule in full, or to proceed in any other manner, and the Chairman may thereupon put the question "That this schedule stand part of the bill."

(10) Any clause or schedule may be postponed for consideration at a later stage of the same meeting or for consideration at some future meeting of the committee. The whole bill may be left in committee for consideration at some future meeting of the committee.

(11) When all the clauses and schedules of the bill have been disposed of the Chairman shall put the question "That the enacting clause and title stand part of the bill". If the bill contains a preamble the above question shall be preceded by the question "That the preamble stand part of the bill."

(12) When the bill has been entirely disposed of the Council may upon motion made and seconded resume and proceed with the remaining business of the day.

(13) A bill may be referred to a standing committee or to a select committee at any stage of its progress prior to the third reading.

(14) If any standing committee or select committee to which a bill has been referred reports that it recommends any material amendment therein, the bill may be printed with such amendment and, after publication in the Gazette, may with the permission of the Council be substituted for the bill as read a second time. Every bill so reported shall be considered in the committee of the whole Council.

28.—Third Reading of a Bill

(1) When a bill has passed through committee the member in charge of the l may at the same or any subsequent meeting report to the Council that the bill s passed through committee and may at the same time move that the bill be read hird time, provided that if in the opinion of the President any material amendnt of the bill shall have been made in committee the bill shall not be read a third ne at the same meeting except after the suspension of the Standing Orders. If e third reading of any bill is for this reason postponed to a subsequent meeting of e Council the bill shall be published in the Gazette as amended before it is read hird time.

(2) If upon the third reading of a bill being proposed and seconded any memr desires to omit or amend any provision contained in the bill, or to introduce any sh provision into it, the bill may upon motion made and seconded be re-comitted, and thereafter the Council shall again resolve itself into a committee of the hole Council for the consideration of the proposed amendment, but no bill shall re-committed after it shall have been read a third time.

(3) When a bill has been read a third time it shall be deemed to have been ssed.

29.—General Provisions relating to Bills

(1) On each reading of a bill the Clerk shall read only the long title of the bill.

(2) If at any stage in the progress of a bill the President declares that in his inion an emergency exists and that it is desirable in the public interest that the anding Orders should be suspended in order to enable the bill to pass through all s stages, or all its remaining stages, at that meeting of Council, it may be moved and conded that the Standing Orders be suspended accordingly and if the motion be opted the bill may be carried through all its stages, or all its remaining stages, that meeting.

30.—Bills affecting Private Rights

(1) Where any bill shall be proposed which is intended to affect or benefit some rticular person, association, or corporate body, notice of the bill shall be given the promoters, by two advertisements in some daily newspaper published in the olony, and, if any of the persons likely to be benefited or prejudiced may be hinese, by two additional advertisements in some Chinese newspaper published in e Colony, and in any case by two successive publications of the bill in the Gazette, required by Clause XXVII of the Royal Instructions of the 14th February, 1917: ovided that, as laid down in the said Clause XXVII this paragraph shall not apply any such bill which is a Government measure.

(2) If any person considers that his individual rights or interests would be fected by the provisions of any such bill, he may petition to be heard on the bill ther in person or by counsel, and he shall be heard accordingly, either upon otion made, seconded and adopted, or by order of the President. The President all direct whether the person in question or his counsel shall be heard before the ouncil, or before a committee of the whole Council, or before a standing committee a select committee.

(3) On any such petition the petitioner, or any member, shall, upon motion ade, seconded and adopted, or by order of the President, be entitled to call and amine witnesses on oath or affirmation, provided that a list containing the names, sidences and occupations of the witnesses shall have been delivered to the Clerk least two clear days before the meeting of the Council or committee as the case ay be. Any such witness if called by the petitioner may be cross-examined by ny member, and if called by any member may be cross-examined by any other ember or by the petitioner. The oath or affirmation shall be tendered by the lerk, or, in any committee, by the Chairman.

(4) Every bill intended to affect, or benefit some particular person, association or corporate body shall in accordance with Clause XXVII of the Royal Instructions of the 14th February, 1917, contain a section saving the rights of His Majesty the King, His Heirs and Successors, all bodies politic and corporate, and all others except such as are mentioned in the bill, and those claiming by, from, and under them.

31.—Relevancy of Amendments

(1) When any bill, or clause of a bill, or motion, is under consideration in the Council or a committee thereof, an amendment may be proposed to such bill, clause or motion if it be relevant to the bill, clause or motion to which it is proposed.

(2) An amendment may be proposed to any amendment proposed from the chair if it be relevant to the original amendment.

(3) In committee on a bill a new clause or schedule may be proposed if it be relevant to the subject matter of the bill, and an amendment may be proposed to it if the amendment may be relevant to the new clause or schedule.

(4) An amendment, or a new clause or schedule, shall not require notice.

(5) The President, or the Chairman as the case may be, may require any proposed amendment to be handed to the Clerk in writing.

32.—Seconding of Motions and Amendments

A motion or amendment shall not be proposed from the chair in Council unless it shall have received a seconder, but in committee a seconder shall not be required for any amendment or for any new clause or schedule.

33.—Method of Putting the Question on Amendments

Subject to the provisions of paragraph (7) of Standing Order 27 upon an amendment to leave out words and insert other words instead of them a question shall first be proposed from the chair "that the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question," and if that question be negatived, the question for the insertion of the alternative words shall then be proposed, provided that on consideration of a bill in committee the Chairman shall if possible put as the test question on an amendment only such words as will not prevent a subsequent amendment which is in order from being moved. If the question so proposed be negatived the words proposed by the amendment to be left out shall be deemed to be left out without further question.

34.—Withdrawal of Motions or Amendments

When any motion or amendment has been proposed from the chair, it may be withdrawn at the request of the mover if, on the President, or in committee the Chairman, asking whether it be the pleasure of the Council or committee that the motion or amendment be withdrawn, a dissenting voice be not raised thereto.

35.—Publication of Evidence

The evidence taken before any committee of the Council and any documents presented to such committee which have not been reported to the Council shall not be published by any member of such committee or by any other person, except with the permission of the President.

36.—Practice of Parliament

(1) In cases of doubt the Standing Orders of this Council shall be interpreted in the light of the relevant practice of the Commons House of Parliament of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

(2) In any matter for which these Standing Orders do not provide the said practice shall be followed, but no restrictions which the House of Commons has introduced by Standing Order shall be deemed to extend to the Council or its members until the Council has provided by Standing Order for such restriction.

37.—Suspension of Standing Orders

A question the object or effect of which may be to suspend any Standing Order of the Council shall not be proposed except with the consent of the President.

38.—Absence of Members

Any member who is prevented from attending a meeting of the Council shall acquaint the Clerk as early as possible of his inability to attend.

39.—Employment of Members in Professional Capacity

No member of the Council shall appear before the Council or any committee thereof as counsel or solicitor for any party, or in any capacity for which he is to receive a fee or reward.

40.—Strangers

Strangers shall be admitted to debates in the Council Chamber subject to such rules as the President may make from time to time for that purpose, provided that if any member take notice that strangers be present, the President, or in committee the Chairman, shall put forthwith the question "That strangers be ordered to withdraw."

41.—Press

The President may grant a general permission to the representative of any journal to attend the sittings of the Council provided that, if the journal publish a report of the proceedings which the President considers unfair, such permission may be revoked.

GENERAL PORT REGULATIONS FOR BRITISH CONSULATES IN CHINA

The undersigned, Her Britannic Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary and Chief Superintendent of British Trade in China, acting under the authority conferred upon him by the 85th Section of the China and Japan Order in Council, 1865, hereby declares the following Regulations, made, in pursuance of the above Order in Council, to secure the observance of Treaties and the maintenance of friendly relations between British subjects and Chinese subjects and authorities to be applicable to all ports which are, or may hereafter become, open to British trade:—

I.—The British Consulate offices at the several open ports shall be opened for public business from 10 o'clock A.M. to 4 o'clock P.M. daily, excepting Sundays, Christmas Day, Good Friday, King's Birthday, Easter Monday, those holidays upon which public offices in England are closed, and Chinese New Year's day, and such Chinese holidays as the Chinese Customs authorities may observe.

II.—On the arrival of any British vessel at the anchorage of any of the open ports, the master shall, within 24 hours, deposit his ship's papers, together with a summary of the manifest of her cargo, at the Consulate office, unless a Sunday or holiday shall intervene.

III.—Every British vessel must show her national colours on entering the port or anchorage, and keep them hoisted until she shall have been reported at the Consulate and her papers deposited there.

IV.—No British vessel or any vessel the property of a British subject, unless provided with a certificate of registry, or provisional or other pass from the Superintendent of Trade at Peking, or from the Colonial Government at Hongkong, shall hoist the British ensign within any port or anchorage, or any flag similar to the British ensign or of a character not to be easily distinguishable from it. Nor shall any registered British vessel flying the Red ensign hoist any other ensign or flag (except she be entitled to fly the Blue ensign) in use by Her Majesty's vessels of war, or the national ensign of any foreign State or any ensign or flag not plainly distinguishable from the ensigns used by Her Majesty's ships of war or from those flown by Ships of foreign States.

V.—Should any seaman absent himself from his ship without permission, the master shall forthwith report the circumstance at the Consulate office, and take the necessary measures for the recovery of the absentee, and it shall be lawful for the Consul, if circumstances shall require it, in his discretion to prohibit leave being given to seamen to come ashore, and any master who shall violate such prohibition shall incur the penalties hereinafter declared.

VI.—The discharge of guns or other firearms from vessels in harbour is strictly prohibited, unless permission shall have been granted by the Consul.

VII.—Masters of vessels when reporting their arrival at a port shall notify in iting the names of all passengers and persons not forming part of the articled ew on board, and, previous to leaving, notice must be given of the names of all rsons, not forming part of the articled crew, intending to leave the port on board y vessel.

VIII.—All cases of death occurring at sea must be reported to the Consul within hours of the vessel's arriving in port or harbour, and all cases of death on board ssels in harbour, or in the residences of British subjects on shore, must be immeiately reported at the Consulate office, and in the event of sudden or accidental ath the fullest information obtainable should be given. It is strictly prohibited to row overboard the bodies of seamen or other persons dying on board of a vessel in rbour. Except in case of urgent necessity, no burial should take place on shore or om any ship in harbour without the licence of the Consul first obtained.

IX.—Stone or ballast shall not be thrown overboard in any port or harbour less permission shall have been first obtained from the local authorities through e intervention of Her Majesty's Consular officer.

X.—All cases of loss of property by theft or fraud on board ships, as well as of sault or felony requiring redress or involving the public peace, must be immediately ported at the Consulate office.

If any Chinese subject guilty of, or suspected of, having committed a misemeanour on shore or afloat be detained, information must in such cases be forthwith dged at the Consulate office, and in no instance shall British subjects be peritted to use violence toward Chinese offenders or to take the law into their own ands.

XI.—Any vessel having in the whole above 200lbs. of gunpowder or other xplosive material on board shall not approach nearer than a distance of one mile om the limits of the anchorage. On arriving at that distance, she must be forthwith ported to the Consular authority.

Special anchorages or stations will be assigned for such ships in the neighbourood of the ports.

XII.—No seaman or other person belonging to a British ship may be discharged r left behind at any port or anchorage without the express sanction of the Consul nd not then until sufficient security shall have been given for his maintenance and ood behaviour while remaining on shore, and, if required, for the expenses incident o his shipment to a port in the United Kingdom or to a British Colonial port, ccording as the seaman or other person is a native of Great Britain or of any British olony.

If any British subject left at a port or anchorage by a British vessel be found o require public relief prior to the departure of such vessel from the dominions of e Emperor of China, the vessel will be held responsible for the maintenance and emoval from China of such British subject.

XIII.—When a vessel is ready to leave a port anchorage, the master or conignee shall apply at the Custom-house for a Chinese port clearance, and on is presenting this document, together with a copy of the manifest of his export argo, at the Consular office, his ship's papers will be returned to him, and he will e furnished with a Consular port clearance, on receiving which the vessel will be at iberty to leave the port. Should any vessel take in or discharge cargo subsequent o the issue of the Customs' clearance, the master will be subject to a penalty, and he ship to such detention as may be necessary to the ends of justice.

XIV.—When a vessel is ready to leave a port or anchorage, the master shall ive notice thereof to the Consul, and shall hoist a Blue Peter at least 24 hours before the time appointed for her departure. The Consul may dispense with the observance of this regulation on security being given that claims presented within 24 hours will be paid.

XV.—No British subject may establish or carry on an hotel, boarding or eating-house, house of entertainment, or shop for the sale of liquors within the Consular district without the sanction and licence of the Consul, and payment of such fees in respect of such licence, yearly or otherwise, as may be duly authorised. The Consul shall require every person so licensed to give security for the good conduct of all inmates and frequenters of his house, and also that he will not harbour any seaman who is a runaway or who cannot produce his discharge accompanied by a written sanction from the Consul to reside on shore.

Every person so licensed will be held accountable for the good conduct of all inmates and frequenters of his house, and in case of their misconduct may be sued upon the instrument of security so given.

XVI.—Any British subject desiring to proceed up the country to a greater distance than thirty miles from any Treaty port is required to procure a Consular passport, and any one found without such a passport beyond that distance will be liable to prosecution.

XVII.—The term Consul in these Regulations shall be construed to include all and every officer in Her Majesty's Consular service, whether Consul-General, Consul-Vice-Consul, or Consular agent, or other person duly authorized to act in any of the aforesaid capacities within the dominions of the Emperor of China.

XVIII.—British vessels are bound as to mooring and pilotage to act in accordance with the Harbour and Pilotage Regulations authorized in each port by Her Majesty's Minister for the time being, and any infraction of the same shall render the party offending liable to the penalties attached to these regulations.

XIX.—No loading or discharging of cargo may be carried on except within the limits of the anchorage defined by the Consul and the Chinese authorities of each port.

XX.—Any infringement of the preceding General Port Regulations or of the Special Regulations referred to in Regulations XVIII. and XIX. shall subject the offender, for each offence, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding three months with or without hard labour, and with or without a fine not exceeding 200 dollars or to a fine not exceeding 200 dollars, without imprisonment, and with or without further fines for continuing offences, not exceeding in any case 25 dollars for each day during which the offence continues after the original fine is incurred; such fine to be inflicted, levied, and enforced in accordance with the Order of Her Majesty in Council dated the 9th day of March, 1865.

And in consideration of the urgent necessity for these Regulations, the undersigned hereby further declares that they shall have effect unless and until they shall be disapproved by Her Most Gracious Majesty, and notification of such disapproval shall be received and published by me or other of Her Majesty's Ministers in China.

Such vessel must undergo inspection by the proper sanitary authorities.

The sanitary authorities shall, on approaching the vessel, be informed whether any cases of any such diseases have actually occurred during the voyage and the nature of such diseases, in order that suitable precaution may be taken.

The said ship must not lower the yellow flag or the above-mentioned lights until it shall have been admitted to "free pratique," neither shall any person land from it nor shall any communication be held with other ships without the permission of the proper sanitary authorities.

The provisions of the preceding paragraphs apply to vessels anchored within the harbour limits on board of which any of the above-mentioned epidemic or contagious diseases have broken out.

Such vessels must change their berth on receiving an order to that effect from the Harbour Master.

Any vessel arriving from a place infected with cattle-disease or on board of which such disease has broken out during the voyage shall not land or tranship either the cattle, their dead bodies, skins, hides or bones, without the permission of the proper saintary authorities.

Art. XIII.—No carcases, ballast, ashes, sweepings, etc., shall be thrown overboard within the harbour limits.

Whilst taking in or discharging coal, ballast or other similar materials, the necessary precautions shall be taken to prevent their falling into the sea.

If any materials detrimental to the harbour shall have been thrown into the sea or shall have been allowed to fall in through negligence by any ship, they shall be removed by the ship upon receipt of an order to that effect from the Harbour Master; and if not so removed the Harbour Master may cause them to be removed at the ship's expense.

Art. XIV.—Any ship intending to leave port shall give notice at the Harbour Master's Office and hoist the Blue Peter.

Steamers which have fixed dates of departure need only make one declaration on their arrival and departure.

Art. XV.—All wreckage or other substances which obstruct the public fairway in a harbour or its approaches must be removed by their owner within the time indicated by the Harbour Master. If this order is not complied with within the time specified by the Harbour Master, the Harbour Master may cause them to be removed or destroyed at the owner's expense.

Art. XVI.—A suitable and sufficient number of buoy-moorings for regular Mail Steamers shall be provided by the Harbour Master's Office. A prescribed fee shall be charged for the use of such moorings.

Art. XVII.—No chains, ropes, or other gear shall be attached to any lightship, signal, buoy or beacon.

Any vessel running foul of or damaging a light-ship, buoy, beacon, jetty, or any other structure shall pay the necessary expenses for repairs or replacement.

Art. XVIII.—Any infringement of the provisions of the present Regulations shall render the offender liable to a fine of not less than Yen 2 and not exceeding Yen 200.

Art. XIX.—The Master of a vessel shall also be held responsible for any fines, fees or expenses which may be imposed or charged on or in respect of the vessel.

Art. XX.—No vessel shall be allowed to depart until all fines, fees and expenses imposed or charged under these Regulations shall have been paid, or until security therefor to the satisfaction of the Harbour Master shall have been deposited with the Harbour Master.

Art. XXI.—The word "Harbour Master" as used in these Regulations is also meant to include the Harbour Master's Assistants and Deputies; and by the word "Master" is meant any person in command of, or having the direction of, a ship, whatever his designation may be; and by the word "Port" or "Harbour" is meant one of the ports or harbours enumerated in Article I. of these Regulations.

Art. XXII.—A portion of each harbour shall be reserved as a man-of-war anchorage.

Art. XXIII.—The only provisions in these Regulations which shall apply to men-of-war are those contained in Articles IV., VI., XII. and XXI., and in the first and second paragraphs of Article XIII.

Art. XXIV.—The time when and the localities where these Regulations are to come into operation shall be notified by the Minister of Communications. The Minister of Communications shall also issue detailed rules for the due enforcement of these Regulations.

THE UNITED STATES COURT FOR CHINA

(Chapter 3934, Prescribing the Jurisdiction of the Court)

Be it Enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress Assembled, That a Court is hereby established, to be called the United States Court for China, which shall have exclusive jurisdiction in all cases and judicial proceedings whereof jurisdiction may now be exercised by United States Consuls and Ministers by law and by virtue of treaties between the United States and China, except in so far as the said jurisdiction is qualified by Section 2 of this Act. The said Court shall hold sessions at Shanghai, China, and shall also hold sessions at the cities of Canton, Tientsin, and Hankow at stated periods, the dates of such sessions at each city to be announced in such manner as the Court shall direct, and a session of the Court shall be held in each of these cities at least once annually. It shall be within the power of the judge, upon due notice to the parties in litigation, to open and hold Court for the hearing of a special cause at any place permitted by the treaties, and where there is a United States Consulate, when, in his judgment, it shall be required by the convenience of witnesses, or by some public interest. The place of sitting of the Court shall be in the United States Consulate at each of the cities, respectively.

That the seal of the said United States Court for China shall be the arms of the United States, engraved on a circular piece of steel of the size of a half dollar, with these words on the margin, "The Seal of the United States Court for China."

The seal of said Court shall be provided at the expense of the United States.

All writs and processes issuing from the said Court, and all transcripts, records, copies, jurats, acknowledgments, and other papers requiring certification or to be under seal, may be authenticated by said seal, and shall be signed by the clerk of said Court. All processes issued from the said Court shall bear test from the day of such issue.

Sec. 2.—The Consuls of the United States in the cities of China to which they are respectively accredited shall have the same jurisdiction as they now possess in civil cases where the sum or value of the property involved in the controversy does not exceed five hundred dollars United States money, and in criminal cases where the punishment for the offence charged cannot exceed by law one hundred dollars' fine or sixty days' imprisonment, or both, and shall have power to arrest, examine, and discharge accused persons or commit them to the said Court. From all final judgments of the Consular Court either party shall have the right of appeal to the United States Court for China: Provided, Also, That appeal may be taken to the United States Court for China from any final judgment of the Consular Courts of the United States in Korea so long as the rights of extra-territoriality shall obtain in favour of the United States. The said United States Court for China shall have and exercise supervisory control over the discharge by Consuls and Vice-Consuls of the duties prescribed by the laws of the United States relating to the estates of decedents in China. Within sixty days after the death in China of any citizen of the United States, or any citizen of any territory belonging to the United States, the Consul or Vice-Consul whose duty it becomes to take possession of the effects of such deceased person under the laws of the United States shall file with the clerk of said Court a worn inventory of such effects, and shall, as additional effects come from time to time into his possession, immediately file a supplemental inventory or inventories of the same. He shall also file with the clerk of said Court within said sixty days a schedule under oath of the debts of said decedent, so far as known, and a schedule or statement of all additional debts thereafter discovered. Such Consul or Vice-Consul shall pay no claims against the estate without the written approval of the judge of said Court, nor shall he make sale of any of the assets of said estate without first reporting the same to said judge and obtaining a written approval of said sale, and he shall likewise within ten days after any such sale report the fact of such sale to said Court, and the amount derived therefrom. The said judge shall have power to require at any time reports from Consuls or Vice-Consuls in respect of all their acts and doings relating to the estate of any such deceased person. The said Court shall have power to require, where it may be necessary, a special bond for the faithful performance of his duty to be given by any Consul or Vice-Consul into whose possession the estate of any such deceased citizen shall have come in such amount and with such sureties as may be deemed necessary, and for failure to give such bond when required, or for failure to properly perform his duties in the premises, the Court may appoint some other person to take charge of said estate, such person having first given bond as aforesaid. A record shall be kept by the clerk of said Court of all proceedings in respect of any such estate under the provisions hereof.

Sec. 3.—That appeals shall lie from all final judgments or decrees of said Court to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the ninth judicial circuit, and thence appeals and writs of error may be taken from the judgments or decrees of the said Circuit Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States in the same class of cases as those in which appeals and writs of error are permitted to judgments of said Court of Appeals in cases coming from District and Circuit Courts of the United States. Said appeals or writs of error shall be regulated by the procedure governing appeals within the United States from the District Courts to the Circuit Courts of Appeal, and from the Circuit Courts of Appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, respectively, so far as the same shall be applicable; and said Courts are hereby empowered to hear and determine appeals and writs of error so taken.

Sec. 4.—The jurisdiction of said United States Court, boh original and not appeal, in civil and criminal matters, and also the jurisdiction of the Consular Courts in China, shall in all cases be exercised in conformity with said treaties and the laws of the United States now in force in reference to the American Consular Courts in China, and all judgments and decisions of said Consular Courts, and all decisions, judgments, and decrees of said United States Court, shall be enforced in accordance with said treaties and laws. But in all such cases when laws are deficient in the provisions necessary to give jurisdiction or to furnish suitable remedies, the common law and the law as established by the decisions of the Courts of the United States shall be applied by said Court in its decisions and shall govern the same subject to the terms of any treaties between the United States and China.

Sec. 5.—That the procedure of the said Court shall be in accordance, so far as practicable, with the existing procedure prescribed for Consular Courts in China in accordance with the Revised Statutes of the United States: Provided, however, that the judge of the said United States Court for China shall have authority from time to time to modify and supplement said rules of procedure. The provisions of sections forty-one hundred and six and forty-one hundred and seven of the Revised Statutes of the United States allowing Consuls in certain cases to summon associates shall have no application to said Court.

Sec. 6.—There shall be a district attorney, a marshal, and a clerk of said Court with authority possessed by the corresponding officers of the District Courts in the United States as far as may be consistent with the conditions of the laws of the United States and said treaties. The judge of said Court and the district attorney, who shall be lawyers of good standing and experience, marshal, and clerk shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall receive as salary, respectively, the sums of eight thousand dollars per annum for said judge, four thousand dollars per annum for said district attorney, three thousand dollars per annum for said marshal, and three thousand dollars per annum for said clerk. The judge of the said Court and the district attorney shall, when the sessions of the Court are held at other cities than Shanghai, receive in addition to their salaries their necessary expenses during such sessions not to exceed ten dollars per day for the judge and five dollars per day for the district attorney.

Sec. 7.—The tenure of office of the judge of said Court shall be ten years, unless sooner removed by the President for cause; the tenure of office of the other officials of the Court shall be at the pleasure of the President.

Sec. 8.—The marshal and the clerk of said Court shall be required to furnish bond for the faithful performance of their duties, in sums and with sureties to be fixed and approved by the judge of the Court. They shall each appoint, with the written approval of said judge, deputies at Canton and Tientsin, who shall also be required to furnish bonds for the faithful performance of their duties, which bonds shall be subject, both as to form and sufficiency of the sureties, to the approval of the said judge. Such deputies shall receive compensation at the rate of five dollars for each day the sessions of the Court are held at their respective cities. The office of marshal in China now existing in pursuance of section forty-one hundred and eleven of the Revised Statutes is thereby abolished.

Sec. 9.—The tariff of fees of said officers of the Court shall be the same as the tariff already fixed for the Consular Courts in China, subject to amendment from time to time by order of the President, and all fees taxed and received shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States.

Approved, June 30, 1906.

Extract

The judicial authority and jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases now vested in and reserved to the Consul-General of the United States at Shanghai, China, by the Act of June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six, entitled, "An Act creating a United States Court for China and prescribing the jurisdiction thereof," shall, subsequent to June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and nine, be vested in and exercised by a Vice-Consul-General of the United States to be designated from time to time by the Secretary of State, and the Consul-General at Shanghai shall thereafter be relieved of his judicial functions.

REGULATIONS GOVERNING THE INSPECTION OF PASSPORTS OF FOREIGNERS ENTERING CHINESE TERRITORY

Promulgated August 22, 1930, by Order of the Administrative Yuan of the National Government, Republic of China

Art. I.—Unless otherwise provided for by law or treaty, Passports held by all foreigners entering the territory of the Republic of China shall be inspected in accordance with the provisions of the following Regulations.

Art. II.—A Passport shall give the name, sex, age, native place, address and occupation of the holder, and the reason for entering Chinese territory; it shall have a photograph attached and be viséd at a Chinese Consulate established in a foreign country. A Passport may include the members of a family (children under age) and servants; but the names and other particulars must be given in the Passport with photographs attached.

Art. III.—Passports shall be inspected by the local government in Chinese territory. If necessary, the Maritime and Native Customs may be asked to assist. In special cases the Department concerned of the Central Government may appoint officials to direct and supervise inspection. The places of inspection will be separately specified.

Art. IV.—If during inspection any one of the following conditions is found to exist the foreigner concerned may be denied entry into Chinese territory. The conditions are:—

1. When there is no Passport or when inspection is objected to.
2. When the Passport is not in regular order or is fraudulently obtained or forged.
3. When the holder's activities may be detrimental to the interests of the Kuomintang or Government, or may endanger public peace andsecurity.
4. When the holder is a vagabond or mendicant.
5. When contrabands or indecent articles are carried.
6. When holder has previously been expelled from Chinese territory.

Art. V.—If during inspection, any doubt should arise as to the purport of the conditions set forth in the preceding article, the Inspector shall refer the matter to his superior officer by the quickest means possible and he may temporarily detain the foreigner pending decision.

Art. VI.—Foreigners who are exempted by law or treaty from the necessity of producing Passports on entering Chinese territory shall nevertheless be subject to the provisions of Sections 3, 4 and 6 of Art. 4 and Art. 5.

Art. VII.—Detailed Rules supplementary to these Regulations are framed separately.

Art. VIII.—These Regulations shall be effective four months after date of promulgation.

Supplementary Rules to Regulations Governing the Inspection of Passports of Foreigners Entering Chinese Territory.

Art. I.—These detailed Rules are made in pursuance of Article 7 of the Regulations governing the inspection of Passports of foreigners entering Chinese territory (hereinafter referred to as "Regulations.")

Art. II.—The expression "children under age" as used in Clause 2 of Article of the Regulations, shall be determined by the age limit fixed by the Civil Law of the Republic of China.

Art. III.—The places where the inspection of Passports of foreigners entering Chinese territory will take place are as follows:—

(A) Land Routes

Manchuli	Harbin	Ili	Kowloon	Szemao
Pogranichnaya	Chinchou	Kashgaria	(also by sea)	Mengtsz
Hui Chun	Changchiakou	Ta Cheng	Tung Shing	Hokou
Yen Chi	Suiyuan	Chien Shan	Tengyueh	Lungchow

(B) Sea Routes

Canton	Samshui	Chung Shan	Swatow	Foochow	Woosung
Pakhoi	Kongmoon	Harbour	Amoy	Shanghai

Tsingtao	Lungkou	Chinwangtao	Antung	Taheiho
Chefoo	Tientsin or	Hulutao	(also by land)	Tungkiang
Weihaiwei	Tangku	Newchwang	Aigun

(C) Air Routes

Before an aerodrome has been laid out, Passports of foreigners entering Chinese territory by aircraft shall be inspected at the first authorized landing station.

In case of necessity, the number of stations where Passports are inspected may be increased or reduced by the various departments concerned after sanction has been duly obtained.

The places of inspection on the borders of Mongolia and Tibet shall be given separately.

Art. IV.—A foreigner denied entry into Chinese territory under the terms of Art. 4 of the Regulations, if found unable to leave the territory of the Republic of China shall be handed over to the Consul of his nationality to be dealt with.

Art. V.—When the assistance of officers of the Maritime or Native Customs is required in the examination of Passports the local authorities and the Customs shall jointly make the necessary arrangements, and report to the Department concerned for record.

Art. VI.—Passports of foreigners entering Chinese territory besides being subject to the provisions of Art. 3 of the Regulations are subject to inspection by local authorities in the interior.

Art. VII.—If any one of the following conditions is found to exist, the local authorities in the interior shall at once detain the foreigner and report to the Senior Official for instructions:—

1. Any one of the conditions as laid down in Art. 4 of the Regulations.
2. When the Passport produced does not bear a chop to show that it has been inspected.

Art. VIII.—The Inspector shall not ask for any payment from the foreigner for inspection of Passport.

Art. IX.—The Inspector when inspecting Passports shall be in uniform and shall wear a distinctive badge. The badges shall be prescribed by the Department concerned.

Art. X.—The Inspector when inspecting Passports, shall give the foreigner desiring to enter Chinese territory an inspection form to be carefully filled in; said form shall be prescribed separately.

Art. XI.—The Inspector after inspection shall impress a chop on the Passport giving the date of inspection. The form of this chop shall be prescribed by the Department concerned.

Art. XII.—The Inspecting authorities shall, before the 10th of each month, submit a table giving the name, sex, age, native place, occupation and address, as well as the reason for entering China, of all foreigners to whom permission has been granted or refused during the preceding month. This table shall be sent to the highest local authority for transmission to the Department concerned for record.

Art. XIII.—In the event of any case arising not covered by the provisions of the Regulations or the detailed Supplementary Rules, the inspecting authority shall immediately telegraph to the Department concerned for instructions.

Art. XIV.—These detailed Rules shall be effective from the date the Regulations are put in force.

NOTES TO THE IMPORT TARIFF

If any of the articles provided for in this Tariff are imported in dimensions exceeding those specified, the duty is to be calculated in proportion to the measurements as defined.

The term "n.o.p.f." in this Tariff stands for "not otherwise provided for."

RULING FOR CALCULATING DUTY-PAYING VALUE OF COMMODITIES PAYING SPECIFIC RATES ON BASIS OF VALUE

1.—Wherever the tariff duty rate leviable on imported goods is subdivided into grades which are determined by the value of the goods, the word "value" is to be regarded as meaning the duty-paying value as defined in section 1 of Rule 1 of the Import Tariff Provisional Rules. The following additions are to be made to this "value" before comparing it with the wholesale market value of the goods for purposes of duty assessment:—

(a) The Tariff duty rate;
(b) Surtax or surtaxes at present in force; and
(c) 7 per cent. of the "value" in order to arrive at the wholesale market value of the particular grade.

2.—If the wholesale market value of the merchandise falls within the limits of a grade as ascertained by applying the rule given in section 1, duty shall be charged in accordance with the tariff rate prescribed for that grade.

3.—If the wholesale market value of the merchandise falls within the limits of any grade as ascertained by applying the rule given in section 1, duty shall be charged in accordance with the tariff rate prescribed for the grade which, when converted, approaches most nearly this wholesale market value.

NOTES TO SECTIONS I, II, III, AND IV.

In case piece goods or knitted tissues are constituted of more than one kind of fibre, the presence of any kind of fibre which does not exceed 5 per cent. by weight shall not affect the tariff classification of such goods.

The classification of goods made of Cotton, Flax, Ramie, Hemp, Jute, Wool, and/or Silk (Natural or Artificial) shall not be affected by such goods having been stitched, taped, whipped, or faced with materials other than those of which the goods are made.

Articles consisting partly of lace, trimmings, or any other ornamental materials or decorated therewith are liable to a duty of 5 per cent. ad volorem in addition to the ordinary duty leviable thereon.

The term "Silk" in that Tariff includes "Artificial Silk."

EASTERN SIBERIA

VLADIVOSTOCK

Vladivostock is the chief town of the Maritime Province, which, together with the Habarovsk, Nicolaevsk, Amour, Zeia, Tchita, Sretensk, Kamchatka, and Saghalien Provinces forms the "Far Eastern Region" of Siberia. The administrative centre is at Habarovsk.

The port of Vladivostock, lies in latitude 43 deg. 7 min. North, longitude 131 deg. 54 min. East, at the southern end of a long peninsula reaching into Peter the Great Bay. Of the ports in East Siberia it is by far the most important. It has one of the most magnificent harbours in the East. From its peculiar long and narrow shape and the once supposed hidden treasures in the slightly auriferous soil of its surrounding hills it has not inappropriately been called the Golden Horn. The entrances to the harbour are hidden by Russian Island, which divides the fairway into two narrow passages. This fine sheet of water first runs for about half a mile in a northern direction and then suddenly bends to the east for a distance of about one mile. On all sides it is surrounded by hills low on the southern and higher on the northern shore; these hills slope sharply down to the water's edge. Once verdane with foliage, they have been completely denuded of trees by reckless felling. The harbour, capable of accommodating an almost unlimited number of vessels of deep draught and large capacity, affords a safe anchorage. During the winter months it is kept open by ice-breakers so that steamers can always find their way in without difficulty. There is a floating dock capable of taking in vessels up to 3,000 tons, and a fine graving dock of the following dimensions:—Length over all, 621 feet; length at bottom, 564 feet; breadth, 118 feet; breadth at entrance, 90 feet; min. depth, 29 feet. There are also two large docks built especially for purposes of the State war fleet, but merchant vessels are now permitted to dock in them. Thanks to assistance from the railway authorities in the form of revised freight rates and efforts to employ a maximum number of cars during the last two years, shipments via Changchun to South Manchurian ports assumed dimensions indicating that an outlet via Vladivostock is not vital to the prosperity of North Manchuria.

A large import business was formerly done, the main lines being cotton goods, iron, machinery, flour, fresh and potted meat, boots, and tea for transportation into the interior. The municipal affairs of Vladivostock were managed by a Mayor and Town Council elected by and from among the Russian civil community. In the Autumn of 1922 the Soviet Government at Moscow extended its authority to Vladivostock. The town is built on the southern slope of the hills running along the northern shore of the harbour, and handsome brick residences have been erected in recent years, replacing the old wooden structures. The entire area, with the exception of some unoccupied lots intervening here and there, is covered by buildings, and the town is well laid out with wide but ill-kept roads. The sanitary arrangements are bad, though the town is fairly healthy. Most conspicuous among the buildings are the government offices, the post and telegraph offices, municipal house, the barracks, the railway station, the museum, the Russian church, the residences formerly occupied by the Governor and by the Admiral Commanding (the latter residence is surrounded by a public garden), while the houses formerly belonging to the more affluent merchants are well and substantially built. There are two or three hotels, a university, several schools for boys and girls, and military, naval and civil hospitals. In June, 1891, the late Tsar cut at Vladivostock the first sod of the Siberian Railway, which was completed in 1902. The port is the terminus of the great trunk line from Moscow, and there are steamship services to Japan and Shanghai.

NICOLAEVSK

The port and settlement of Nicolaevsk, founded in 1851 by Admiral Nevelskoi, is situated on the river Amur, about 39 miles from its mouth. The Amur is here about nine miles in width, with a depth in mid-stream of eight to nine fathoms and a current of three to four knots, though the river is very shallow in parts, even in mid-stream. It is navigable for vessels of light draught for more than 2,000 miles, and vessels of 12 feet draught can get up 600 miles. The town is built on a plateau 50 feet above the sea level and gradually slopes eastward down to the river. The most conspicuous edifice is the Cathedral, round which the town is built. This structure is imposing in appearance, with a large west tower, having belfry and dome, but it is built of wood and is showing signs of deterioration. At the back of the Cathedral is a large grass-grown square, two sides of which are occupied by barracks, the "Governor's" house, and police station. There are few substantial houses in the town, except those used as public buildings or stores, and the buildings are small and wholly built of wood. The town suffered badly in the Spring of 1920 in the struggle between "Reds" and "Whites," and a large part of it was burned down. There is little trade at present except in fish and cranberries, quantities of salmon being dried and cured here. There is a small export of Manchurian soya beans to Japan.

JAPAN

Constitution and Government

The government of the Japanese Empire was anciently, in theory at least, that of an absolute monarchy, but the real administrative and executive power was in the hands of the Shogun and his clansmen. In the year 1868 the Imperialist party overthrew, after a short war, the power of the Shogun, together with that of the Daimios, or feudal nobles, who, on the 25th June, 1869, resigned their lands, revenues, and retainers to the Mikado, by whom they were permitted to retain one-tenth of their original incomes, but ordered to reside in the capital in future. The sovereign is known as the Emperor. The word "Mikado" is only one of many honorific titles and has never been in general use among the Japanese.

Hirohito, the reigning monarch, succeeded to the throne in December, 1927, and the coronation ceremonies were performed in Kyoto in November, 1928. His Majesty is thirty-six years of age and is, according to Japanese chronology, partly mythical, the 124th of an unbroken dynasty, founded 660 B.C.

The power of the Mikado was formerly absolute, but its exercise was controlled to some extent by custom and public opinion. The Emperor Mutsuhito, posthumously and ordinarily known as the Emperor Meiji in 1875, when the Senate and Supreme Judicial Tribunal were founded, solemnly declared his earnest desire to have a constitutional system of government. The Mikado has long been regarded as the spiritual as well as the temporal head of the Empire, but, although the Shinto faith is held to be a form of national religion, the Emperor does not interfere in religious matters, and all religions are tolerated in Japan. The Ecclesiastical Department was in 1877 reduced to a simple bureau under the control of the Minister of the Interior. The Emperor acts through an Executive Ministry divided into eleven departments, —Gwaimu Sho (Foreign Affairs), Naimu Sho (Interior), Okura Sho (Finance), Kaigun Sho (Navy), Rikugun Sho (Army), Shiho Sho (Justice), Mombu Sho (Education), Norin Sho (Agriculture and Forestry), Shoko Sho (Commerce and Industry), Teishin Sho (Communications) Takumusho (Overseas Affairs) and Tetsudo-sho (Railways). In 1888 a Privy Council, modelled on that of Great Britain, was constituted. The new Constitution, promised by the Mikado, was proclaimed on the 11th February, 1889, and in July, 1890, the first Parliament was elected; it met on the 29th November. The Parliamentary system is bicameral, the House of Peers and the House of Representatives constituting the Imperial Diet.

The Empire is divided for administrative purposes into three Fu, or urban prefectures (Tokyo, Kyoto, and Osaka), and 43 Ken, or prefectures, including the Loochoo Islands, which have been converted into a ken and named Okinawa. The island of Yezo is under a separate administration, called Hokkaido-cho. Chosen or Corea, which was annexed by Japan in 1910, Formosa, and the Kwantung Province of Manchuria are governed as colonies with a Governor General, or, in the case of Kwantung, a Governor, under the general supervision of the Ministry of Overseas Affairs. Kwantung Province was originally leased by Russia from China, the lease being taken over by Japan as a result of the Russo-Japanese war. The fu and ken are governed by prefects, who are all of equal rank, are under the control of the Ministry of the Interior and have limited powers, being required to submit every matter, unless there is a precedent for it, to the Minister of the Interior. Nor have they any concern in judicial proceedings, which come under the cognizance of the 51 local Courts, and the seven Supreme Courts at Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya, Hiroshima, Nagasaki, Miyagi, and Sapporo, over which the Daishin-In presides at Tokyo.

Previous to the last change of Government, which restored the ancient Imperial régime, the administrative authority rested with the Shogun (Military Commander), whom foreigners were at first led to recognise as the temporal sovereign, and with whom they negotiated treaties of peace and commerce. The Shogunate was founded in 1184 by Yoritomo, a general of great valour and ability, and was continued through several dynasties until 1868, when the Tokugawa family were dispossessed of the usurped authority. Under the Shogun 300 or more Daimios (feudal princes) shared the administrative power, being practically supreme in their respective domains conditionally upon their loyalty to the Shogun; but their rank and power disappeared with the Shogunate. On the 7th July, 1884, however, His Majesty issued an Imperial Notification and Rescript rehabilitating the nobility, and admitting to its ranks the most distinguished civil and military officials who took part in the work of the Restoration. The old titles were abolished, and have been replaced by those of Prince (Ko), Marquis (Ko), Count (Haku), Viscount (Shi), and Baron (Dan).

Population

The total area of Japan, exclusive of Formosa and Chosen, is estimated at 163,042 square miles. The population of the Empire, according to the returns from the Census Board in 1935, was 69,254,148 for Japan Proper; 22,899,038 for Korea; 5,212,426 for Formosa: and 33,967 for Saghalien. The most populous cities are Tokyo, Osaka, Kyoto, Nagoya, Kobe, Yokohama and Nagasaki in the order named. Japan is geographically divided into the four islands: Honshiu, the central and most important territory; Kiushiu, "nine provinces," the south-western island; Shikoku, "the four provinces," the southern island; and Hokkaido, the most northerly and least developed. The first three islands are sub-divided into eight large areas, containing 66 provinces, and the latter Hokkaido is divided into 11 provinces.

Extension of the Japanese railway systems has proceeded uninterruptedly since the first line was laid in 1872. The mileage open to traffic in Japan proper (excluding Chosen, Formosa and Saghalien), according to the 1930 returns, is 8,826 miles of State railway and 5,769 miles of private railway. The Government in 1906 decided on the State ownership of all railways which are used for general traffic, the object being to improve the facilities for direct traffic over long distances, to accelerate transportation, and to cheapen the cost. The Government proposed to purchase the lines belonging to 32 private companies within a period extending from 1906 to 1911, but the House of Peers, when the Bills came before them, reduced the number of companies to be bought out to 17 and extended the period of purchase to 1915. The aggregate length of the lines it was decided to purchase was 2,812 miles. It was soon found advisable for various reasons to carry through the whole transaction in one year, and the sum of Yen 483,569,325 was paid during the two years 1907-8 and 1908-9. As a result of the war with Russia, the South Manchurian Railway was taken over by Japan. There are well over 4,000 miles of electric tramway in Japan, with many more under construction.

By treaties made with a number of foreign Governments the Japanese ports of Kanagawa (Yokohama), Nagasaki, Kobe, Hakodate, Niigata, and the cities of Tokyo (formerly called Yedo) and Osaka were thrown open to foreign commerce. In 1894 new treaties were signed with the Powers by which extra-territoriality was abolished and the whole country opened to foreign trade and residence, the treaty to come into force in July, 1899. Actually, extra-territoriality ceased to exist on August 4th, 1899.

Education

Education is national and very general in Japan, and is making great progress. There are numerous High Schools, Middle Schools, Normal Schools, and Colleges for special studies—such as Law, Commerce, Science, Medicine, Mining, Agriculture, and Foreign Languages—and several Female High Schools have been established, and are carefully fostered by the Government. In order to facilitate the prosecution of foreign studies the Government employs many European professors, and also sends, at the public expense, a large number of students every year to America and Europe.

The Earthquakes of 1923 and 1930

An appalling earthquake—probably the most disastrous in its consequences of any recorded in the history of the world—occurred in Tokyo and Yokohama and the surrounding district on September 1st, 1923, as a result of which 100,000 people were killed, 43,000 were missing and believed to be dead and 113,000 were injured. The material damage was enormous. A very large proportion of the buildings in the capital and the chief port were reduced to dust and ashes by the earthquake and the fires which followed. The official returns gave a total of 6,962 factories destroyed, and assessed the damage at yen $380,000,000. Great progress has been made in Tokyo and Yokohama with re-construction work on the most modern lines.

On November 26th, 1930, Japan experienced another serious earthquake, 252 people being killed, 351 injured and over 8,000 buildings were damaged. Though the shock was felt severely in Tokyo the special precautions taken in the rebuilding of the capital fully justified themselves and practically no damage was sustained in the rural districts. The total damage was estimated over twenty million yen.

Foreign Trade For 1935

The foreign trade of Japan proper for the year 1935 amounts to Y4,971,309,000; that is, Y2,499,073,000 in exports and Y,2472,236,000 in imports, the balance in favour of exports being Y26,837,000. Compared with 1934 this represents an increase of Y327,149,000 in exports and Y189,706,000 in imports. The balance in 1934 was unfavourable to Japan by an import excess of Y110,606,000.

The exports which have increased in value are: Raw silk by Y100,238,000, Vegetable Fatty Oils by Y20,760,000, Rayon Tissues by Y14,776,000, Iron by Y12,806,000, Cotton Yarns by Y12,387,000, Comestibles (in tin and bottle) by Y6,825,000, Machinery by Y6,079,000, Wheat Flour by Y5,248,000, Aquatic Products by Y4,262,000, Refined Sugar by Y4,046,000, Copper by Y10,273,000, Glass and Glass Manufactures by Y,3883,000, Cotton Tissues by Y3,716,000, Toys by Y3,477,000, Hosiery by Y2,649,000, Woollen Tissues by Y2,552,000 and Paper by Y2,435,000. The only decreases were in Rice and Paddy by Y3,194,000, Beans and Peas by Y2,329,000, Hats and Caps by Y1,576,000 and Dried Plants for Insectifuge by Y1,047,000.

The chief changes among the commodities imported were gains of Y35,596,000 in Iron, Y24,343,000 in Crude Oil and Heavy Oils, Y19,681,000 in Beans and Peas Y17,831,000 in Oil Yielding Materials, Y16,736,000 in Ores, Y1,778,000 in Coal, Y10,845,000 in Pulp for Paper-making, Y10,273,000 in Copper, Y9,592,000 in Wood, Y7,262,000 in Sulphate of Ammonia (crude), Y6,986,000 in Machinery, Y6,892,000 in Aluminum, Y5,169,000 in Hides and Skins, Y5,306,000 in Wool, Y3,383,000 in Phosphorite, Y3,022,000 in Crude Sugar, Y2,450,000 in Wheat, Y2,688,000 in Rice and Paddy, and Y2,389,000 in Lead; and decreases of Y17,163,000 in Raw Cotton, Y5,702,000 in Crude Rubber, Y3,374,000 in Oil-cake and Y1,397,000 in Wheat Bran.

The trade with China and Manchukuo for the year 1935 totalled Y925,389,000 as against Y831,144,000 for the year 1934, showing a favourable balance of Y224,764,000 as against a favourable balance of Y209,108,000 in 1934.

TOKYO

The capital of Japan is situated on Tokyo Bay, on the East coast of Japan. The river Sumida runs through the city, the larger part lying to the west of this waterway, while on the east lie the two wards named Honjo and Fukagawa

Tokyo as viewed from the bay is a pleasant-looking city, being well situated undulating ground, and possessing abundant foliage. The city covers 198 square miles and is divided into 35 wards.

In 1603, when Iyeyasu became Shogun, he made Yedo, as it was then called his capital, and from that time, in spite of the earthquakes which several times nearly destroyed it and the fires which ravaged it, the city continued to grow until it exceeded Kyoto, the ancient capital, in population and in splendour. The transfer of the Imperial Capital from Kyoto to Tokyo, as it was then re-named, in 1868, brought increased prosperity to the city, and from a population of a little more than 580,000 in 1878, it increased to 1,230,000 in 1888, to 1,140,000 in 1898, and to 2,170,000 in 1920 when the first national census was taken. According to the 1935 census the population was 875,388.

Tokyo is one of the three cities in Japan which stands in a prefecture by itself, with a Governor appointed by the Central Government. The city itself is governed by a Mayor and a Municipality, which now has control over most of the public utilities, including the water and electric supplies, and the tramways. Of recent years the feudal aspect of Tokyo has almost entirely disappeared, the streets having been widened so as to permit of modern traffic conditions. Many fine buildings have also been erected, such as the Imperial Theatre, Kabuki Theatre, the Imperial Hotel and large blocks of business houses. Tokyo Central Station situated in the heart of the business quarters, is now connected with all the main lines in Japan, thus adding to the convenience of passengers.

A section well worth a visit is the public park or garden named Uyeno, where formerly stood the magnificent temple founded and maintained by the Shoguns, and which was destroyed by fire during the War of Restoration in July, 1868. In Uyeno is also situated the fine Imperial Museum (Haku-butsu-kwan), the Tokyo Gallery of Fine Arts, the Academy of Music and a small Zoological Garden.

Undoubtedly the finest recent addition to the capital is the Miji Shrine dedicated to the Emperor Meiji, (1868-1911), and its beautiful outer garden which includes a fine stadium for athletic meetings and football matches, a huge baseball ground, a swimming pool and an imposing Meiji Art Gallery.

Among the places much resorted to by visitors is the ancient temple of Kwannon, at Asakusa, not far from Uyeno, one of the most popular and most frequented temples in Japan. At the right of the temple there is a fine old Pagoda, and near it are two colossal stone statues. A new park was also opened close to the temple about the same time as that of Uyeno. Thus, with Shiba, in the southwest, where are to be seen some of the splendid shrines of the Shoguns, among the chief glories of Tokyo, there are three large public gardens within the city, in addition to the Meiji Shrine garden mentioned above.

Tokyo does no direct foreign trade, all goods from abroad or coming from abroad, being handled by lighters to and from Yokohama. Of late years Tokyo has become the centre of a large industrial district. In addition to the smaller industries that are carried on in the city itself, there are in the immediate vicinity of the capital large cotton mills, iron foundries, and machine shops which employ thousands of hands.

The districts of Honjo and Fukagawa form a distinct industrial portion of the capital. Here is the centre of the lumber and other trades. This quarter is connected with the rest of the city by ten splendid bridges all rebuilt since the earthquake. The biggest of them are called, commencing on the north, Senju-O-Hashi, Kototoi-Bashi (new built), Azuma-Bashi, Komagata-Bash, (new built), Umaya-Bashi, Kuramae-Bashi (new built), Ryogoku-Bashi, Shino-Bashi Kiyosu-Bashi (new built), and Eitai-Bashi, respectively. From these the traveller may obtain a fine view of the animated river-life of the Sumida, whose waters are always covered with junks and boats of all descriptions.

Several great first have swept Tokyo during the last two decades, and these have led to great improvements and widening of the streets. The last of these broke out on September 1st, 1923, following upon a very severe earthquake. The casualties due to this terrible visitation were as follows, according to a return issued in November by the Home Office:—Dead 68,215; missing (believed to be dead) 39,304; injured. 42,135. The number of houses destroyed is said to have been 316,000, or 71 per cent. of the whole of the buildings of the city; and no fewer than 1,360,000 people were rendered homeless.

The soldiers and police are dressed in uniform on the western model. Though large numbers appear in European garb, the native dress still commonly worn, and in the case of the women has practically not at all been superseded.

The environs of Tokyo are very picturesque and offer a great variety of pleasant walks or rides. Foreigners will find much to interest them in the country around. The finest scenery is at the northern and western sides of the city, where the country is surrounded by beautiful hills, from which there is a distant view of the noble mountains of Hakone while beyond rises in solitary grandeur the towering peak of Fuji-san covered with snow for the greater part of the year.

Many of the most famous educational institutions are situated in Tokyo. In addition to the Imperial University, there is the celebrated Waseda University, the Keio Gijuku, the Meiji Gakuin, the Aoyama Gakuin, and a large number of technical, normal, commercial and other colleges.

Tokyo was opened to foreign residence in 1870 and an area of land at Tsukiji on the waterfront was set aside as a Foreign Settlement, which was largely taken advantage of by Christian Missionary bodies. With the passing of extra-territoriality, however, residence by foreigners in any part of the city became possible, and of late years many foreign firms have established offices in Tokyo.

YOKOHAMA

Yokohama is situated on the Bay of Tokyo, in lat. 35 deg. 26 min. 11 sec. N., and long. 139 deg. 39 min. 20 sec., and is distant about 20 miles from the capital, with which it is connected by several lines of steam and electric railways. A very small fishing village when it was opened to foreign trade in 1859, its proximity to the capital quickly led to its development and it was for many years the leading port of Japan. The surrounding scenery is hilly and pleasing, and on clear days the snow-crowned summit and graceful outlines of Fuji-san, a volcanic mountain 12,370 feet high—celebrated in Japanese literature and depicted on innumerable native works of art—is most distinctly visible, though some 50 miles distant. Adjoining the harbour is the site of what was known before the abolition of extra-territoriality, as the foreign settlement. Beyond the plain on which the town is built rises a sort of semi-circle of low hills called "The Bluff," on which are situated the residences of many members of the foreign community. Along the waterfront runs a good road called the Bund, on which stand a number of imposing buildings, of which the principal ones are the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, the American Consulate, the Standard-Vacuum Oil Co.'s offices, the United Club and the New Grand Hotel. The reconstructed city includes many fine examples of modern architecture, notably the Prefectural offices, rebuilt at a cost of 3 million yen, the Silk Conditioning House, the Customs House, General Post Office, the British and American Consulates, Japanese and Foreign Banks and office buildings. A fine cricket and recreation club and a racecourse are situated about two miles from the Settlement. Three excellent golf links are within a short distance of the city. A good boating and yachting club also exist, providing facilities for deep-sea bathing. The railway station is well-designed and commodious. The town is in the enjoyment of an excellent water supply, large waterworks having been completed in 1887. The municipal electric tramways traversing important sections of the city now extend for 31 miles (approximately 29 miles in actual use). There are 33 miles of bus route within the city. The harbour work started in 1900 and practically finished in 1917, sustained great damage in the earthquake of 1932. Reconstruction was, however, complete in March 1931. The outer breakwater, now completed, is more than double the present harbour area. The gas works were started as a private enterprise but taken over by the municipality in 1892, the pipes laid measure now about 200 miles. There are 4 berths at the pier accommodating the largest steamers, and 12 mooring wharves for large ocean-going vessels, most of these wharves accommodating vessels of any size. The Yokohama Dock Company has three dry docks of 628 ft., 489 ft., and 380 ft., docking length, 98 ft., 77 ft., and 76 ft. width of entrance, and 33 ft., 26 ft. and 21 ft. of water on the blocks respectively, and a mooring basin of 600 ft. by 100 ft. by 25 ft.

In the very severe earthquake, which was followed by a huge conflagration, on September 1st, 1923, close on 30,000 people are known to have perished. Another 3,559 were missing and believed to be dead, and 66,371 were officially reported as injured, the total casualties representating nearly one-quarter of the population. The number of buildings destroyed was 70,000 out of a total of 93,000. The shipping in harbour was placed in serious jeopardy by the blazing oil from the oil-tanks on shore running into and spreading over the water.

The population of Yokohama was about 750,000 in 1938 thus being the sixth largest city in the Empire.

Yokohama chiefly subsists on its foreign trade, especially the valuable silk trade, which from the time of the opening of the country has always been handled at the port. The earthquake of 1923 for a time disabled the port, and the silk trade was temperorarily transferred to Kobe, but with the rehabilitation of the northern port the trade has been in part recaptured.

The present depression in the silk trade, however, due partly to the economic situation in the U.S.A. and partly to the competition of rayon, has had some effect upon the port; fortunately it was offset to a great extent by the increase in other exports since the abandonment of the Gold Standard by Japan, and the growth of industrial areas in the neighbourhood.

Yokohama is administered by the Municipality, which owns the electric lighting and power plants, the electric tramways and the gas and water supplies.

SHIDZUOKA

Shidzuoka, known in feudal times as Fuchu, is the centre of the Japan tea (green and black) trade, and is situated on Suruga Bay. There is also a large trade in fruit, and lacquer and bamboo ware, fish and fruit (canned), orange, wooden furniture and toy are also exported in considerable quantities. Shidzuka's foreign trade is conducted through the port of Shimizu, Yokohama and Kobe.

Shidzuoka has a population of 191,005 according to the 1935 Census.

NAGOYA

Nagoya is the third largest city in Japan, coming after Tokyo and Osaka. It has an area of 149 sq. kilometres and a population, of 1,082,816 according to the 1935 census. To the north extends the fertile plain of Nobi watered by the Kiso, Nagara and Ibi Rivers, and to the south stretch the calm waters of Ise Bay. The climate is temperate. Thus this district developed steadily from early times, becoming one of the centres of communication between Eastern and Western ports of Japan. After the construction of Nagoya Castle, famous for its golden dolphins, Nagoya grew into a large and prosperous city. After the Restoration of Meiji, with the opening of railways and the construction of harbour works, the city developed rapidly, and now, together with Tokyo and Osaka, divides the country practically into three parts, and has become the actual, as well as the nominal, centre of mid-Japan. The city by no means boasts of its famous sights or historic remains, but is proud of the fact that it is still in its youth and showing remarkable progress, particularly in its commerce and industry

Nagoya is called "Chukyo," or Central Capital, and now includes Atsuta which was, in former times, an important stage known as "Miya" on the Tokaido (Highway), where the traffic was very heavy. But since the introduction of modern methods of travel, and especially since the construction of railways, the City of Nagoya, being in close proximity to Atsuta, has grown rapidly in importance.

Not only is Nagoya Station an important intermediate station on the Tokaido Main Line, but it is also a terminus of the Kansai Line which goes to Osaka, passing through Mie and Nara Prefectures, and of the Chuo Line which running through Gifu, Nagano and Yamanashi Prefectures finally reaches Tokyo. It is thus one of the most important railway centres in all Japan. Besides these lines there is direct connection between the station and the harbour, in order to link up the transportation by land and water. Within the city limits, besides Nagoya Station, there are Atsuta, Chikusa, Ozone, Biwajima, Hatta, Shiratori, Horilkawaguchi, and Nagoya Harbour Stations, making nine in all. The number of passengers using these stations in the course of one year is approximately fifteen millions, while nearly three million tons of goods are handled.

In addition to these Imperial Government Railways, there are a number of private electric railways operating radial lines from the city, putting it into close connection with a large number of cities and towns in the neighbourhood. Turning to transportation within the city, there are 2,420 kilometres of streets covering about one eighteenth of the total area of the city. The width and arrangement of these streets, however, are not satisfactory, so that great efforts are being made in connection with the work of city planning to broaden and systematize them.

The street railway system, is owned and operated by the municipality: it has 55.5 kilometres of track on the main streets, and carries a total of 66,761,162 passengers annually. This service is supplemented by the Tsukiji Electric Railway and Shin-Mikawa Electric Railway. These private lines make connections between the centre of the city and the outlying parts. Light motor-buses are operated on all the principal streets at a uniform fare of six sen.

There are 66 post and telegraph offices throughout the city and for wireless messages, a despatching station at Yosami, and a receiving station at Yokkaichi, both towns near Nagoya, have recently been opened. These stations are supervised and operated by the Nagoya Central Wireless Telegram Office, and at these stations communication is maintained with Germany, Poland, France, and Great Britain. Telephones are a Government Monopoly in Japan, and are extensively used.

With the remarkable progress made in industry and communications during the Meiji Era, the commerce of the city has extended throughout the Empire. As a distributing and collecting point Nagoya has become known both at home and abroad, being placed just after Osaka and Tokyo. In reviewing the movement of goods a number of years ago, it is noticeable that most of the transportation was by land, and very little by water. But since the opening of Nagoya Harbour to foreign commerce in 1907, the volume of goods shipped by water has greatly increased.

In 1935 the total tonnage passing through the harbour was 2,050,627 tons, while that handled by land amounted to about 3,713,399 tons.

Commodities that are brought into the city are chiefly raw materials such as wheat, bean cakes, ginned cotton, rice, iron, etc., while those shipped out are mainly cotton fabrics, potteries, vehicles, toys, spinning machinery, woolen tissues, clocks and other manufactured goods.

From early times Nagoya has made remarkable progress, especially in industrial arts, on account of low wages, and the diligence and special skill in handicraft of the workers. Following the spirit of the times machinery has been introduced and factories have largely taken the place of household industries. The city is fortunate in having at its disposal an abundant supply of electric power which is indispensable in modern industries. This fact, together with the facilities for transportion on land and sea, has made Nagoya the largest industrial centre in Japan next to Osaka.

Textile head the list of industries, including piece-goods, cotton yarns, knitted goods, silk yarns floss-silk, etc. The chemical industry comes second, including porcelain and pottery, glassware, cement, chemicals, medical supplies, lacquer-ware and lacquered papier-maché ware, and artificial manures. The food and drink industries are third, including alcoholic drinks, cakes and confectionery, flour etc. Miscellaneous industries include wooden articles, paper goods, stationery,toys, leather goods, Buddhist family shrines, etc. The fifth industry is machinery, including weaving machines, pumps, vehicles, clocks etc. Special industries include steel, castings, bronze, coal-gas, etc.

In this part of Japan are a number of rivers which are capable of producing an abundant supply of hydro-electric power. Thus, power can be had in sufficient quantity for all needs, a fact which has contributed greatly to the development of industries in Nagoya. At present the electric power used in the city is being supplied by the Toho Electric Power Company, the Daido Electric Power Company, the Japan Electric Power Company. the Hakusan Waterpower Company, and the Yahagi Waterpower Company. In addition, the Toho Electric Power Company has in the city a steam generating plant with a capacity of 83,000 kilowatts, and is installing water-power plants on the Hida and Tenryu Rivers having a capacity of 420,000 h.p.

The port of Nagoya lies to the south-west within the city limits, and is situated at the northern extremity of Ise Bay, which opens to the south-west and is located between thirty-five degrees and thirty-five degrees five minutes North Latitude, and one hundred and thirty-six degrees forty minutes and one hundred and thirty-six degrees fifty-three minutes East Longitude. As Chita Peninsula stretches to the south-east, it is protected from the dreaded typhoons which come from that direction, and the port receives little damage from wind and wave. The heart of the city is closely connected with the port by the Horikawa, Shinhorikawa, and Nakagawa Canals, and the Rinko Railway Line.

The construction of Nagoya Harbour began in 1896. Years ago the third stage of the work was completed with an aggregate expenditure of 15,490,000 yen. The area of the wharves is 1.52 square kilometres, with an anchoring capacity of 96,000 tons for thirty-eight steamers of ten thousand tons or less. At present the harbour can accommodate 40 vessels with a total tonnage of 206,000 tons. But in order to meet the requirements of Nagoya and of mid-Japan which had been making rapid expansion, the fourth stage of the construction was begun in 1928 at an estimate of 10,120,000 yen. This work will be completed in 1938, when the area of the wharves will be increased to 2.23 square kilometres, and the anchoring capacity to 333,000 tons for 66 steamers including 11 ten thousand tonners

Nagoya Harbour is an important port of call for many lines, trade with America, Europe, China, the South Sea Islands, Australia, and Africa, is carried on directly from this port by thirty-three lines.

The port was opened to foreign trade in 1907, and domestic and foreign trade have developed with remarkable rapidity.

HAKODATE

This, the most northerly of the old treaty ports of Japan, is situated in the south of Hokkaido, in the Straits of Tsugaru, which divide that island from Honshiu. The port lies in latitude 41 deg. 47 min. 8 sec. N., and longitude 140 deg. 45 min. 34 sec. E., and the harbour is nearly land-locked. The town clusters at the foot and on the slope of a bold rock known to foreigners as Hakodate Head, about 1,000 feet in height, which is within a fortified area to which the public are not admitted. The surrounding country is hilly, volcanic, and striking, but the town itself possesses few attractions. There are some Public Gardens at the eastern end of the town which contain a small but interesting Museum. Waterworks for supplying the town with pure water were completed in 1889. The climate of Hakodate is healthy and bracing. The hottest month is August, but the thermometer there rarely rises above 90 degrees Fahr.; in the winter it sometimes sinks to 10 degrees Fahr. or even less, the minimum in an average winter being about 12 degrees Fahr. The mean temperature throughout the year is about 48 degrees. The population of Hakodate according to the last official census in October 1930 was 197,252.

The foreign trade of the port is small, but has been steadily growing during the last few years, mainly owing to the development of the Kamtschatka salmon fisheries, for which Hakodate is the principal entrepôt. In the valuable and extensive fisheries on the coast and in the surrounding seas, however, the chief exports of the future from Hakodate are to be looked for. Increasing quantities of dried fish and seaweed are exported annually, mostly to China. The mineral resources of Hokkaido are large. Washing for gold dust has been carried on in Kitami, and the belief is entertained that with proper machinery the gold mines of Hokkaido may be worked with fair profit. Magnetic iron is also obtained. Oil resource is not considered to be so rich. The kerosene wealth of this district is said to be considerable, but none of the borings has so far given a high yield. At Nukimi-Mura on Soya Strait—in the extreme north—oil wells were discovered long ago, and have been worked by hand for some years. The oil, in fact, overflows into the sea, and in stormy weather boats take refuge at Nukimi-Mura, as the sea is rendered smooth by the oil. Oil also exists at Nigori-Kawa, near Hakodate; at Kayabegori, near Shiribeshi; at Itaibetsu, on a tributary of the Urin River (output 800 gallons per day); at Kotamimura and Tsukisama Mura (Imperial property), near Sapporo; and near Abashiri, where the wells are considered rich.

Hakodate is reached in 17½ hours from Tokyo, via Aomori, between which place and Hakodate there is a very good steamship service, maintained by the Government Railways. From Hakodate all the principal points in Hokkaido can now be reached by rail, and there is also a Government Steamship service to Odomari, in Karafuto (Japanese Saghalien). The Hakodate Harbour Improvement Works were completed in 1900, and a patent slip capable of taking vessels up to 1,500 tons was also finished. There is a dry dock to accommodate ships up to 10,000 tons at ordinary spring tides, and at highest spring tides the dock is capable of receiving the largest battleships in the Japanese Navy.

In August, 1907, half the city of Hakodate was destroyed by a fire. The number of houses destroyed in the conflagration was ascertained to be 8,977, rendering about 60,000 persons homeless. All the foreign residents with the exception of the American Consular Agent were burnt out, saving nothing, and the total loss was estimated at not less than 50,000,000 yen.

Another disastrous fire occurred on the evening of March 21, 1934 in the eastern section of the city during a terrific hurricane. Three-fifths of the city were completely burnt out within a few hours, and only the changed direction of the wind just before midnight saved the city from being entirely wiped out.

The loss of lives and property was estimated at nearly 2,000 deaths, 140,000 persons rendered homeless, 25,000 houses destroyed, and Yen 160,000,000 worth of property.

As a result of these disastrous fires, a scheme is now in force by which a Municipal Subsidy is granted to encourage building with fireproof materials.

OTARU

This pleasantly situated town, 157 miles north of Hakodate, is the principal of the open ports of Hokkaido being of easy access to the rich agricultural lands in the Island, and having convenient railway facilities to all the timber bearing areas. The agricultural resources have been considerably developed, and the rich pasture lands are well adapted for breeding cattle and horses. The exports are timber, mostly hardwood, beans peas, onions, potatoes and general produce. Otaru is a regular port of call of the principal steamship lines trading to the Far East. Extensive harbour improvements are now in course of construction which will give wharfage accommodation for steamers up to 7,000 tons. The population of Otaru, according to the last census in October, 1930, was 144,880. It is the third largest city in the island of Hokkaido. There is a small foreign community engaged in the timber or shipping trade. The climate is healthy and bracing, with heavy snow during the winter which provides ample facilities for skiing and toboganning. The skiing season lasts from December to March. The waterworks, which supply pure water to the town, are situated in the surrounding hills within easy access to the city. The city possesses an efficient fire brigade which keeps in touch with any part of the town by means of automatic fire alarms. There is the largest and most up-to-date can-making factory supplying all the cans to the salmon and crab fishing areas in the northern waters.

OSAKA

Osaka, with a population estimated at 3,321,200 in 1935 is the second largest city in Japan, coming next after Greater Tokyo, but in commercial and industrial importance it ranks first. During recent years the city has been rapidly assuming a modern and Western aspect. Broad well-paved streets intersect it in all directions, large modern buildings are springing up throughout the business centre, and motor traffic is increasing rapidly. The city is situated in the Prefecture of the same name at the mouth of the river Yodogawa. It is intersected by other rivers and canals that make excellent waterways for the transport of merchandise. From the point of view of the foreign tourist, the most interesting and imposing sight is Osaka Castle, erected in 1583 by the famous warrior Toyotomi Hideyoshi. It is now the Headquarters of the Fourth Army Division, the grounds having been converted into a public park. Osaka is the seat of numerous industries, including cotton-spinning mills, shipbuilding yards, iron-works and sugar refineries. Cotton-spinning and weaving are the most important industries and there are a large number of big mills in the city and neighbourhood. Recently there has been a surprising development in the manufacture of all kinds of goods for the export trade in Osaka's well-equipped factories. The Imperial Mint also is established here. From the outset the street Electric Tramway within the city limits was a municipal undertaking and at present 106 kilometres are open to traffic.

The harbour is under the control of the Municipal Harbour Department. Extensive improvements have been in progress for a number of years and still further plans are to be given effect to. Among them, the reconstruction work of the Port Osaka which was commenced in 1934 is designed for completion by 1940, when a huge outer break-water, length 3,995 meters, will be constructed and water-area protected by it will amount to 5,950,000 square meters.

By this year, on the other hand, the North Harbour Company is due to enclose an additional marine area of 2,317,000 square meters between the Shinyodo River and the Azi River.

In the near future, it is expected that the Harbour will have been equipped with the most modern appliances and facilities. The present harbour has berthing accommodation at 37 buoys for ships of 5,000 to 20,000 gross tons. Four landing piers and eight quays, all with sheds and railway facilities, have water depth of 30 feet or over. Floating and fixed wharf cranes and dry docks are available.

The trade statistics of Osaka since the War have shown great growth. The total foreign trade in 1937 consisted of 1,994,739 tons of merchandise valued at Y853,104,864 in exports and 5,508,515 tons at Y835,182,960 in imports

KYOTO

Kyoto from A.D. 794 to 1868 was the capital of Japan. Its sacred and classic associations as well as the picturesque character of the surrounding country combine to invest the city with an interest attaching to no other place in Japan. Kyoto has excellent hotel accommodation for foreign tourists. The city lies practically in the centre of Japan in the main line of railway, and is reached from Kobe in less than an hour and a quarter by express train. The population, according to the census of 1936 is 1,100,000.

The first Biwa Canal completed in 1895 was designed for the passage of goods and passengers and to supply water power, the second canal constructed at a cost of Y.4,477,805, supplies water for drinking, for the fire brigade, and for purposes of hydro-electricity, etc.

Businessmen and visitors to Kyoto will find the officials of the Kyoto Chamber of Commerce ready with helpful suggestions both for making commercia connections and also for arranging sightseeing plans. Two fast electric lines connect Kyoto and Osaka. The Government has electrified its line, the express train making the run (28 miles) in 40 minutes. Excellent motor highways also leave Kyoto for several nearby places of commerical and scenic importance.

Besides its importance as a sightseeing centre and as the distributing centre for a large variety of artistic Japanese products, it is also important as an educational centre, having four universities as well as many other schools. Kyoto Imperial University has about 7,000 students.

KOBE

Kobe, finely situated on Osaka Bay and now the fifth largest city in Japan, was originally, until its opening to foreign trade in the year 1868, a small fishing village near the once important town of Hyogo. The new port was known at first under the latter name, but in 1892 the two towns were united under the name of Kobe City and are now indistinguishable, while subsequent additions have considerably extended the municipal boundaries. Water supply, electric lighting and tramways are municipal services, and there are numerous lines of motor buses run by the city and by private companies. Taxis are plentiful and cheap Extensive harbour works have been carried out, and there are now available for foreign-going steamers five large concrete piers, with quays on either side, owned by the government, together with a number of smaller piers, some by private concerns, all of these being connected with the main Tokyo-Shimonoseki line of railway. Two more large piers, one with a slip in the centre, are now nearing completion, while large new piers have been built for the domestic trade in Hyogo Bay. There is also an extensive anchorage, protected by breakwaters. In Kobe are the Kawasaki and Mitsubishi shipyards, both equipped with all modern facilities. In addition to the above, Kobe possesses steelworks, locomotive and carriage works, the Dunlop Rubber Company's works, a plate and sheet mill, the Nippon Keori Company's Head Offices, four mills of the Kanegafuchi cotton spinning company, sugar and flour mills and also match, chemical and other factories. The city faces the landlocked bay, and at a distance of a mile and upwards from the sea front there rises a chain of steep and picturesque hills, at the foot of which are the residential districts. To the north-east, on a range, of hills known as Rokko-zan, 2,500 to 3,000 ft. above sea-level, is a summer resort, popular among Japanese and Europeans. The links of the Kobe Golf Club, which owe their inception to the enterprise of a small number of former British residents, are a great attraction to the resort. Rokkozan is reached by a cable-car, a ropeway and three motor roads and possesses numerous paths which afford good walks Two modern hotels offer good accommodation. Kobe stretches for some ten miles along the strip of land between the hills and the water and is rapidly extending on both sides, particularly in the direction of Osaka, with which it is connected by rail and by three electric tramways, as well as by a broad, well-constructed motor-road. A number of large modern buildings have added much to the appearance of the city during recent years. Kobe has three main railway stations—Sannomiya, Kobe and Hyogo, of which the first-named is the most important for foreign residents—all three being on the main Tokyo-Shimonoseki through line. There are several clubs—the Kobe Club (including members of all nationalities), the Masonic Club, the India Club, the Club Concordia (German), and the Kobe Regatta and Athletic Club (international), The Shioya Country Club (international) is the community centre of the recently developed foreigners' suburb of Shioya, twenty minutes by train westward along the coast from Kobe, it is well equipped for all games. At Mirume the K.R.A.C. have tennis courts and a large swimming-pool. There is an English Church (All Saints), a Union Church (Protestant), a French Roman Catholic Church, a Mosque and also a number of Japanese Churches of various denominations. Kobe possesses two good foreign style hotels, the Tor, on the hill, and the Oriental, on the Bund, and an up-to-date International Hospital run by the foreign community.

The population of the city of Kobe is given as 989,100 (October, 1938) Kobe possesses the largest number of foreign residents of any city in Japan.

The Temple of Nofukuji, which possesses a large Bronze Buddha in the old town of Hyogo, and is worth a visit; and there is a monument to the Japanese hero Kiyomori, erected in 1286, in a grove of trees in the vicinity of the temple, which claims some attention from its historic associations. The bed of the old river Minatogawa was reclaimed in 1910. The upper part of the reclaimed area is now known as Minatogawa Park, where there is a large market. The lower part of the river-bed is a centre for public entertainments, such as cinematographs, etc. The shrine dedicated to Kusunoki Masashige, the Imperialists, who fell on this spot in 1336 during the unsuccessful wars for the restoration of the Imperial power, stands between Kobe Station and Okurayama Park, where there is also a large City Library. This shrine has recently acquired national prominence as a leading shrine among those of the state religion. In the park stands a bronze statute of the late Prince Ito, who was one of the most influential and powerful statesmen of Japan in the Meiji period.

MOJI AND SHIMONOSEKI

These two towns are situated on either side of Shimonoseki Straits, the western entrance of the Inland Sea—Moji with a population of 122,798 one the south and Shimonoseki with a population of 147,018 on the north. Shimonoseki (recently amalgamated with Hikoshima Island—population 126,385), is under the jurisdiction of Yamaguchi (population 130,000), 51 miles away, and Moji under that of Fukuoka (population 302,068) 47 miles away. The foreign merchants formerly all had their offices in Shimonoseki, but owing to the very rapid growth of Moji during the last 30 years, due mainly to its becoming an important coal and industrial centre, most of the foreign and Japanese main and local branch offices have removed to Moji. The city has now fine roads, and commercial buildings with most up-to-date tram, bus and motor car services. The head office of the Kyushu section of the Railway Bureau at Moji controls also part of the mainland and the eight hour Fusan ferry service. An imposing Government building houses the Customs Harbour, Marine Bureaux etc., at Moji, and now wharves, capable of mooring steamers drawing 30 feet, are made nearby. Moji has important trade with the following neighbouring cities:—Kokura, population 135,000; Yawata (Government Steel Works) 250,000; Tobata 77,556; Wakamatsu, 77,307 and Moji has absorbed the adjacent town of Dairi (on the west side), where there are now many factories and some foreigners' offices. There is a fairly strong tidal current through the Straits, but the anchorage, which is at Moji, is only affected by an eddy, and good holding ground is general. However, most of the larger vessels engage one of the numerous Buoys controlled by the Harbour Master. Steamers entering from the West can get pilots at Rokuren Light, where boats have to stop in any case for medical inspection and harbour-master's instructions. From the eastward this inspection takes place at Hesaki Light. Means of transport are good. Liners run regularly to all foreign ordinary ports of call; and, while from Shimonoseki the Sanyo Railway taps the north, from Moji the Kiushiu Railway taps the south of Japan The Shimonoseki Station Hotel provides good accommodation for foreigners. The Imperial Railway Department has also four large ferry boats plying between Moji and the Shimonoseki Station, while a ten-minute ferry plies between the usual landing places at Moji and Shimonoseki. A tunnel is now being made under the straits and will take at least 4 years to complete. Both towns have municipal waterworks, are lit by electricity, and are connected by telephone with the principal towns, from Kagoshima and Nagasaki, in the south, to Tokyo in the north-east. It should be specially noted that photographing and sketching are forbidden within a radius of ten miles round Shimonoseki and Moji on land and sea. The law in this respect is strictly enforced and ignorance is not accepted as an excuse.

KYUSHU

Kyushu is the southernmost of the larger islands forming the Japanese archipelago and occupies an area of some 15,000 square miles. It is the centre of the coal mining industry. The principal cities are Moji (pop. 123,000), Kokura (pop. 113,000) and Wakamatsu (pop. 57,326) on the north; Fukuoka (pop. 250,000) with which is included the port of Hakata, Yawata, Tobata (pop. 25,000), and Nagasaki on the west, and Kagoshima (pop. 185,000) on the south. On the east coast lies the favourite watering place of Beppu (pop. 65,000). The island is encircled with railways, with some breaks, and the centre is still only partly unopened to railway traffic.

NAGASAKI

At the end of the sixteenth century, when the nations of Western Europe were vigorously competing for the trade of the Far East, Nagasaki—then a fishing village—was set aside by the Japanese authorities as a place of foreign residence. It speedily became the chief trading port of the country. When the Christian religion was banned in 1637 and only the Dutch were allowed trade privileges, a small island in Nagasaki harbour called Deshima was allotted to the Dutch merchants as a trading station and place of residence. During the persecution which culminated in the expulsion from Japan of foreign Christian priests, the city was the centre of the anti-Christian operations conducted by the Japanese government. By the treaty of 1858 Nagasaki was one of the ports opened to British trade on the 1st of July in the following year.

On entering the harbour of Nagasaki no stranger can fail to be struck with the admirable situation of the town and the beautiful panorama of hilly scenery opened to his view. The harbour is a land-locked inlet deeply indented with small bays, about three miles long with a width varying from half-a-mile to a mile. A reclamation scheme was commenced in October, 1897, and completed in January, 1905; 147 acres were reclaimed, and retaining walls measuring nearly five miles in length have been built in front of what were formerly the foreign concessions at Deshima and Umegasaki. Simultaneously, the harbour was deepened. The cost of the work was 4,000,000 yen. A wharf to accommodate two vessels of 8,000 tons has been constructed by the municipality and is used by the vessels engaged in the express service between Shanghai and Kobe. The town is on the eastern side of the harbour and the foreign quarter is on the south-east. The foreign consulatesaresituatedon the bund facing the harbour, behind which are a few streets running parallel with it, and there are a number of private foreign residences on the hill-side. There is a Roman Catholic cathedral and two large parish churches; Anglican and Nonconformist services for foreigners are held on alternate Sundays at the Seamen's Home. There are two clubs (Nagasaki and International) and one foreign hotel, the Hotel du Japon. The Mitsubishi Company own three docks in Nagasaki, the largest of which has a length of 714 feet on the keel blocks and a depth of water at ordinary spring tides of 34 feet 6 inches. As a shipbuilding centre the place has rapidly developed in recent years; in addition to large ocean-going passenger and freight steamers, a battle-cruiser of 27,500 tons displacement and a battleship of over 30,000 tons displacement have been constructed there. Recently the Matsuo Dockyard, closed for several years, has been reopened under different management and is increasing its accommodation. Nagasaki gained considerable importance as a base for steam trawlers, but the vessels were all sold to foreign governments for war service during 1918. The industry has been restarted on a smaller scale but most of the trawlers now use Tobata as a base. Great strides have been made during the past few years in the industry of tinned sardines in tomato juice, the output of Nagasaki being about 60% of that of the whole of Japan. The Municipality has erected a large fish market. Four reservoirs supply the city with water. The railway development of recent years has made it possible, with a brief sea passage of ten minutes between Moji and Shimonoseki, to travel by rail from Nagasaki to Tokyo, via Kobe, in 24 hours. The climate of Nagasaki is mild and salubrious, and there are popular health resorts in the neighbourhood, the most famous being Mount Unzen, on which a nine-hole golf course was laid out in 1911, and which, since 1923, has been gradually improved; another course has been laid out at Isahaya, a small town about one hour by rail or motor-car from Nagasaki.

The population of the port has increased greatly during recent years. In the census taken in 1935 it was returned as 211,060 nearly double of what it was 30 years previously.

FORMOSA

This island, one of the largest in Asia, is situated between latitude 22 and 26 degrees N., and longitude 120 and 122 degrees E., and is separated from the coast of Fukien, China, by a channel about one hundred miles in width. It is a prolongation of the Japanese and Loochoo Archipelagoes, and in 1895 was incorporated in the Japanese Empire. Its name Formosa, signifying "beautiful island," was conferred by the Portuguese, the first Europeans to visit it, but it was called Taiwan (Great Bay) by the Chinese, to whom it belonged from 1661 to 1894. It is said that the Japanese endeavoured to form a colony in the island in 1620, but large numbers of Chinese were settled there prior to that date. The Dutch arrived in 1634, and founded several settlements, and traces of their occupation are still to be found in the island, but they were compelled in 1661 to retire by the Chinese pirate chief Koxinga, who then assumed the sovereignty of western Formosa. His grandson and successor, however, was induced, twenty-two years later, to resign the crown to the Emperor of China. By the Treaty of Shimonoseki, which terminated the war between China and Japan in 1895, the island was ceded to Japan as one of the conditions of peace, and on the 1st June, 1895, the formal surrender was made, the ceremony taking place on board ship outside Keelung. The resident Chinese officials, however, declared a republic, and offered resistance, and it was not until the end of October that the opposing forces were completely overcome, the last stand being made in the south by Liu Yung-fu, the Black Flag General, of Tonkin notoriety. Takow was bombarded and captured on 15th October, and Anping was peacefully occupied on the 21st of the same month, Liu Yung-fu having taken refuge in flight.

Formosa is about 260 miles in length, and from 60 to 70 miles broad in the widest part. It is intersected from north to south by a range of mountains, which forms a kind of backbone to the island, the loftiest peak of which, Mount Morrison (Niitakayama), is 13,880 feet high. On the western side of this range the slope is more gradual than on the eastern side, and broken by fertile valleys which lose themselves in the large undulating plain on which the Chinese are settled. The high land east of the dividing chain is peopled by an aboriginal race who acknowledge no allegiance to the Chinese Government and made frequent raids upon the outlying Chinese settlements, but as the island is being steadily opened up conditions are improving, and doubtless in course of time they will become merged in the general population, although naturally a savage and warlike people, allied to the Malays and Polyneisians, who lived principally by the chase.

The population of Formosa in 1932 was estimated to be 4,932,033, comprised of Natives 4,496,820, Japanese 247,580; Koreans 559; Savages 144,866, Foreign (Chinese) 42,017, and Foreign (others) 191.

The products of Formosa are numerous, vegetation being everywhere most luxuriant, testifying to the richness of the soil. Tea, camphor, rice, sugar and bananas are largely cultivated, the three latter being extensively shipped to Japan. The fauna includes bears, monkeys, deer, wild boar, badgers, martens, the scaly ant-eater and other smaller animals. Birds are not very numerous, and snakes not as common as might be expected where vegetation is so abundant. As regards minerals there are at present only two gold mines running (viz., those at Kinkasaki and Zuiho in the vicinity of Keelung), and the production of both Gold and Silver in Taiwan has decreased, as they are being shipped to Japan in the form of Ores. The island has an area of about 13,883 square miles of which more than half is mountain, but nevertheless 21.5 per cent. is cultivated land and over 58 per cent. of the population are farmers.

Amongst sundry factories and mills at various places in the island are ice-works, a brewery, strawboard and paper factories, two flour-mills, hosiery factories fertiliser factories, ramie and jute mills, cement works, brick-works (many using Manchester kilns), numerous oil-extracting and rice mills, several electric-light plants, and a gas works (in Taipeh).

The trade and industries of the island are steadily developing, and both fish and fruit are now being largely exported to the mother-country and Dairen, whilst recently attention has been directed to the gathering of coral, supplies of which have been found in the waters of the northern vicinity. All the principal towns are now equipped with water-works, electric lighting, and large markets, etc., and connection between them by motor lines of cars is becoming general, replacing the push cars hitherto mainly in use.

One great drawback to the island is its lack of good harbours, which is more especially felt on account of the strength of the monsoons in the Formosa Channel. Those on the eastern side are few and neither commodious nor accessible; whilst on the west coast, with the exception of Keelung in the north and Takow in the south, they are little better than open roadsteads. Harbour improvements have just been completed at Keelung, and are still being carried out at Takow, when completed, they will greatly increase the existing accommodation. The depth at low water at the entrance to the harbours is 30 feet and 23½ feet, respectively.

Taipeh is the capital of Formosa, and Tainan is the chief city in the south of the Island. The open ports are four in number, viz., Takow and Anping in the south, and Tamsui and Keelung in the north. The latter was held for some months in 1884-5 by the French, under Admiral Courbet, but was evacuated on June 21st 1885. The rivers of Formosa are few, shallow, and winding, only navigable to small flat-bottomed boats. The scenery is delightful, and the climate is very pleasant in the winter, but hot in some parts of the island.

A complete system of post and telegraph services is in force while two cables connect the island with Japan proper.

Between Taipeh and Tokyo, daily.
Between Taipeh and Takao, daily.
Between Taipeh and Karenko, daily.

A railway traversing the west side of the island, from Keelung in the north to Keishu in the south was officially opened by H.I.H. Prince Kan-In on October 24th, 1908. A short line also connects Taipeh and Tamsui in the north. On the west coast is a loop line of 56½ miles between Chikunan and Oden (near Shoka) Hugging the coast, as it does, it avoids the steep gradients and numerous tunnels of the main line. On the through-line, sleeping-cars are now run for the accommodation of first and second class passengers. There is also a railway along the East coast, and some other minor lines partially completed. Besides the Government lines there are 1,349 miles of private railways laid by sugar companies.

The figures for Foreign Trade in 1938:

Imports from Japan	Yen 277,894,924
Imports from Foreign	Yen 44,228,818
Exports to Japan	Yen 410,258,886
Exports to Foreign	Yen 29,916,109
Total	Yen 762,298,737

TAMSUI AND KEELUNG

The port of Tamsui lies in lat. 25 deg. 10 min. N., and long. 101 deg. 26 min. E., on the north-western side of the fertile island of Formosa. The harbour has a troublesome bar, which has retarded the growth of the port and has necessitated the transfer to Keelung of the steamship agencies that formerly made it their headquarters. None but vessels of small size trade there. The town formerly known as Hobé, is situated on the north side of the river, about two miles from the bar. In October, 1884, the French ships under Admiral Courbet bombarded Tamsui, but were unable to take the place. The Japanese took possession on the 7th June, 1895.

The port of Keelung lies to the north-east of Tamsui, in latitude 25 deg. 6 min. N. and longitude 121 deg. 47 min. E. It is situated on the shores of a bay between the capes of Foki and Peton, some 20 miles apart, amidst bold and striking scenery, backed by a range of mountains. It was once a Spanish Settlement, but was subsequently captured and held by the Dutch until they in turn gave place to the Chinese under Koxinga, formerly a pirate chief, who caused himself to be proclaimed King of Formosa. Though but a mere village, it had long carried on a considerable native trade with Amoy, Chinchew, and Foochow. Keelung was opened to foreign trade at the same time as the other Formosan ports. The limits of the port are defined to be within a straight line drawn from Image Point to Bush Island. On the 5th August, 1884, the port was bombarded by the French under Admiral Lespes, when the forts above the town were reduced to ruins. and the place captured. It was then garrisoned by the French, who held it until after the Treaty of Peace had been signed at Tientsin in June, 1885. The place was occupied by the Japanese on the 3rd, June, 1895.

At Keelung harbour improvements were completed in 1934 at a cost of over 33 million Yen, and have largely increased the accommodation available The present harbour is however too small for the increased number of vessels which enter and clear, and an extension work, which was started in 1935 under a 9-year programme at a total cost of Y7,795,440, is now in progress. The main work under the new programme is the construction of a breakwater in the outer harbour. At present about 30 vessels of under 20,000 tons and above 3,000 tons can be accommodated in the inner harbour. During 1900 a lighthouse was completed on Pak-sa Point, a low headland on the west coast, some 20 miles south-west of Tamsui, and one has been erected on Agincourt Island. At Keelung there are stone quays in connection with the railway, alongside of which the regular mail steamers of the 10,000 tons class are berthed, the depth of water alongside being 28-30 feet. It is now possible to accommodate at the quays about 10 steamers each of 10,000 tons capacity, and admit ten steamers below this tonnage at the buoys.

The railway line between Tamsui and Taipeh was opened in August, 1901, and has been of great benefit to the people of the district. Keelung is the northern terminus of the trans-Formosan Government Railway. The capital city is known by the Chinese name of Taipeh, and also under the Japanese nomenclature of Taihoku, which is now applicable, also, to the whole province, the former names of Manka, Daitotei, etc., being urban districts and not applicable to the city as a whole.

TAINAN, TAKAO AND ANPING

The city of Tainan (until 1889 known as Taiwanfu or Taiwanfoo i.e. The capital of Taiwan) situated in lat. 23 deg. 6 min. N., and long. 129 deg. 5 min. E., is the oldest city in Formosa. For nearly two centuries it was the capital under the Chinese régime; prior to that it had been held by both the Dutch and Koxinga, and relics of the former's occupation still exist. Next to Taipeh, it is the principal city, and in it the District Garrison Headquarters, Law Courts, Hospital, Higher Schools, etc., are located. Since the Japanese occupation many improvements in the city have been made, and at the present day the main roads are all wide and well constructed. The old Chinese walls, some five miles in circumference, have been demolished to make room for improvements. Waterworks have been constructed in the hills some distance from the city and it is now lighted by electricity, the power being carried by an overhead line from a generating station a few miles south of Takow. Tainan is distant 218 miles from Taipeh by rail.

Anping is the shipping port for Tainan, situated about three miles west of that city on the border of a lagoon. Communication is by a trolley line and a creek navigable for chutehs and small junks. There is also a road on which is a regular service of motor buses. The port itself is an open roadstead, vessels anchoring outside the bar and a mile or so from the beach. From November to the end of May the anchorage is a good one, but during the S. W. moonsoon a heavy swell sets in, rendering it difficult and sometimes impossible for vessels to load or discharge. Formerly Anping was a small but thriving port, but since the improvements to Takao harbour were effected, its importance has materially declined, and it is now almost deserted, though its proximity to Tainan still necessitates a certain amount of shipping calling. As regards climate, Anping, during the summer months, can boast of a comparatively cool temperature owing to sea breezes; Tainan is usually two or three degrees warmer. From October to the end of April there is little or no rain, and the cool weather then leaves nothing to be desired.

Takao is a port twenty-nine miles to the southward of Tainan. Located on the edge of what, less than 20 years ago, was a large, shallow lagoon with an extremely narrow and dangerous entrance, Takao has since been converted into a fine harbour with fourteen buoys and a quay frontage capable of accommodating six large vessels (up to 23 feet draught) at one time alongside. At low-water the depth is 24 feet, with 30 feet at the harbour entrance, which is 350 feet wide. The harbour improvements under the first period of construction work are now completed, and vessels drawing less than 23½ feet can readily enter the harbour. The second period of construction is now in progress. It includes the provision of a second pier, dredging, widening of the harbour entrance, construction of a breakwater in Seishiwan, and the dredging of the harbour to an average depth of 30 feet. Under existing conditions, steamers up to about 5,000 tons can be accommodated alongside the quay, vessels of 7-10,000 tons capacity find it difficult to enter the port if heavily laden, and have to discharge some of their cargo in the outer harbour to enable them to come inside; if the harbour were dredged to a depth of 28 feet this would be unnecessary. As Takao is the only harbour in the south catering for the bulk of the sugar trade and other industries, its future is assured. Large reclamations have been made along the shore of the lagoon, transforming marsh-land into a well laid-out, fair-sized town, with room for expansion.

Foreign shipping is largely increasing in volume, sulphate of ammonia and other fertilisers now being imported in considerable quantities. The Japanese Government grants subsidies to the Osaka Shosen Kaisha for a fortnightly service with Canton, viâ, Amoy, Swatow and Hongkong, as well as for a service of steamers round the coast of Formosa throughout the year. As regards the fruit trade, which is mainly a southern industry, an arrangement has recently been arrived at between shippers and the principal lines running from Takao, that shipments will in future be made by steamer direct from that port, instead of from Keelung, as hitherto. Another development of southern trade that is being fostered is the fishing industry, in connection with which direct boats to Japan are now being run.

The Government Railway now runs day and night trains between Keelung and Takao, the length of which line is approximately 246 miles. There are many private light railways running inland from the main line, tapping the country districts. The chief of these was the Arisan Railway, which has now been acquired by the Government. This line taps the valuable timber forests on Mount Arisan, and is notable for its gradients and the number of tunnels along the route. Many of the private lines are owned by sugar companies who, in addition to transporting their materials, also carry passengers and goods. The Government Railway Department are gradually buying up private services, throughout the Island and at present are running buses between Taipeh and Keelung, Taipeh and Tamsui, Taipeh and Shinchiku in the Northand between Kagi and Takao in the South.

The import trade is mainly in the hands of Japanese firms, the only item still in the hands of foreigners being kerosene and its allied products. The Government has given every encouragement to the sugar industry, and many large modern mills have been erected during the past few years. Of the six staple industries of Formosa, opium, camphor and salt, tobacco and wines have been monopolised by the Formosan Government.

CHOSEN (KOREA)

Chosen ("Morning Calm"), by peaceful annexation in August 1910 became an integral part of the Japanese Empire. It is a peninsula extending southward from the north-east of Asia, washed on the east by the Sea of Japan, on the west by the Yellow Sea. To the north lie Manchuria and the Russian Maritime Province, the boundary being marked by the rivers Yalu and Tumen and the Ever-White Mountains; while on the south it faces the west of Japan across the Korea Strait, with the island of Tsushima about midway. It has a coast-line of some 5,400 miles, including its innumerable islands, of which Quelpart is the largest. It is situated between 124° 11′ and 130° 56′ E long. and between 33° 06′ and 43° N lat., its total length being 600 miles from north to south, and greatest breadth 135 miles from east to west, with an area of about 85,156 square miles. The eastern half of the peninsula is a sinuous range of mountains of which western Korea is the slope, and the chief rivers are therefore on the western side, most of the important harbours being situated on that coast. Chosen is divided into thirteen provinces (do):—North and South Kankyo, North and South Heian, Kokai, Kogen, Keiki, North and South Chusei, North and South Keisho and North and South Zenra. The climate is continental, but healthy. Cold and heat waves run to the extreme, and especially is the cold severe in the North. Spring and Autumn are short, and the variation in temperature between day and night is very sharp, reaching 25 degrees in some places in the north. The fauna includes tigers, leopards, wild deer, wild hogs and monkeys in the south, and the pheasant, eagle, falcon, crane and stork are common. A stunted breed of native horses exists and immense numbers of oxen are raised both as draught animals and for food. Goats are few, and sheep-breeding was started in 1914 by the introduction of sheep from Mongolia. It is now being greatly encouraged by the authorities, with the idea of making the Japanese Empire as far as possible, self-supporting as to raw wool. A great deal of attention is now being paid by the Government to the encouragement of breeding horses as well as other livestock, and to the raising of swine and poultry. Much of the soil is fertile, and agriculture has considerably advanced under the Japanese regime, with improved methods of cultivation, in the selection of seeds and manure, in irrigation and in reclamation. Sericulture, cotton and fruit-growing are also being given great encouragement by the authorities, and cotton growing in the South and wool in the North are looked upon as industries with a great future both for Korea and Japan. There are extensive forests in the north, and gold, copper, iron, coal and other minerals are distributed throughout the country. The principal exports are rice, fertilizers, cotton, beans, raw silk, textiles, raw copper (re-export) coal and pulp. Manufacture grows yearly, and includes cotton yarn, silk-reeling, sugar, paper, artificial fertilizers, cement and flour. The greater part of the sea-borne trade is carried by Japanese bottoms. Great development has taken place along the North East Coast, where new harbours have been constructed at Seishin, Rashin and Yuki. The railways in this district are under the control of the South Manchuria Railway Co., and a large trade between Japan and Manchuria is expected through these ports in the future. Rashin is a growing port for Korean and Manchurian exports to foreign countries.

Opinions differ as to the exact origin of the Koreans. Their language belongs to the "Turanian" group, and is more akin to Japanese than to any other tongue, especially in grammatical construction, though in pronunciation and vocabulary there are great differences. Chosen was once a greatly advanced nation, from which the Japanese learned many arts and crafts, and indeed the rudiments of the ancient Chinese civilisation, but she seems never to have enjoyed any political importance. Situated between China in the west and Japan in the east, her rulers seem ever to have been involved in intrigue and scheming to keep in with the stronger party. For centuries she paid tribute to Peking, while preserving a nominal independence and pursuing a policy of exclusion to all foreigners other than Chinese. After the Meiji Restoration in Japan, the Japanese were anxious to break down this exclusive barrier, and in 1876 succeeded in entering into a treaty of amity and commerce. Although China assented to this and to subsequent treaties with other foreign powers (with America, 1882; with Britain, 1883; with Germany and Russia, 1884, etc.), thus acknowledging Chosen's complete independence, she nevertheless continued inconsistently to claim suzerainty. Considerable intrigues were centred round the Korean throne, and there were frequent clashes between Chinese soldiery and Japanese residents. The Tientsin Treaty of 1885 provided that both Japanese and Chinese should withdraw their troops from Korean soil, nor should enter either party in future despatch troops there without notifying the other. It was China's ignoring the terms of this treaty in 1894 when appealed to by the Korean Governmet for help against the Tonghak rebellion, and the subsequent counterface of Korea towards Japan asking for help to expel the Chinese, that was the immediate cause of the Sino-Japanese War. The next phase saw Russian influence to the force and in 1904 came the Russo-Japanese War, as a result of which Russia was forced to acknowledge Japan's paramount interest in Korea. The internal administration of Korea being notoriously corrupt, Japan established a protectorate over Korea by a treaty (Nov. 1905), when the great statesman Prince Ito was appointed Resident-General. More and more power passed into Japanese hands, and after the successive assassinations of Mr. Stevens, the American diplomatic adviser appointed by Japanese nomination, at San Francisco, of Prince Ito himself at Harbin in October, 1909, and of Mr. Yi, the Korean premier, the Japanese decided that the protectorate plan would not work, and on August 22nd, 1910, was signed the treaty by which Korea was annexed to Japan. The Korean Imperial family were given Japanese titles of Royalty and suitable allowances, and the Government General was set up in Seoul. During 1918-19 there was a widespread movement amongst the Koreans to recover their independence, and a deputation proceeded to Paris to place their claim before the Peace Conference, but arrived too late. The methods adopted by the Japanese to suppress the insurrections that broke out were subjected to grave criticism for their alleged brutality and severity, though the authorities did their best to suppress all information of a damaging nature: but since then the former militaristic policy has been largely abandoned, and the system of gendarmes for the most place replaced by a civilian police force.

The task before Japan when she took over the reins of government was no mean one, but she tackled it with characteristic energy, and much has been achieved. She has established a well-organised judicial system, with trained judges, and has introduced a form of local self-government. In 1920 advisory bodies, in the form of Provincial, Municipal and Urban and Rural District Councils, were created, and in 1930 an Ordinance was published transforming, within well-defined limits, these Councils into self-governing bodies. The first elections under the new system for the Municipal and Urban district Councils were held in May, 1931. Reform of the financial administration has received a great deal of attention. In 1919 for the first time no subsidy was needed from the Imperial Government, but in subsequent years owing to various administrative reforms it has been necessary for grants to be made from the National Treasury. In 1937 the grant amounted to Y12,913,966. In the sphere of education, following on the establishment of elementary schools of Japanese lines throughout the country, considerable advance had been made in the development of higher education, culminating in the opening of the Imperial University in Keijo (Seoul) in 19 8. A great debt is however due to foreign missionaries, who were the pioneers of education in Korea. In the way of communications, much has been done in providing telegraghic and telephonic communication on modern lines, and highways now connect village with village and town with town, the best roads being in the South. A network of railways around the country is steadily moving towards completion. First class roads are 24 feet wide, connecting the capital with the provincial governments, second class roads are 18 feet wide, and run between the provincial governments and the ports and prefectural magistracies. The total length of roads on March 31, 1938 was 27,731 kilometres. The total length of railways at the end of March, 1938 was 4,066 kilometres of Government Railway and 1,212 kilometres of private. (Fusan-Antung, 950 kilometres; Keijo-Kainei, 862 kilometres; Taiden-Mokpo, 260 kilometres, etc). Waterworks exist at Keijo and other places. The total population of Korea at the end of March, 1938 was 22,355,485 of whom 21,682,855 were Korean, 629507 were Japanese and 43,123 were foreigners (including Chinese).

KEIJO (SEOUL)

The old city of Keijo (formerly known as Hanyang or Seoul) (the native term for capital), lies in 37 deg. 30 min. N. 1st., and 127 deg. 4 min. E. long. and is situated almost in the centre of the province of Keiki about thirty-five miles from the mouth of the River Han. Formerly the city was surrounded by crenelated walls of varying height, averaging about twenty feet, with arched stone bridges spanning the water-course. The crumbling remains of these walls still cling picturesquely to the hills at various points outside the city, and two of the largest gates, tne South Big Gate (Nadaimon) and the East Big Gate (Todaimon) have been preserved as monuments in situ. The boundaries of the urban prefecture of Keijo were widely extended in 1936 and now included of Eitoho, south of the Han river. The old city was divided into two nearly equal portions by a long main Street (the modern Shoro), running east and west, the King's Palace and more important public buildings being situated in the northern half, which was divided into east and west quarters by a road intersecting the main street at right-angles, the point of intersection being marked by a pavilion, the Chong Kak ("Bell Kiosk"), containing a large bell, about seven feet high. This spot was regarded as the centre of the city, and from it a further road bore off to the south and south-west, leading to the Nandaimon. All these roads have been widened and improved, the present Nandaimon-dori being a fine highway nearly 120 feet wide. The principal thoroughfare of the city now is the great Taihei-dori. running from the Nandaimon northward to the palatial buildings of the Government-General, situated in front of the old Imperial Palace. This thoroughfare intersects Shoro somewhat to the west of the old centre, and to the south of and parallel to Shoro another wide thoroughfare has been driven from in front of the City Office on the Taihei-dori eastwards (Kogane-machi). About midway between this Kogane-machi and the South Gate along the Nandaimon-dori there is a fine square, where stand the Central Post Office, the Dai Ichi Ginko, the great Mitsukoshi Department Store and other important buildings. This is the Japanese shopping centre, many of the important Japanese retail firms having branches in and around Honmachi, the very typically Japanese shopping street that branches off from this square. On the opposite side, running back to the Northwest past the Chosen Hotel into Taihei-dori in front of the city Office, is another broad thoroughfare, called Hasegawa-cho. In this central part of the city the roads, public buildings and shops can bear favourable comparison with the great towns of Japan proper. Many other roads have been made and widened in different parts of the city, particularly in the vicinity of the new Imperial University, which lies in the north-east and was opened in May, 1926. The work of town-planning, the making of parks and so forth, is pursued regularly each year, though somewhat hampered at present by lack of funds. Lastly, mention must be made of the steep hill of Nansan, which dominates the city to the south, half-way up the slope of which the Japanese have set the great Chosen Shrine, at which Ama-terasu O-mikami, the divine ancestress of the Japanese Imperial family, and the Emperor Meiji, founder of modern Japan, are venerated as national guardian deities. This shrine is approached by a magnificant flight of stone steps, and from the terrace in front of it a splendid panorama of the city outspread below is obtained.

The population of the city was 677,241 at the end of 1936. The number of Europeans and Americans is under 400.

CHEMULPO (JINSEN)

川仁 Jin-sen

This port is situated 24 miles west of Seoul and is reached by train in 50 minutes, the two cities being also connected by a good motor road. Among Korean ports, Chemulpo is surpassed by Fusan alone in the volume of its trade. The harbour is protected by two islands lying across the entrance, but suffers the extreme inconvenience of a rise and fall of tide reaching 30 feet. A dock was constructed in 1918 large enough to accommodate three steamers of 4,600 tons each, and the construction has now been begun of another dock on a much larger scale. There is no dry dock at Jinsen, only a small slip for small craft repairs. Near the harbour a large area has been reclaimed and is now covered with streets and buildings, including the custom-house, offices and godowns. Chemulpo is growing industrially and possesses flour mills and a cotton spinning and weaving mill. The population in 1935 was 82,992.

The annual trade of Jinsen in 1938 was valued at Yen 344,600,139.00 (Export: Yen 129, 859, 598.00; Import: Yen 214, 740, 541.00).

There is a wet basin, with two lock gates at Entrance, which can accommodate 8 vessels of 4,600 tons, and vessels can enter at all states of the tide. All ocean going vessels lie outside Sho-Getsubito Island in the outer anchorage about three miles from the port.

It has been decided to construct a new basin a little to the south of and running parallel with the present basin at a cost of Yen 10,000,000 which will accommodate vessels up to 0,000 tons. Surrounding the present basin are large warehouses sufficient to handle the trade.

The inner harbour is gradually being dredged to a depth of 26 feet 1. w.s. 1936 marks the fiftieth anniversary of opening of the Jinsen harbour. In this connection the plan for expanding wards of Jinsen municipal administration was put into force on October I. As result seven villages adjoining Jinsen municipality has been incorporated into the municipality. This means Jinsen municipality now covers 1,760 square ri in area or four times the area before enforcement of the plan with a population of 19,000 households with 93,000 members showing an increase by 2,000 in the former and 2,300 in latter. Jinsen has become the fifth biggest city and the second biggest trade harbour in Chosen, being one of the twenty big cities throughout the Empire.

Steamers of the Osaka Shosen Kaisha, Chosen Yusen Kaisha, Kawasaki Kisen Kaisha, Amagasaki Kisen Kaisha, and Shimatani Kisen Kaisha, and some outside steamers ply regularly between Japan and Korean ports on the East and West coasts, and there are good services between Jinsen and Tsingtao, Weihaiwei, Chefoo, Chinnampo, Antung, and Dairen with an occasional vessel to Shanghai via Fusan

Every effort is being made by the Government-General of Chosen to make Jinsen the principal port in Chosen for the distribution of through freight and passengers to all parts of the country. A network of railways have been and are being extended to the N.W. and N.E. borders, with Seoul as the centre, and all the ports around the coast are being rapidly connected up with the trunk lines.

GENSAN (WONSAN)

山元 Gen-san

This port, situated on the north-eastern coast of Chosen, is in the southern corner of the province of South Kankyo, about halfway between Fusan and Vladivostock. The native town has grown considerably since the port was opened to trade, and contained a population of 61,772 at the end of 1936. The town is built along the southern shore of the bay, and through it runs the main road which leads from Keijo to the Tumen river. The harbour is a good one, being spacious, easy of access, and well sheltered with excellent holding ground and convenient depth of water.

Trade is carried on by regular lines of steamers running to Japan and coastwise. The exports consist chiefly of gold, cement, beans and rice. Imports consist chiefly of iron and steel, cotton and silk manufactured goods, kerosene oil, machinery and foodstuffs.

山釜 Fu-san

Fusan, 280 miles from Seoul, is the main gateway for Korea and is the southern terminus of its trunk railway line. It was once the sole channel of traffic between Korea and Japan, there having been a settlement of Japanese here for many years. The port is well protected with a range of hills to the nor th-west and islands to the south and possesses up-to-date harbour facilities. Ferry services are maintained twice daily with Shimonoseki (about 8 hours), and through express trains run in connection therewith from Fusan through Seoul to Mukden and Hsinking. Fusan has lately become the centre of two growing industries new to Korea, the manufacture of enamelled ironware and of electric bulbs, the products of both of which are finding foreign markets. There are also rayon weaving mills and a cotton spinning and weaving mill. Fusan has the largest proportion of Japanese residents of any city in Korea, the total population in 1935 being 182,290.

There are few European firms in the port: business is carried on principally by the Japanese.

浦山馬

Masampo was opened to foreign trade on the 1st May, 1899. The population in December 1933 was 27,470 (Koreans 22,242, Japanese 5,187). The climate is very mild. The harbour is good and in summer it serves as an excellent sea-bathing place. The superior accommodation of Fusan greatly interferes with the commercial expansion of Masampo.

Mokpo, in Japanese "Moppo", in the province of South Zenra, owes its prosperity to the rich agricultural lands lying behind it. It has a good and well-protected harbour with deep water permitting ships up to 15,000 tons to anchor close inshore. Regular steamship lines ply to other Korean ports and to Japan. Mokpo is the principal cotton-shipping port of Korea, but even here the rice exports are of far greater importance. Both go exclusively to Japan. The population in 1933 was 55,667.

HEIJO AND CHINNAMPO

Heijo (Pyengyang) is the most important city of North Korea and shares with Fusan the distinction of being the second city for population in the Peninsula. It was the capital of the ancient Korean kingdom of Kogur-yu (Kokoli) and is now the seat of government of Heian Nando Province. Heijo is situated on the right bank of the Daido River, some 60 miles from its mouth and is an important railway, military and industrial centre, with a population in 1935 of 182,122. It is a stopping place for planes on the regular service between Japan and Manchuria, the aerodrome being on the left bank of the river, and possesses an European-style hotel, operated by the Chosen Railway Bureau. Good anthracite coal is found in the neighbourhood. Heijo is an important missionary centre.

Chinnampo, the seaport of Heijo, is situated some 40 miles down the river on the north side of the estuary, about 20 miles from its mouth, and is also connected by railway. The harbour of Chinnampo affords safe accommodation for vessels and is moreover equipped with a dock capable of taking two vessels of 3,000 tons. The population in 1935 was 50,516. Ten miles up the river, between Heijo and Chinnampo, are the big steelworks of Kenjiho.

山　群

Kunsan is situated near the mouth of the Kinko river on the west coast of Korea, about midway between Chemulpo and Mokpo. Behind the port lie the richest agricultural districts of the Peninsula, known as the "granary of Korea". Rice, which is all taken by Japan, outweights all other exports in value, and as a rice-shipping port Kunsan is second in Korea only to Fusan. In the town are a number of rice-cleaning mills The population in 1935 was 41,620.

SEISHIN

Seishin is an important port and the commercial centre of north-eastern Korea. It has a deep harbour, but its exposed character places it at a disadvantage as compared with Rashin, some 36 miles further up the coast, where harbour works have recently been constructed. Seishin is connected by rail with Seoul (542 km.) via Gensan and northwards through Kainei with the South Manchuria Railway system. It is a port of call for vessels on the regular Tsuruga-Vladivostok service. The population in 1933 was 36,970.

CHINA

China—by a revolution, the origin and progress of which will be found described in the following pages—decided in 1912 to adopt the Republican form of government. Sun Yat Sen, the Republican leader who was appointed first President of the Republic by the Provisional Government set up at Nanking, resigned the Presidency in favour of Yuan Shih-kai on receiving from him satisfactory assurances regarding his political views in support of the Republic. Yuan Shih-kai was unanimously elected, and Sun Yat-sen retired from politics to devote his energies to economic projects, and especially to the development of a scheme for covering the country with a network of railways Yuan Shi-kai continued to serve as "Provisional President" until October 10th, 1913, when, the two Houses of Parliament having in the meantime been set up, he was duly inaugurated.

The Boards of Government or Ministries remain, with some few changes, as they were reconstituted in 1906, when the first steps were taken towards constitutional government and a reform of the official system. There are eleven Ministries which combined form the Executive Yuan, but the State Council is the highest organ of the Government, and is composed of representatives of the Executive, Legislative, Judicial, Examination, and Control Yuan. The President of the State Council (Chiang Kai shek) is virtually President of the Government. Provincial Councils were established in October, 1909, and a National Assembly came into existence on October 3rd, 1910. Its duties were purely consultative, the actual government remaining in the hands of the officials. The intention had been to grant a full Parliament of two chambers in 1917, the intervening years being devoted to preparations for the change but, in response to repeated memorials from the Provincial Councils, supported finally by a unanimous vote of the National Assembly, the period was shortened by four years. The full Parliament came into existence in 1913, being inaugurated on April 8th. The Senate consisted of 274 members and the House of Representatives of 596. Both Chambers were dominated by an ultra-Republican majority, which showed an attitude of hostility to the President from the outset. The President did not attend the inauguration of the Parliament, because (so it was reported) it had been intimated on behalf of the predominant party that he would be welcomed only as a spectator, and the Chambers went so far in their discourtesy as to refuse to allow his Chief Secretary to read to the House a Message congratulating the Parliament upon its inauguration. After spending two or three months in framing rules for the Parliament, the members by a majority voted themselves a yearly salary of $4,000 each. The proceedings of both Houses during 1913 were distinguished by violent attacks on the policy of the President and his Cabinet, and by the languid interest shown in the serious business of the legislature. Very frequently one House or the other was unable to sit because a quorum of members had not put in an appearance. Hostility towards the President found further expression in a new revolution, which broke out in the province of Kiangsi and extended southward to Kwangtung, involving some fighting at Shanghai, Nanking and a few other points in the Yangtsze Valley, the avowed purpose of the revolution being to organise an expedition "to punish Yuan Shih-kai." Within a couple of months this movement was effectually suppressed by the Central Government, and the leading spirits of the revolution fled the country. Among the refugees was Dr. Sun Yat-sen. Thereupon the President and his Cabinet showed a greater determination to secure more effective control over the provinces. The first thing to be done was to confirm the President in his office, and Parliament, evidently impressed by the confidence the country had shown in him during the late troubles, elected him President of the Republic for the next five years, and Li Yuan-hung, who since the first Revolution had remained in command of the troops at Wuchang, was elected Vice-President. Hardly a month had elapsed since his election before the President startled the country by the issue of a mandate ordering the expulsion from Parliament of all members who had been identified with the Kuomingtang, the political party which had promoted the abortive revolution. This order was instantly obeyed, and the result of it was that Parliament was unable to sit for the remainder of the year, as without some of these members it was impossible to form a quorum in either House. Altogether 313 members were expelled, and the party was suppressed as a seditious organisation throughout the country. Notwithstanding these drastic measures the President continued to proclaim his faith in the future of China under a Republican form of government. His views were aptly summed up in his own phrase: "The nurse must not provide the infant with food only fit for adults." Thus it was that China became for a period of two years an autocracy under the guise of a Republic. A State Council, consisting of 70 members, replaced the suppressed Parliament. It was supposed to act as an advisory, administrative and legislative, organ until the formation of the new Parliament under the Constitutional Compact, but its chief function was to give a veneer of legality to the policy of the President. All it did was to endorse his every action, even to the mad Monarchy Movement.

The sudden death of Yuan Shih-kai and the collapse of the ill-starred attempt to restore the monarchical form of Government revived Republicanism. Li Yuan-hung, on the death of Yuan Shih-kai, quietly became President. He was officially confirmed in the appointment by a re-assembly of the first Parliament. The Cabinet was soon afterwards approved by Parliament, and a constitution was drafted which was disliked by the Premier and the military chiefs by reason of the fact that it placed all authority in the hands of Parliament. This led to a rupture which resulted in Li Yuan-hung being compelled to dissolve Parliament at the instigation of the militarists. Then followed, in 1916, Chang Hsun's mad attempt to restore the Manchu Dynasty. He was over-thrown by Marshal Tuan Chi-jui after which Feng Kuo-chang, the Vice-President assumed the Presidency as Li Yuan-hung declined to complete his term. The second election of a President took place in October, 1918, when Hsu Shih-chang was unanimously chosen. He retired in June, 1922, and Li Yuan-hung was induced to return as acting President by promises of support for his programme of reform from the Tuchuns. Twelve months later, however, he fled from Peking owing to pressure exerted by the militarists. He was succeeded by Marshal Tsao Kun, who was elected on October 5th, 1923, by a Parliament, the members of which were openly bribed to vote for him. He was driven out of the Presidential chair in November, 1923, on the collapse of Wu Pei-fu's forces, owing to the defection of Feng Yu-hsiang, who utilised his troops to seize the capital instead of marching to Jehol to outflank the forces of Chang Tso-lin. Tuan Chi-jui was then invited by most of the leading military and civil leaders to become the Provisional Chief Executive and accepted. For the next three years there was no Government worthy of the name in China. Marshal Chang Tso-lin was virtual dictator in Peping, but North and South were at war and the whole country was in a state of chaos owing to the rival claims of many military leaders. In June, 1928, Peiping was captured by the Nationalists, and in October—on the anniversary of the Revolution—Chiang Kai-shek was proclaimed President of the Republic. In January, 1929, the Nationalist flag was hoisted at Mukden and other important centres, signifying that the Northerners had at last decided to co-operate with their former enemies in the South. Nanking is now the capital of China.

Area and Population

China proper, extending over 1,335,841 square miles, is divided into eighteen provinces. Considerable trouble and care has been taken by the Postal Administration to obtain an estimate of the population of China. Recourse was had to the assistance of the provincial officials, which in most cases was willingly accorded. Below is given a close approximation to actual figures. The footnote will show the limitations that have so far been imposed to a full record of the outlying districts:

The principal dependencies of China have been Mongolia, with an area of 1,288,035 square miles, and some 2,000,000 people; and Manchuria, with an area of 363,000 square miles, and an estimated population of 13,700,000. Outer Mongolia in 1912 asserted her independence of Chinese sovereignty, and obtained the formal recognition of Russia, but under the Russo-Chinese Treaty concluded in 1915 the suzerainty of China was recognised and the autonomy of Outer Mongolia agreed to. Towards the end of 1919 Outer Mongolia petitioned to return to the authority of Peiping. The petition was granted, and the several treaties with Russia were abrogated. Conditions in Outer Mongolia, however, have been by no means stabilised by the ostensible return of Mongolia to China's fold. The invasion of Baron Ungern von Sternberg with an anti-Bolshevik army in February, 1921, caused the intervention of Soviet Russia, whose troops, having dislodged Ungern's men, entered into possession of Urga, the capital of Mongolia, and the Territory stretching up to the Russian frontier. Inner Mongolia has been formed into three special administrative districts, viz., Jehol, Chahar and Suiyuan. Manchuria or Manchukuo as she is now sometimes called has in recent years been steadily and rapidly colonised by Japanese, who greatly outnumber the Manchus in their own land. In 1932, she asserted her independence, under Japanese protection, but so far she has not been recognised by any other Nations with the exception of San Salvador. Tibet—which is also practically a dependency of China and whose actual status is still an outstanding question between Great Britain and China—has an area of 643,734 square miles and a population of over 6,000,000. Down to 1910 it was ruled by the late Dalai Lama, but subject to the Government of Peiping, which maintains a Resident at Lhassa. In consequence, however, of the Dalai Lama's refusal to comply with the demands of Peiping, a Chinese military expedition was dispatched to Lhassa, and he fled to India, where he remained for over a year. Meanwhile, the great revolution broke out in China. The Tibetans seized the opportunity to proclaim their independence, and again a military expedition was sent to Tibet, but more conciliatory methods had to be adopted. The Chinese troops were withdrawn and the Dalai Lama returned to the Tibetan Capital. The tripartite conference at Simla in 1914 to determine the status of Tibet and delimit the boundaries ended in failure, no agreement being arrival at. The Dalai Lama visited Peiping in 1921 and was received in audience by President Hsu Shih-chang.

Foreign Trade in 1938

Value of Trade

The net value of the foreign trade of China for the years 1936, 1937 and 1938 is given in the following table:

Net Value of the Foreign Trade of China, 1936-38

	1936. Million $	1937. Million $	1938. Million $
Imports	941	953	886
Exports	706	838	763
Excess of Imports	235	115	123

As will be seen from the above, the net value of the trade of China, import and export, expressed in terms of standard dollars, was for the year 1938 $1,649 million as compared with $1,791 million during 1937. Imports declined from $953 million to $886 million, a decrease of 7 per cent, with exports also falling from $838 million to $763 million, a decline of 8.95 per cent. In this connexion it should be noted that, for purposes of conversion into standard dollars of the declared gold unit valuation of imports, the Government having retained for 1938 the average official daily rate for duty-paying purposes, based on the average official daily rates for foreign exchange of Pence Sterling 14½, U.S. $0.30, Japanese ¥1.03, etc., or the average official rate of Gold Unit 1=St. $2.30, the standard dollar valuation of imports as shown above for the year 1938 is not augmented by the rising value on the open market of the foreign exchanges in terms of dollars.

The following table illustrates the adverse balance of trade in standard dollars during the past 29 years since 1910:

Net Value of the Foreign Trade of China less the Manchurian Trade with Abroad, 1910-38

Year.	Imports. Million $	Exports. Million $	Adverse Balance of Trade. Million $	Year.	Imports. Million $	Exports. Million $	Adverse Balance of Trade. Million $

1920	997	614	383	1935	919	576	343
1921	1,233	698	535	1936	941	706	235
1922	1,284	764	520	1937	953	838	115
1923	1,251	868	383	1938	886	763	123
1924	1,389	878	511

The steady reduction in the adverse balance of trade since 1931, although the figure for the year 1938 is subject to certain revision as pointed out below, presents a striking feature and is the result largely of a decline in the value of imports rather than of any particular growth in the value of exports, though in recent years the export trade has exhibited a healthy tendency towards increase, Chinese exports as percentage of imports having grown from 45.50 per cent in 1933 to 87.93 per cent in 1937. In considering the figures for the year under review, the incidence of hostilities must naturally be taken into consideration. As previously, the adverse balance for the year 1938 of $123 million may rightly be reduced by $16.5 million of export duty, which should be added to the outward statistics to obtain the true f.o.b. value of the export trade.

Individually, the order of importance of the major countries for the year 1938 is found to be Japan, the United States of America, Germany and Great Britain, with respective totals for their imports and exports of $326 million, $238 million, $169 million and $127 million, representing an increase in the case of Japan of $91 million and decreases in the case of the United States of America of $182 million, in the case of Germany of $50 million and in the case of Great Britain of $55 million. In percentages the order in the case of imports is Japan, 23.49 per cent; the United States of America, 16.93 per cent; Germany, 12.64 per cent; and Great Britain, 7.90 per cent; and in the case of exports in Japan, 15.26 per cent; the United States of America, 11.37 per cent; Great Britain, 7.43 per cent; and Germany, 7.39 per cent. The percentage of the import trade attributed to Hongkong was 2.75 per cent and of the export trade 31.87 per cent, it being well-known, as hitherto pointed out, that Hongkong serves primarily as an entrepot for Chinese trade. The increase in Hongkong's percentage of the export trade from 19.42 per cent during 1937 to 31.87 per cent during 1938 is due to the diversion of Chinese exports via Canton and Hongkong, direct shipment abroad from Shanghai and other ports being impeded by the hostilities and the Japanese blockade of the Yangtze River and China Coast.

Imports

The total net value of the import trade, as already pointed out, declined by 7 per cent, from $953 million in 1937 to $886 million for 1938. The table following shows the net imports from abroad for the years 1936, 1937 and 1938, arranged according to the main groupings in the "Monthly Returns of the Foreign Trade of China" and according to the order of importance of these groupings during the year under review:

The above table, however, will serve to give some general idea of the trend and value of China's import trade during the year under review as compared with the years 1936 and 1937 and may be the subject of certain comment. Such changes as have taken place may be largely ascribed to conditions brought about by the hostilities. It will be noticed that the cereals and flour group has resumed its foremost position, this being largely due to an increase in the import of wheat flour, principally from Japan and Australia, total imports being valued for 1938 at $53 million as compared with only $6 million during 1937; there was also an increase in the value of rice and paddy from $40.8 million to $56.4 million, largely from Burma, French Indo-China, and Siam; while cereals, not otherwise recorded, principally from the Kwantung Leased Territory, reached a value of $17.5 million as compared with only $0.6 million during the previous year. Under candles, soap, oils, etc., the value fell from $118.5 million to $91.3 million, imports of gasolene, naphtha, and mineral benzine declining from $27.6 million to $20.5 million; of liquid fuel, from $14.9 to $10.7 million; and of kerosene oil, from $47.8 million to $30 million. Metals and ores witnessed a severe decline from $131.6 million to $65 million, the decline being general under all headings but being principally noticeable under ungalvanized iron and steel bars, which fell in value from $13.9 million to $6.5 million; under rails, which fell from $13.6 million to $2.1 million; under ungalvanized sheets and plates, from $14.7 million to $6 million; and under tinned plates, which declined from $17.1 million to $10.3 million. The decline under chemicals and pharmaceuticals from $61 million to $57 million occurred mainly under chemical and chemical compounds, not otherwise recorded, which fell in value from $16.5 million to $12.2 million. The importation of sulphate of ammonia was well maintained at $18.8 million as against $19.6 million, with caustic soda at $2.7 million as against $2.5 million. Machinery and tools fell in value from $65 million to $56.4 million; the decline under machinery and parts, not otherwise recorded, being from $22.8 million, with an increase in textile machinery and parts, largely from Japan, from $21 million to $25 million. A considerable decline took place under the grouping books, maps, paper and wood pulp from $65 million to $45 million, common printing and newsprinting paper falling in value from $20 million to $10 million; kraft paper, from $3 million to $1.3 million; paper, not otherwise recorded, from $3.6 million to $2.2 million; wood pulp, from $2.6 million to $0.6 million; and paperware and all articles made of paper, not otherwise recorded, from $9.2 million to $3.5 million. There were increases under paper boards from $2.5 million to $4.3 million, and in cigarette paper also from $2.5 million to $4.3 million, while slight increases appear under simile and tissue paper. The increase from $37.6 million to $42.8 million under cotton and manufactures thereof was largely on Japanese account; under raw cotton the decline in value of approximately $3.3 million was due to decreased imports of Egyptian and American cotton. The decrease under vehicles and vessels was from $42 million to $34 million, being noticeable in locomotives and tenders, which declined in value from $6.3 million to $0.3 million; in railway and tramway parts, not otherwise recorded, from $4.8 million to $2.9 million; and in bicycle parts and accessories, from $4.7 million to $1.7 million. The import of motor tractors, trailers and trucks (including chassis) increased in value from $11.7 million to $15.6 million, and in motor-car parts and accessories (not including tires and tubes) from $3.5 million to $5 million. Dyes, pigments, paints and varnishes fell in value from $37.1 million to $31.1 million, with a decline of close on $3 million under aniline and other coal tar dyes, decreases also occurring under artificial indigo, paints and pigments. The import of miscellaneous metal manufactures declined in value from $41 million to $29.7 million; scientific instruments or apparatus and parts or accessories, not otherwise recorded, fell in value from $5.9 million to $2.4 million; telephonic and telegraphic instruments and parts, from $2.5 million to $1.6 million; radio sets and parts, from $3.5 million to $1.2 million; and metal manufactures, not otherwise recorded, from $6.1 million to $2.3 million. There was little change in imports of timber and tobacco. Imports of coal, largely from British India, French Indo-China and Japan, rose in value from $6 million to $21.5 million. Imports of sugar declined, while under wool and manufactures thereof the decline was from $35.6 million to $18.9 million, the fall being particularly heavy in the case of wood, carded or combed wool and waste wool from Great Britain, which fell in quantity from over 5 million kilogrammes to under 600,000 kilogrammes. The import of silk (including artificial silk) and manufactures thereof rose in value from $13.6 million to $17.8 million, the increase being largely from Japan, with imports from Italy declining. The import of fruit, seeds and vegetables, and of animal products, canned goods and groceries, largely from Japan, increased, with a decline in the import of fishery and sea products.

Exports

The net value of exports declined from $838 million to $763 million, or by 8.95 per cent. Below are given comparative statistics for the net value of the export trade during the past three years, arranged according to the groupings used in the "Monthly Returns of the Foreign Trade of China" and in order of their importance during the year under review:

Under exports, textile fibres again head the list with an appreciable increase in value from $128.2 million to $165.1 million, exports to Japan increasing by $53.4 million and to Kwantung Leased Territory by over $15 million, with a decline in exports to the United States of America from $40.3 million to $15.5 million. The most noticeable feature under this group was the increased value of exports of raw cotton to Japan from $19.5 million to $71.1 million and to the Kwantung Leased Territory from $500,000 to $13.7 million. Also of note was the decline in the value of silk exported, particularly raw silk (white, steam filature), which declined in value from $37.4 million to $22.9 million, the export to the United States of America declining by approximately $10 million. The export of sheep's wool was severely handicapped, declining in value from $19.4 million to $7 million, exports to the United States of America falling in value from $13.4 million to $500,000 only. Considering the total value of exports under the animal and animal products grouping, the decline from $124.5 million to $117.9 million was insignificant. The export of bristles was well maintained at a value of $28 million. The egg and feather industry suffered owing to disturbed conditions, as did the export of pig intestines, which fell in value from $10.4 million to $6.6 million. Under ores, metals and metallic products there was an increased export in value from $102.4 million to $106.6 million, the export of wolfram ore (tungsten) increasing in value from $40.7 million to $50.5 million, of which $46.9 million appears as exported to Hongkong. Exports of antimony regulus declined in value from $10 million to $5.6 million, of which $5.2 million appeared as for Hongkong. Tin ingots and slabs declined in value from $39.7 million to $35.9 million, again of this amount $22.4 million appearing as for Hongkong. Under yarn, thread, plaited and knitted goods, cotton yarn exports increased in value from $4.8 million to $22.9 million, exports to British India exceeding $10 million and to Hongkong $7 million. The export of drawn-thread work continued to improve, being in value $8.8 million as compared with $7.3 million, of which amount $6.6 million was for the United States of America. Cross-stitch work and embroideries, other than silk, were well maintained, being $18.2 million as against $20.6 million, the United States of America taking $10.9 million worth as against $12.3 million. Silk embroideries declined in value from $4.3 million to $2.5 million; lace and trimmings also declined from $8.5 million to $7.5 million, the United States of America taking $4.9 million as against $6.2 million during 1937. The oils, tallow and wax grouping is always one of major importance, the value, however, of exports under this group fell from $127 million to $53 million, the export of that staple commodity wood oil declining in value from $89.8 million to $39.2 million, exports to America declining in value from $58.5 million to $3.5 million with an increase in exports appearing as for Hongkong from $16.1 million to $30.9 million. Groundnut oil declined from $17.3 million to $8.5 million, the export to Germany declining from $6.7 million to $2 million and to the United States of America from $5.5 million to $1.8 million. The export also of tea oil to the United States of America fell from $4.8 million to almost nothing. The export of tea improved from $30.8 million to $33 million. Of the total export, $17.7 million worth appears as for Hongkong, $7.4 million for Morocco, $1.9 million for the United States of America, and $1.3 million as for Algeria. Piece-goods exports rose in value from $22.4 million, cotton shirtings and sheetings improving in value from $2.7 million to $7.5 million, of which $4.9 million appears as for Hongkong. Silk piece-goods and silk pongees fell away. Under seeds there was a heavy decline from $35.9 million to $19.5 million; groundnuts in shell maintained their position at $3.5 million as against $3.1 million, but shelled groundnuts (including blanched peanuts) declined in value from $9 million, the export to Germany falling from $3.2 million to $555,000. Sesamum seed (including pulp) fell heavily also from $14.5 million to $1.5 million, Germany, Italy, Japan and the Netherlands, all large buyers in 1937, taking little of nothing. Under hides, leather and skins (furs) the value of exports fell from $53.8 million to $19.4 million owing to unsettled conditions in the North. Cow hides also declined in value from $9.2 million to $2.9 million, with undressed goat skins declining from $11.4 million to $2.4 million, the export of these to America declining in value from $8.8 million to $207.000. Similarly, dressed or undressed lamb skins fell from $7.5 million to $1.4 million, exports in their case to the United States of America falling in value from $7.2 million to $1.4 million. Dressed or undressed weasel skins also fell away from $4 million to $1.9 million, exports to America falling from $4 million to $1.4 million. Skin mats and rugs, not otherwise recorded, were valued at only $3.9 million as compared with $9.2 million during 1937, exports again to the United States of America declining in value from $7.9 million to $3.3 million. The export of cereals and cereal products fell in value from $15.1 million to $4.8 million. Exports of bran fell from $4.2 million to $1.3 million, exports to Formosa falling from $1.3 million to $70,000 and to Japan from $2.9 million to $1.2 million, with the export of cotton seed-cake to Japan falling also from $4 million to $797,000. Millet exports, the value of which in 1936 to Japan was $2.1 million and to Korea $1.9 million, fell to nil. The decline under beans and peas from $6.5 million largely occurred in small green beans, which fell from $2.9 million to $808,000, the decline being general over all countries formerly interested. Exports under other groupings were comparatively well maintained and present no special features.

Shipping and Freight in 1938

The world total of mercantile tonnage under construction at the close of 1929 was 3,110,900 tons; at the close of 1930 was 2,326,100 tons; and following the depression fell to 757,300 tons for the year 1933. Construction thereafter picked up, being 1,543,200 tons in 1935, 2,251,200 tons in 1936, 2,900,200 tons in 1937, with a decline to 2,668,900 tons for the year 1938. Mercantile shipping launched for the period 1926-29 averaged 2,363,000 tons, totalled 2,889,500 tons in 1930, fell to its lowest ebb of 489,000 tons in 1933, recovered to 2,117,900 tons in 1936, 2,690,600 (actual figure) tons in 1937, and had risen to 2,986,800 (provisional figure) tons for the year 1938. Actual tonnage afloat at the end of June 1938 was 67,846,500 tons, which is still below the figure of 68,074,300 tons for the year ending June 1929. These figures, however, tend to show that, despite naval construction, the carrying capacity of the world's mercantile marine is approaching pre-depression levels. Since, however, conditions were generally unfavourable to, and there were no signs of an expansion of, internatioal trade, the general tendency of freight rates was downward. According to the "Economist" index based on 1913=100, the average level, which had improved from 80.8 in January 1936 to 110.2 for December 1936 and stood in January 1937 at 116.5, had declined to 108.6 in December 1937, with a further fall to 92.8 by December 1938.

The total tonnage entered at the 20 leading ports of the world during 1937, the last year for which comprehensive figures are available, is shown hereunder:

In regard to shipping generally in China, affected as it was by the closure of the Yangtze and the Pearl Rivers and the blockade of the coast, reference to the Shipping tables appearing with this report will show that total entries and clearances at Chinese ports amounted to 59 million tons only as compared with 90 million tons in 1937 and 145 million tons during 1936. By flags, the order of importace was: British shipping, 28.6 million tons; Japanese shipping, 8.7 million tons; Chinese shipping (excluding junks), 5.5 million tons; Norwegian shipping, 3.6 million tons; German shipping, 2.6 million tons; Italian shipping, 1.7 million tons; Netherlands shipping, 1.6 million tons; Portuguese shipping. 1.5 million tons; French shipping, 1.3 million tons; and Danish shipping, 1.1 million tons. Of the reduced total of 59 million tons of shipping entered and cleared, 29.4 million tons entered from and cleared to foreign ports as compared with 35.4 million tons in 1937, while 29.7 million tons as compared with 54.6 million tons entered and cleared coastwise. These figures do not include the tonnage of vessels plying under Inland Waters Steam Navigation Regulations. As regards shipping with abroad, the leading ports in China were: Shanghai, with 34.58 per cent of the total tonnage as compared with 31.94 per cent in 1937; Tientsin, with 11.56 per cent as compared with 5.73 per cent; Canton, 10.08 per cent as compared with 12.78 per cent; Swatow, 7.56 per cent as compared with 8.39 per cent; Chinwangtao, 7.13 per cent as compared with 4.08 per cent; Tsingtao, 6.13 per cent as compared with 7.55 per cent; and Amoy, 3.73 per cent as compared with 5.17 per cent.

Further analysis of the shipping trade shows the percentage share of the total entrances and clearances taken by the leading flags during the year under review:

Freight rates on the China coast were increased by 10 per cent as from the 1st May 1937. Since then freight rates have been increased during 1938 by 15 per cent in April, 10 per cent in June and by a further 15 per cent in October. These increases of 40 per cent during 1938 have, however, been in the nature of compensation for the declining value of the Chinese dollar, which vis-a-vis foreign currencies have fallen by approximately the same percentage.

Transpacific Freights

With but a few minor alterations and additions no revision in rates of freight, either upwards or downwards, was made, Tariff No. 8, which became effective on the 6th October 1937, still remaining in force.

Freights via Suez

Rates of freight per ton to Europe via Suez remained steady and unchanged from those ruling at the close of 1937, with the exception that during April of 1938 the China Homeward Freight Conference announced that freight rates in Shanghai dollars would be converted for payment into Hongkong dollars, pesos or pounds sterling.

Railways

Of the 10,000 odd kilometres of China's railways, some 6,000 kilometres run over areas affected by the Sino-Japanese hostilties. Among the principal lines affected in the North are the Peiping-Liaoning Railway from Peiping to Shanhaikwan; the Tatung-Puchow line running north to south in Shansi, some 1,000 kilometres in length; the Lung-Hai line of 1,200 kilometres; the Tientsin-Pukow line of 1,100 kilometres; the Peiping-Hankow line of 1,214 kilometres; the Peiping-Suiyüan line of 876 kilometres; the Tsingtao-Tsinan line of 453 kilometres; the Shihkiachwang-Taiyüan line of 278 kilometres; and in Anhwei, the Hwainan line of 215 kilometres. In Central China the Japanese dominated the Shanghai-Nanking line of 311 kilometres, the Shanghai-Hangchow-Ningpo line of 273 kilometres, the branch Soochow-Kashing line, and the line 178 kilometres in length running from Nanking through Wuhu to Sunkiapu. Despite the hostilities continuing over a period of 17 months, the Chinese Government has consistently pursued a policy of maintaining and improving her lines of communication in the West and South-west, while, incidentally, losses of rolling-stock from those lines affected were minor, most of the railway equipment and machine shops having been successfully removed to the interior. During the year 1936 1,700 kilometres of railways were completed, including the 1,097 kilometres Canton-Hankow Railway, the 245 kilometres Yüshan-Nanchang section of the Chekiang-Kiangsi Railway, and the 215 kilometres Hwainan Railway from Tienkiaan in Northern Anhwei to Yükikow on the northern bank of the Yangtze River below Wuhu. Encouraged with its success during 1936 the Government mapped out a five-year construction plan, providing for the building of 8,477 kilometres of new railways, it being planned that 1,695 kilometres of new railways should be opened to traffic each year. The plan called for the completion in the North-western provinces of the Lung-Hai Railway, which runs from Haichow, a seaport in Northern Kiangsu, west to Sian, provincial capital of Shensi. This line was extended to Paoki, 130 kilometres west of Sian, in 1936, and extension was planned to Lanchow, the capital of Kansu province, 450 kilometres north-west of Sian. Another line from Paoki to Chengtu, the capital of Szechwan province, about 550 kilometres south-west of Paoki, will link the provincial capitals of Sian and Chengtu.

In the South-west the plan called for the construction of the 523 kilometres Chengtu-Chungking Railway connecting the two leading Szechwan cities; the Hunan-Kweichow Railway connecting Chuchow, important city on the Canton-Hankow line, with Kweiyang, the capital of Kweichow province; the 350 kilometres Szechwan-Kweichow Railway connecting Chungking and Kweiyang; the 550 kilometres Yunnan-Kweichow Railway connecting Kweichow and Kunming, the capital of Yunnan; the 770 kilometres Szechwan-Yunnan Railway connecting Kunming and Suifu, on the Yangtze River in Central Szechwan; and the 345 kilometres Hunan-Kwangsi Railway.

In the South-east the plan called for the construction of the 263 kilometres Nanchang-Pingsiang Railway connecting the capital town of Kiangsi with the mining town of Pingsiang and the Canton-Hankow line; the 450 kilometres Nanking-Kiangsi Railway connecting at Kweiki with the Chekiang-Kiangsi line; and the Canton-Meihsien Railway of 500 kilometres connecting the Southern port of Canton with East Kwangtung's leading town. These lines were either under survey or under construction before the summer of 1937, and large orders for rails, coaches, and locomotives had been placed abroad. On the outbreak of hostilities part of these plans had to be abandoned, while some of the completed lines were torn up, as, for instance, the Nanchang-Kiukiang line from Kiukiang to Yunsui and a section of the Chekiang-Kiangsi line. Particular emphasis was laid on the construction of new railways in the South-western provinces. The Hengyang-Kweilin section of the Hunan-Kwangsi line has been completed and is now being extended to the borders of French Indo-China. On the Hunnan-Kweichow line the section Chuchow-Hsianghsing of about 60 kilometres has already been completed, and work is proceeding on the westward extension to Kweiyang. The Szechwan-Yunnan line is in the road-levelling stage. The road-bed for the Chungking-Chengtu line is being prepared, while the final survey has begun of the Yunnan-Kweichow line. An entirely new line, now under construction, is the Yunnan-Burma Railway connecting Kunming and British Burma. This line, about 700 odd kilometres in length, will serve as an important link between China and the Indian ocean coast when completed.

The following are the import statistics for rolling-stock, and for such railway materials as are specifically quoted as such in the Returns, during the past three years:

Roads

While details of further construction of highways since the outbreak of hostilities are not available for publication, one of the most outstanding achievements in this connexion has been the completion of the new Yunnan-Burma road. As early as 1925 surveys were made of the route between Yunnanfu (Kunming) and Kweiyang, and upon completion of this section the road was extended from Kweiyang to Chungking. The new section of the road from Kunming to Siakwan was roughly constructed some few years ago, but work on the remaining section from Siakwan to the Burma frontier was not started until after the outbreak of hostilities. The road from Kunming to the Burma frontier is some 650 miles in length. At the frontier the highway connects with the recently improved Burmese highway to Lashio, where railroad connexion with the port of Rangoon via Mandalay, a distance of some 625 miles, is made. Thus freight from Rangoon to Kunming by rail and truck covers close on 1,300 miles. While the highway may be subject to damage during the rainy season from May to November, there is little doubt that in course of time all difficulties will be overcome and that this highway, following the old trail over which Marco Polo travelled, will be of considerable aid in opening up the Western provinces of China.

Conditions in 1938

Apart from the decline in China's foreign trade and the loss in Customs revenue collection, estimates of other property and industrial losses sustained as a result of hostilities cover at a present only limited areas, are largely conjectural and vary to an astonishing degree. In Shanghai, for instance, estimates of losses have been various assessed at $800 million, at $1 billion and at $4 billion. Damages at Nanking have been estimated at $246 million, and direct losses to Chinese shipping at $70 million. Of foreign investments in China valued at the start of hostilities at approximately U.S. $3,500 million, U.S. $800 million are claimed to have been irrevocably lost, American losses up to July being assessed at U.S. $200 million, British losses at probably double that figure, while losses to German entreprises have been equally impressive.

During the three months' hostilities in and around Shanghai, destruction to Chinese industrial establishments is estimated to have been from 30 to 100 per cent, according to district. Of the 90 odd Chinese cotton mills in China, 31 were in the Shanghai area, of which 23 were damaged to varying extent. Destruction here was not as serious as in the case of the 15 mills in industrial areas on the Shanghai-Nanking Railway, which suffered severe losses. Out of a total of 47 Japanese cotton mills in China, 30 are located in Shanghai, but, in contrast to the entire destruction of Japanese mills in Tsingtao, only one of the Japanese mills in Shanghai suffered damages necessitating a stoppage of work. 197 machine dyeing, printing and weaving concerns were stated by the Dyeing and Weaving Association to have been completely destroyed, with estimated losses of over $9 million. Silk filatures in and around the Shanghai area suffered losses estimated at $100 million, while at Wusih 46 filatures were damaged during the hostilities. Estimated losses in the comparatively recent rubber industry amounted to $5 million. Of the numerous bigger flour mills in China, only 15 were in Shanghai, eight of which were known to have been destroyed. Capital invested in tobacco factories was over $12 million. Out of the 18 bigger concerns, eight were destroyed with a loss of over $5 million. The Commercial Press, which suffered a $16 million loss in 1932, suffered again to the extent of between ½ million to 1 million dollars. The Kai Min Book Company's premises in Hongkew, capitalised at $300,000, were completely destroyed, while some 200 small printing establishments were also ruined. Thirteen of the larger Chinese timber mills in Nantao and eight in Chapei were damaged or destroyed. The Shanghai Portland Cement Company, with a $2 million investment in machinery alone, was badly damaged. The Kiangwan Chemical Works in Chapei reported a 40 per cent loss; the Alcohol Plant at Pootung was damaged; while numerous other chemical and paint and varnish works suffered severely. Chinese soap works and tanneries lost extensively, while the machine-made paper industry, representing a capital investment of over $17 million, suffered badly. The section of Chapei at one time crowded with small machine and metal works was entirely razed. Larger losses outside the Settlement included the Kiangnan Dock and Engineering Company's plant in Nantao, the Oriental Iron Works, the Ming Ching Printing Machine Manufacturing Company in Chapei, and the China Scientific Instrument Company's factory at Chenju.

Damaged enterprises included many of the newer and better organised factories, such as the China Can Company, which was destroyed with losses estimated at $1 million, the well-equipped Chinese Educational Goods Factory and the Da Hwa Educational Goods Factory, both of which were also destroyed.

What has taken place at Shanghai is merely an indication of what has occurred at other occupied ports on the Yangtze River, along the coast, and in Canton—where all industrial plants, water and electricity works, the General Post Office, and most of the city's modern business sections were almost entirely destroyed by fire. To these losses must be added the incalculable damage suffered in the interior of China due to destruction by the invading armies, the Chinese "scorched earth" policy, and the floods in North China and in those provinces bordering the Yellow and Yangtze Rivers. Despite all the damage sustained in the coastal areas, much valuable equipment has been moved westward, the plants, machinery, and staff of many industries in Chekiang, Kiangsu and Anhwei having been transported with Government aid to zones of comparative safety in China's hinterland. In addition to Government aid, considerable private capital has been invested, resulting in the opening of a new era of industrial and agricultural development in the West and the opening of many new avenues to trade. The losses sustained as a result of hostilities, the diversion of shipping, the closure of the Yangtze River to navigation, the blockade of the coast, and the bombing of towns, roads and railways were incalculably heavy.

PEIPING

天 順 Shun-tien formerly Peking (Peiching) 京 北

Peiping (formerly known as Peking) is situated on a sandy plain 13 miles S. W. of the Pei-ho river, and about 110 miles from its mouth, in latitude 39 deg. 54 min. N. and longitude 116 deg. 27 min. E., or nearly on the parallel of Naples. A canal connects the city with the Pei-ho. The use of the name 'Peiching' (Peking) was restored by order of the local administration in October 1937. This has not however, been endorsed by the Central Government authorities.

From Dr. Dennys' description of Peiping we quote the following brief historical sketch:—"The city formerly existing on the site of the southern portion of Peiping was the capital of the Kingdom of Yan. About 222 B.C., this kingdom was overthrown by the Chin dynasty and the seat of Government was removed elsewhere. Taken from the Chins by the Khaitans about 936 A.D., it was some two years afterwards made the southern capital of that people. The Kin dynasty, subduing the Khaitans, in their turn took possession of the capital, calling it the 'Western Residence.' About A.D. 1151, the fourth sovereign of the Kins transferred the Court thither, and named it the Central Residence. In 1215, it was captured by Genghis Khan. In 1264 Kublai Khan fixed his residence there, giving it the title of Chung-tu or Central Residence, the people at large generally calling it Shun t'ien-fu. In 1267 A.D., the city was transferred 3 li (one mile) to the North of its then site, and it was then called Ta-tu—the 'Great Residence.' The old portion became what is now known as the 'Chinese' city, and the terms 'Northern' and 'Southern' city, or more commonly nei-cheng (within the wall) and wai-cheng (without the wall), came into use. The native Emperors who succeeded the Mongol dynasty did not, however, continue to make Peking the seat of Government. The Court was shortly afterwards removed to Nanking, which was considered the chief city of the Empire until, in 1421, Yung Lo, the third Emperor of the Ming dynasty, again held his Court at Peiping, since which date it has remained the capital of China."

The present city of Peiping is divided into two portions, the Northern or Inner city and the Southern or Outer. There is now no purely Manchu Section as formerly. The general shape of Peiping may be roughly represented by a square placed upon an oblong, the former standing for the Northern and the latter for the Southern city. The whole of the town is, of course, walled. The walls of the Northern city are the strongest. They average 50 feet in height and 40 feet in width, and are buttressed at intervals of about sixty yards. The parapets are loop-holed and crenelated. They are faced on both sides with brick, the space between being filled with earth and concrete. Each of the gateways is surmounted by a three-storied pagoda. The walls of the Southern city are about 30 feet in height, 25 feet thick at the base, and 15 feet wide on the terre plein. The total circumference of the walls round the two cities slightly exceeds 20 miles. The innermost Section of the Northern city called Kin-ching or Forbidden City, contains the Imperial Palace and its surrounding buildings.

There is little direct foreign trade with Peiping, but it is growing. In August, 1884, the city was brought into direct telegraphic communication with the rest of the world, by an overland line to Tientsin viâ Tungchow. The Ministry of Communications has now its own wireless installation. The year 1899 witnessed two other innovations, which would have been regarded as impossible ten years previously, viz., the erection of large two-storied buildings on prominent sites for the Austrian Legation and the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank. These were breaks with immemorial tradition that the feng-shui must resent elevation in houses other than those of the immortal gods and the Son of Heaven. The railway line to Tientsin was opened in 1897.

During 1902 the fortification of the Legation quarter was completed, the railway termini brought to the Ch'ien Men in the Southern city, and the reconstruction of the various Legations was begun. These were slowly brought to completion, and extensive barracks connected with each for the accommodation of the Legation Guards. As most Chinese buildings in this section were removed the Legation quarter presents the appearance of a European settlement of about half a square mile in extent. There are several large stores, which sell all kinds of foreign goods. The Peiping Club is much larger and more convenient than it was before; there is a Catholic Church for the Legation Guards, and several hospitals—Rockefeller Foundation (a handsome and splendidly equipped institution, the opening of which marked an epoch in the history of Peiping), Dojin (Japanese, completed in 1917), Central, German, St. Michael's and the Methodist Episcopal John L. Hopkins Memorial— which are provided with accommodation for both Chinese and European patients. There are many foreign banks, and numerous Chinese banks. In addition to a number of smaller hotels, there are two large splendidly-equipped hotels—the Hotel des Wagons-Lits and the Hotel de Pekin. The latter is a magnificent structure capable of accommodating 1,000 guests.

The main streets of Peiping are macadamized, and two electric light companies have been organized which will furnish light wherever wanted in the city. Outside the Legation quarter there are many foreign buildings, the number of which is growing yearly, changing to some extent the appearance of the business localities adjacent to the Glacis.

Since the revolution many changes, which would have been unthinkable under the Manchu régime, have taken place. In addition to opening all available gates, the authorities have constructed several new streets at considerable cost, and are giving better access to certain localities which were formerly badly served. The Imperial City Wall is now pierced in over a dozen places, and three new thoroughfares have been opened, viz., the Nan Ch'ih Tzu, the Nan Fu K'ou, and the Fu Yu Chieh, the last-mentioned providing a well-made road alongside the western wall of the Imperial City. Peiping has a population of 1,524,182, according to local police statistics compiled on September 1937.

There has been a considerable decline in the official population, both Chinese and foreign, since the transfer of the capital to Nanking.

There are air services to Shanghai via Tientsin and Tsingtao and to Canton via Tsinanfu, Sianfu, Hankow and Changsha. The services to Peiping have been discontinued since early July 1937 and not yet resumed.

Peiping is now connected with Tientsin by a motor road, and there are also motor roads to many places in the Western Hills.

TIENTSIN

津天 Tien-tsin

Tientsin—or the Ford of Heaven, according to the Chinese meaning of its name—may now well be called the commercial capital of North China. Situated at the junction of the Grand Canal and the Pei Ho in Lat. 39 deg. 4 min. N., long. 117 deg. 4 min. E. (approx.), it is some 80 miles distant from Peking by road and somewhat further by river. Railway connection with the capital was established in 1897. A road between the two places, 94 miles long, was completed towards the end of 1922, and communication was further facilitated by the inauguration of a wireless telephone service on March 7th of that year. The expeditions of the Allies in 1858-61 greatly enhanced the importance of the city, as it then proved to be the military key of the capital and an excellent base. It was here on June 26th, 1858, that Lord Elgin signed the treaty which was to conclude the war, but which unhappily led to its prolongation. The famous temple in which the treaty was signed, about a mile distant from the West gate, was destroyed by British shells in July, 1900.

Tientsin owes its early importance to its location at the northern terminus of the Grand Canal, and its later development is mainly due to the opening up of North China to foreign trade, to improved railway communications with the Interior, and to the deepening of the Bar and the Hai Ho by the Hai Ho Conservancy Board. Before the advent of steamers, however, Tientsin had become a flourishing centre for junk traffic, and when the tribute rice no longer followed the Grand Canal route—owing to the shoaling of this ancient and celebrated waterway—it was sent to Tientsin in sea-going junks when following the downfall of the Manchu dynasty in 1912, the transportation of this commodity ceased altogether. Early in September, 1917, the Hunho was in flood, and, finally, the Grand Canal burst its banks a few miles west of Tientsin, carrying away the main line of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, which resulted in the Concessions being flooded before much warning of the impending danger could be given. The Municipal authorities of the various Concessions dealt with the problem in a prompt and public-spirited manner, and it was ultimately decided to enclose the submerged Concessions with a dyke and pump out the flood waters therefrom. The lengths of the various dykes in miles were approximately as follows:—Chinese (ex-German) 0.47; British, 1.40; French and British, 0.87; French, 0.32; Japanese, 2.27; total, 5.33 miles. Powerful pumps were then erected, and the whole undertaking for the British and French Concessions was successfully and expeditiously completed in a fortnight. It took longer to clear the Japanese Concession, however, where the water was from 7 to 10 feet deep in places. It is estimated that over 15,000 square miles of the most populous part of the Chihli province between Paotingfu and Tientsin were flooded, and it has been calculated that crops to the value of $100,000,000 were utterly lost, and that 80,000 groups of dwellings, ranging from hamlets to large villages, were destroyed.

Turning to the civil administration of the city, it is well known that during the long satrapy of Li the trade and importance of the city developed exceedingly. Li, by the vigour of his rule, soon quelled the rowdyism for which the Tientsinese were notorious throughout the empire, and, as he made the city his chief residence and the centre of his many experiments in military and naval education, it came to be regarded as the focus of the new learning and national reform. The foreign affairs of China were practically directed from Tientsin during the two decades 1874-94.

The city will ever be infamous to Europeans from the massacre of the French Sisters of Mercy and other foreigners on June 21st, 1870, in which the most appalling brutality was exhibited; as usual, the political agitators who instigated the riot got off. The Roman Catholic Cathedral, which was destroyed on that occasion, was rebuilt, and the new building was consecrated in 1897, only again to fall a victim to Boxer fury in 1900. The building occupied a commanding site on the river bank. All the missions and many of the foreign hongs had agencies in the city prior to the debâcle of 1900.

The population was 1,388,747 in 1929. The city walls were quadrate and extended about 4,000 feet in the direction of each cardinal point; during the year 1901 they were entirely demolished and replaced by fine open boulevards under the orders of the Foreign Military Provisional Government. This body has further bunded the whole of the Hai Ho (Pei-ho) and effected numberless other urban improvements. The advent of foreigners caused a great increase in the value of real estate all over Tientsin.

Li Hung-chang authorised Mr. Tong King-seng to sink a coal shaft at Tong Shan (60 miles N.E. of Tientsin) in the 'seventies; this was done and proved the precursor of a railway, which was later extended to Shanhaikwan for military purposes, and from thence round the Gulf of Liautung to Kinchow; 1900 saw this line pushed on to Newchwang. In 1897 the line to Peking was opened, and proved such a success that the line had to be doubled in 1898-9. A side station for the Tientsin City was opened in 1904, and in 1905 the station was built of white sandstone bricks made at Huangtsun by an Italian called Marzoli, who had opened a brick factory on a large scale. From Feng-tai, about 7 miles from the capital, the trans-continental line to Hankow branches off. This line was completed and opened to traffic in November, 1905. In 1900 the violence of the Boxers was chiefly directed against the railways, all of which were more or less destroyed, but under British, French, and Russian military administration they were afterwards all restored to their former efficiency.

Foreigners formerly lived in three concessions—British, French and German—which fringed the river below the city and covered an area of less than 500 acres. The Japanese took up a concession in accordance with the terms of the Treaty of Shimonoseki. They filled in land, laid out new streets and built a large number of houses in foreign style. During 1901 Russia, Belgium, Italy, and Austro-Hungary all appropriated large areas on the left bank of the Hai-ho as future Settlements, while the existing concessions extended their boundaries considerably. These developments for some time threw all landing facilities for direct sea-going traffic into foreign hands. In 1917, upon the entry of China into the Great War, the Chinese recovered control over the German and Austrian concessions, in 1920 over the Russian, and in 1929 over the Belgian. The general deterioration in the maintenance and in the public services of these areas since their rendition to China (with the exception of the Belgian concession which had never been developed at all) is most noticeable. The administration of all these areas is now entirely in the hands of Chinese officials and no voice therein is allowed to any of the residents, either foreign or Chinese. The other concessions have excellent and well-lighted roads, and an electric tramway system links them with the Chinese city. The British Municipality has a handsome Town Hall, completed in 1889; adjoining there is a well-kept public garden, opened in the year of Jubilee and styled Victoria Park. Two excellent recreation grounds of 10 acres and over here have been developed, in which tennis-courts, etc., have been laid out. The various British areas—known as the British Concession, British Extension, and the Extra-Mural Area—have been amalgamated to form one Municipal Area under a Council elected on a broad franchise. New land regulations have come into force, and it is stipulated therein that the new Council consist of ten members, of whom five shall be British subjects and five shall be Chinese. Candidates must be nominated by two electors and all electors are eligible to serve on the Council. The minimum qualification for any voter, irrespective of nationality, is the payment of Tls. 200 per annum in respect of land-tax or rental assessment tax or the occupation of premises of an assessed annual rental value of Tls. 600.

A feature of Tientsin which arrests the attention of visitors is the open-air storage of cargo on the British and French Bunds, which have thus become in effect a "general godown." A great deal of confusion and congestion formerly existed from this practice, but the British Municipality has since elaborated an excellent scheme whereby the Bund is divided into numbered steamer-sections and storage-spaces, and the roadway is now kept clear of cargo. The result has more than justified expectations, and the orderly storage of goods in marked-off spaces not only allows a proper control to be kept over all such cargo but has facilitated communications by keeping the carriage-way clear of obstructions.

The Racecourse is situated about 3 miles to the west of the Gordon Hall and comprises a very valuable property of about 1,227 mow of land. New betting buildings of reinforced concrete, which surpass anything of the description in the Far East, were constructed in 1921.

In spite of the general trade depression, the Chinese Government Telephone Administration registered an increase both in activity and in revenue for the year 1930. An extension of lines was made in the west end of the native city in May, and another was made in the Hopei district in December. There was a partial change to automatic machines, which are greatly appreciated by the subscribers. At present there are 11 long-distance lines operating between Tientsin and places as far afield as Peiping and Shenyang, while a relay service was established between Tientsin and Antung, Dairen, Port Arthur, and Japan.

The value statistics for the port of Tientsin as recorded by the Customs were as follows: direct foreign imports, $233.9 million as compared with $84.1 million; coastwise importations of Chinese merchandise, $96.9 million as against $93.2 million; direct exportations to foreign countries, $176.1 million as against $128.9 million; and coastwise exportations of Chinese produce, $96.8 million as compared with $52.2 million for the year 1937.

Drastic reductions in the Import Tariff enforced during the year removed the incentive to smuggle, the so-called special trade through East Hopeh ceasing. Sugar, artificial silk, piece-goods, paper, kerosene, marine products, etc., formerly smuggled by way of the Chitung coast, were shipped to Tientsin and passed through the Customs as regular imports. While the rapid fall in the exchange value of the Chinese dollar forced the prices of European and American imports to an almost prohibitive level, Japanese imports maintained a more stable price-level due to the acceptance at par in North China of a yen valued at 1s. 2d. Of total imports from abroad valued at $233.9 million, the value of imports from Japan was $125.2 million. Included in these imports from Japan, however, were considerable quantities of cargo first imported into Japan and then reshipped to China in order to reap the special benefit in the matter of exchange. Coincident with the import trade there was a sudden increase in the number of bonded godowns. For years the port had been served by two public bonded godowns only; during the year under review 10 public and nine private bonded godowns were licensed and were filled to capacity. Japan practically monopolised the trade in cotton piece-goods, her imports being valued at $13.2 million out of a total import valued at $15.1 million. Total imports of wool and manufactures thereof reached the record value of $8.85 million as compared with $2.89 million in 1937, Japanese imports increasing in value from $786,000 to $7.5 million. Carded or combed wool formed an exception, Great Britain and Australia being the principal suppliers with, however, the quantity imported being reduced from 739,005 kilogrammes. In overcoatings, tweeds and homes spuns, Poland, the chief suppliers in previous years, was outsold by Japan. The increase from 229,064 to 1, 466,927 kilogrammes in the import of artificial silk floss and yarn and from $769,562 to $4,938,525 in arrivals of artificial silk piece-goods was attributed to the reduction in duty and the cessation of smuggling. The increased value of metals and ores from $13.3 million to $16.5 million was due more to an increase in price than to a bigger volume of trade. With a building boom, demand for structural steel was especially firm, but owing to high prices domestic materials were used wherever possible. Imports of machinery and tools reached an unprecedentedly high figure, many types of mining and agricultural machinery being granted exemption from duty. Textile machinery and parts imported were valued at $7.3 million, an increase of over 100 per cent, heavy shipments being destined for the new Japanese cotton mills now under construction. The import of locomotives and tenders and railway and tramway carriages and wagons declined to negligible quantities. Motor trucks and cars, on the other hand, showed substantial increases, the former advancing from 469 to 756 units and the latter from 234 to 299 units. Under miscellaneous metal manufactures, electric bulbs, practically entirely from Japan, increased in number from 83,360 to 2,533,156 pieces. Electric cable and insulated electric wire also increased, while the import of radio and parts nearly double. An embargo in July on the import of all kinds of wireless apparatus and materials was later modified to allow the import of receiving sets with a capacity of from 550 to 1,500 kilocycles. Fishery and sea products reached the record value of $2.3 million as compared with $0.5 million in 1937, Japan supplying 87 per cent. Import of tea increased from 10,178 to 846,551 kilogrammes, of which 836,949 kilogrammes came from Japan. Imports of sugar, which in 1936 totalled only 19,043 quintals, rose to 484,074 quintals, Japan being the chief importer of refined sugar, with the trade in other varieties about equally divided between Netherlands India and Japan. Chemicals formerly supplied from Europe are now almost exclusively derived from Japan. Among the principal items in this group is sulphate of ammonia, which increased from 111,979 to 158,569 quintals, of which Germany contributed 53,876 quintals, Japan 49,048 quintals, Great Britain 39,982 quintals, and the Kwantung Leased Territory 11,099 quintals. In 1937 over 80 per cent of the business was shared between Great Britain and Germany. Imports of soda ash totalled 81,509 quintals, supplies from Great Britain falling from 95,292 to 50,200 quintals, with those from Japan increasing from 32 to 22,727 quintals. Shipment from Japan of mixed fertilisers virtually monopolised the trade. Prices of dyestuffs were comparetively high, and in many instances imports showed a much greater gain in value than in quantity. Aniline and other coal tar dyes increased in value, Germany being the leading importer, with Japan increasing her share nearly fourfold. Artificial indigo imported totalled 758,756 kilogrammes as against 551,918 kilogrammes, but sulphur black failed to maintain the preceding year's level. Actual consumption of aniline dyes during the year was on the whole below normal, conditions in up-country consuming districts being far from peaceful; tans and tanning materials, however, maintained their position. Unsettled conditions in the interior with the consequent interruption of communications caused a considerable drop in the consumption of kerosene oil; imports, however, stood at 74,306, 374 litres as compared with 44,922,144 litres in 1937 and 77,246,549 litres in 1936, the decline in smuggling accounting for a greater total of legitimate importations, while a new feature has been the influx of kerosene from Japan and Korea, totalling respectively 6,910,737 litres and 2,481,832 litres. Gasolene, naphtha and benzine imports totalled 12,513,858 litres as compared with 11,855,219 litres in 1937 and 12,230,929 litres in 1936. British and American importers suffered from the fact that transportation in areas under Japanese occupation was controlled by the Japanese and the gasolene consumed by the various motor-bus companies was mainly obtained from Japanese sources. Import of liquid fuel and lubricating oil totalling 3,697,223 litres, of which 1,826,701 litres came from America, with 1,233,202 litres and 485,226 litres from Japan and the Kwantung Leased Territory respectively. Japanese paper products continued to dominate the market. Imports of timber continued to increase, there being enhanced demand for construction purposes, particularly in connexion with new cotton mills. Under the group cereals and flour, imports valued at $64.1 million as compared with $1.7 million only during 1937. Owing to the failure of the previous year's crop as a result of the floods and to unsettled conditions, Tientsin had to depend on foreign supplies of rice and wheat flour. Of rice and paddy 846,153 quintals were imported during the year as against 8,374 quintals in 1937, Siam being the largest supplier with 484,517 quintals, with Japan and Korea following with 122,594 and 68,749 quintals respectively. Of wheat flour 2,076,580 quintals were imported, of which 1,095,394 quintals came from Japan, 890,318 quintals from Australia, and 66,983 quintals from America. The abolition of import duty on flour early in the year afforded foreign importers the opportunity to participate in the North China market, Australian flour being the first to arrive and, owing to its fine quality, winning much favour among consumers. The American product also made considerable headway.

As has been noted, the value of foreign exports passing through the port increased from $128.9 million for 1937 to $176.1 million for 1938. The increase is the more remarkable in that the export of certain skins and wool was banned by the authorities. The export duty, however, on raw cotton, cotton seed, and linseed was abolished from the 22nd, January, while the export duty rates on bristles, hair and wool were reduced by one-half to two-thirds. Favourable exchange also gave a favourable impetus to the export trade, while, owing to interference with the export trade at Tsingtao, much cargo usually shipped from that port was diverted to Tientsin. Of total exports abroad valued as above, $78.2 million worth was on Japanese account. It should be noted that favourable conditions did not exist in all items of export and that the primary increase was due to the shipment of raw cotton, which alone showed a gain in value of $62 million. In the latter half of the year, moreover, the contemplated control of exports came as a blow to exporters, while much has been heard of the enforcement of a "link system" of imports and exports in North China, a measure deemed necessary to bolster the new currency. The total value of egg and egg products was well maintained, being $11.4 million for 1938 as compared with $11.5 million for 1937. One of the outstanding features of the trade was the falling-off in shipments to the United States of America. During 1937 America took 6,605 quintals of dried albumen and 13,709 quintals of dried yolk, as compared with 1,300 quintals of albumen and 55 quintals of yolk during 1938. Of dried albumen Great Britain was the large buyer with 3,548 quintals, while Germany took 9,054 quintals of dried yolk. Germany's purchases of dried mélange and moist and frozen yolk ranked first, the figures being 1,513 and 10,498 quintals respectively. Great Britain remained the largest buyer of moist and frozen mélange with 58,853 quintals as against 30,445 quintals, with her purchases of moist and frozen yolk advancing from 4,839 to 9,212 quintals. Owing to shortage of supplies prices of raw eggs were exceptionally high, but were in measure compensated by the depreciation of the Chinese currency. Owing to the hostilities and the difficulty in obtaining sufficient quantities of eggs in China, importers in Europe have been engaged in finding alternative sources of supply, and China has now rivals in her profitable egg export business, the chief among them being Roumania, while Yugoslavia, Hungary and Latvia are also interested. Shipments of goat and sheep intestines declined as demand in America waned, "Nojax," an artificial substitute, machine-made, uniform, and flawless, coming into favour. Demand from Europe for pig intestines was steady, but the Chinese product compared unfavourably with the American hog casings. The total export of skins and furs was valued at $7.5 million as compared with $21.4 million for 1937. The United States of America failed to absorb the usual quantities. The export of goat skins fell from 3,090,522 to 473,421 pieces, there being a general and serious decline under all other headings. Complicating the position was the prohibition on the export of sheep, goat and lamb skins at the end of June by the "Provisional Government." Later the scope of the ban was reduced to apply only sheep skins; slink skins, with hair exceeding 25 millimetres; lamb skins, tanned or untanned; and lamb plates, "Mongolian" and "Turkestan" type. Even in their modified form the restrictions constituted a great handicap to exporters. Seeds of various kinds exported during 1938 were valued at $8.8 million as against $6.3 million, German and British purchases of apricot seed exceeding those of 1937, with the export of cotton seed, practically all to Japan, totalling 463,540 quintals, the duty on this article as on linseed being abolished early in the year. Linseed, however, failed to react to this measure of encouragement only 72,303 quintals being shipped as compared with 121,791 quintals in 1937 and 368,100 quintals in 1936. Australia, the principal buyer, disappeared from the market, while shipments to America were negligible. Japan, on the contrary, monopolised the trade by taking 99 per cent of total shipment. Groundnuts, in shell and shelled, showed substantial increases, the former advancing from 14,526 to 16,229 quintals and the latter from 7,834 to 17,389 quintals. The Netherlands was the principal consumer of groundnuts in shell, taking 9,451 quintals, with Hongkong taking 90 per cent of shelled groundnuts. Exports of wool through Tientsin amounted to 4 million kilogrammes only, as compared with 11.6 million kilogrammes in 1937 and 16.4 million kilogrammes in 1936. The export duty on all kinds of wool was reduced from 5 to 2½ per cent. The major decline occurred in sheep's wool, which fell from 10.5 million to under 3 million kilogrammes, shipments to the United States of America falling from 7 million to 60,000 kilogrammes. American carpet mills continued to be pathetic towards North China wool, while a virtual monopoly in the interior militated against other than Japanese and German interests. In spite of adverse conditions the export of woollen carpets and rugs fell off but slightly, being valued at $5.6 million as against $6.9 million in 1937. The abolition of the export duty on bristles, the fall in exchange, and the interruption of trade at other centres favoured the export of this commodity, of which 16,699 quintals were exported, the United States of America taking 9,511 quintals, Germany 3,176 quintals, and Great Britain 2,148 quintals. Cotton production turned out to be in excess of expectation, exports of raw cotton totalling 1,165,290 quintals valued at $86 million, as compared with 284,070 quintals only in 1937. As was to be expected, Japan took the lion's share of 824,335 quintals, followed by the Kwantung Leased Territory with 143,630 quintals. Next in order of importance followed the United States of America with 82,574 quintals, Korea with 64,049 quintals, and Germany with 35,997 quintals. The area under cotton cultivation in the province of Hopeh during 1938 was estimated to be 7,272,177 mow, with a total annual production of 1,813,990 piculs. Regulations promulgated by the "Provisional Government" on the 30th, November affect not only cotton exports to foreign countries but also those to places outside the area controlled by the "Provisional Government," while all exports must be accompanied by permits issued by the Ministry of Industry. Cultivation of raw cotton in North China on an enlarged scale is one of the foremost objectives of the Japanese authorities. Exports of salt to Japan totalled 3,431,300 quintals as against 1,994 quintals during the preceding year. The export of straw braid to France and the United States of America showed an improvement.

The total output of Kailan Mines was estimated to be 4,803,000 tons. With increasing demands from Japanese, the administration has decided to increase output from 5,500,000 to 6,500,000 tons. The increased production of coal is one of the ultimate objects of the Japanese authorities in North China, the operation of nearly all important coal mines, with the exception of the Kailan and Tatung Mines, being entrusted to the North China Development Company. Similarly with other industrial development, the North China Development Company is intended to take the leading role, being capitalised at Yen 350,000,000, of which Yen 175,000,000 is to be invested by the Japanese Government.

In 1938 Chinese and foreign flag vessels trading with Tientsin ran to a grand total of 5,570,559 tons as compared with 4,389,803 tons in 1937. Japanese vessels entering and clearing totalled 2,292, 607 tons, exceeding the figures for 1937 by nearly 1,000,000 tons, of which 2,085,832 tons represented direct vessels and 206,775 tons coastwise sailings. The British flag was relegated to second place, although total tonnage increased from 1,464,000 to 1,763,461 tons, of which 1,355,706 tons was coastwise. As was to be expected, Chinese tonnage fell from 818,635 to 287,296 tons.

TAKU

The village of Taku is of inconsiderable size and contains few shops and no buildings of interest. About a mile below the village in a direct line lie the Old Southern and Central Fort, while on the northern bank of the river lies the Northern Fort. All are completely demolished and now present the appearance of mounds of earth, though periodical whitewashing of the surface facing seaward makes them serve a useful modern purpose—an aid to navigation. The railway from the neighbouring town of Tangku, on the Northern Bank of the river, to Tientsin was completed in 1888.

Between the signal-station and Messrs. Butterfield & Swire wharf on the northern bank is situated "Cockle Village" so called because of the comparatively large industry for the boiling and drying of shellfish such as cockles, crabs, clams, etc., that is carried on there. When dried, these shellfish are exported by steamer to Shanghai and Canton principally, whence they are sent inland for consumption. This is Taku's greatest asset, as the country round about for some distance is covered with salt-pans and salt heaps, which render the country unfit for cultivation.

The lights and aids to navigation are under the control of the Maritime Customs as well as the up-to-date signal station, completed in 1920, to use 8′ symbols by day and electric light by night whereby depths in the bar-channel are recorded from ∞ feet up to 25 feet. The Hai-Ho Conservancy Commission maintain the navigable depth of the bar by means of a suction dredger with a self-contained hopper of 500 c.m. capacity. The navigable depth of the bar varies in accordance with the extent of the silt evacuated by the river after the freshet seasons. The existing channel has been greatly improved in recent years; but, as it was decided that it would never prove entirely successful owing to the set of the current, the Hai-Ho Conservancy Commission constructed a new bar channel in the direction of the set of the tide. The completion of this work in 1929, restored the Hai-Ho to a depth admitting the passage of coasting steamers from Tientsin, though unfortunately the construction of the new channel caused serious loss of life in the province.

There are no clearly defined anchorages but steamers arriving off the bar at low tide must anchor outside the bar while steamers from Tientsin proceeding to sea may anchor anywhere in the river clear of the shipping channel.

Taku is memorable on account of the engagements that have taken place between its forts and the British and French naval forces. The first attack was made on the 20th May, 1858, by the British squadron under Sir Michael Seymour, when the forts were passed and Lord Elgin proceeded to Tientsin, where on the 26th June he signed the famous Treaty of Tientsin. The second attack, which was fatally unsuccessful, was made by the British forces in June, 1859. The third took place on the 21st August, 1860, when the forts were attacked from the land side and captured, and the British ships sailed triumphantly up to Tientsin.

Taku and Tongku as naval bases have been very prominent int he history of China. In May, 1900, as the Boxer sedition came to a head, the European Powers assembled a large naval armament at Taku Bar. Sir Edward Seymour, K.C.B., as Senior Naval Officer, was in command. The Admirals were called upon to protect the Legations in Peking and the foreign Settlements of Tientsin, and in the second week of June naval landing parties were sent ashore by the six European Powers, the United States and Japan. Russia, however, sent to Port Arthur for troops and landed very few sailors.

During the week, June 10th to 16th, the general situation in Chihli became critical in the extreme, and it was a fine point to determine whether the Taku Forts commanding the entrance of the Peiho should be seized. It will probably be a contentious question to the end of time if the ultimatum sent in by the Allied Admirals to the Commander on Saturday, June 16th, to hand over the Forts before next morning, precipitated the crisis in Tientsin and Peking or not. The official people in general held that it did; many observers affirm that it made no difference, that the Imperial Government now captured by the Reactionaries was fully committed to the Boxer movement, and that the non-capture of the Forts would have involved the destruction of every foreigner and native Christian in North China. The admirals had to decide this fine point, and, with the exception of the American officer, they took the line of men of action. After a council of war they sent in the ultimatum that they would open fire at daybreak next day if the Forts were not surrendered. Mr. Johnson, of the Taku Tug and Lighter Company and a Chinese scholar, carrying his life in his hand, delivered the ultimatum. His services were never recognized by the British Authorities. The Commander referred the matter to Tientsin, and was ordered not only to resist but to take the initative. He did so by opening fire on the six gunboats lying in the Tongku reaches of the Peiho, about 2,000 yards in a bee-line above the forts (three miles by river). There is much general misapprehension about this brilliant feat of war. The Allied Fleet had nothing in the world to do with it, lying as it was 12 miles distant with a shallow 12-foot bar between it and the forts. The entire weight of the business fell on six little cockle-shells of gunboats the British Algerine, French Lion, German Iltis and the Russian Bobr, Gelek and Korietz—and two landing parties of British and Japanese numbering about 300 each. The residents of Taku village found refuge in the U. S. Monocacy, which, after getting a shell through her bows, steamed up the river out of range. Many refugees fleeing from Tientsin were on the merchant steamers at the wharves, and were under fire for some hours. The firing was somewhat wild during the darkness, but when dawn appeared, at 3.45, the gunboats, led at first by the Algerine and afterwards by the Iltis, steamed down the river and took up a position close under the N.-W. Fort. A single well-timed shell would have utterly destroyed any one of the six vessels, but Chinese gunnery was once more at fault. The naval guns soon mastered the heavy and modern weapons on the Forts, and before 5 a.m. the two landing parties had rushed the North-West Fort, and then proceeded along the causeway to the large North Fort at the river mouth. This was also escaladed and its great guns turned against the two fortifications on the South side of the river at close range. The whole affair was finished before 6 a.m.—a large number of Chinese dead testifying to the accuracy of the Allies' fire. Four Chinese torpedo-boat destroyers were captured with conspicuous bravery by the British torpedo-boat destroyers Whiting and Fame and distributed amongst the Allies. The demolition of the Forts was effected during 1901-2.

PEI-TAI-HO AND CHINWANGTAO

Peitaiho continues to expand. There are now five associations, namely, Rocky Point Association, East Cliff Association, Temple Bay Association, Lighthouse Point Assocaintion, and the Kung I Hui. An endeavour is being made to arrive at some kind of co-operation between these various sections, whose interests are common, The first desideratum is a Sanitary Department serving the whole district comprised in the term "Peitaiho Beach." The next necessity is to form some general advisory committee, obviating the necessity of so many diverse forms of control. Voluntary service will have to be replaced by expert advisers, and how to meet this expenditure is a matter for consultation between the four associations and the Kung I Hui. The Kung I Hui is a body of Chinese gentlemen mostly with large local interests: it is registered in the Ministry of Communications as a definite working organisation and has a legal and, to a certain extent, judicial status. It has expended large sums of money in making excellent roads, lined with trees, and intends to throw the whole of the Lotus Hills open as a public park.

Chinwangtao owes its existence as a seaport to the Chinese Engineeering and Mining Company, Ltd. (now amalagamated with the Lanchow Mining Company under the title of The Kailan Mining Administration). It serves primarily as a port of shipment for Kaiping coal.

Chinwangtao is situated on the western coast of the Gulf of Liao and is distant about 10 miles W.S.W. of Shanhaikwan. The breakwater and pier forming the harbour are so constructed that vessels may lie alongside at any state of the tide and in all weathers, discharging from or loading directly into railway cars, so that there is the minimum of handling and loss by breakage. The Administration owns large areas of land in the vicinity of the port. A good harbour, good water, electric light, and cheap coal offer exceptional inducements for industrial enterprises, and it is expected that there will be a great development in this direction.

The Port of Chinwangtao is accessible throughout the year, and as a seaside health resort Chinwangtao is almost without rival in China. It is easily accessible, has a dry and bracing climate, offers safe bathing from a sandy beach, has good golf links, and is situated amidst magnificent mountain scenery, while a Rest House and numerous summer bungalows afford the visitor every comfort. Extensive improvements in the port were made during 1929. A portion of the lagoon has been reclaimed for the extension of the coal-yard. A school for the benefit of the children of the Kailan Mining Administration's employees has been built, as well as additional quarters for the staff; and a new power-house to meet the requirements of the Yao Hua Glassworks, as well as those of the Administration, was completed towards the end of the year.

The Yao Hua Mechanical Glass Company have a glass factory at Chinwangtao. The establishment, which covers about 110 mou of land, is one of the largest of its kind in existence. The capital of the Company is $2,500,000.

Although the port of Chinwangtao was outside the zone of military operations, conditions in the surrounding district were not entirely peaceful owing to the activities of guerilla bands. The year, however, witnessed an all-round increase in the value of trade, an increase so conspicuous as to surpass anything in previous years. For this, three reasons may be adduced: firstly, the enforcement on the 22nd, January by the "Provisional Government" of a revised list of Import and Export Tariff rates and duty exemption privileges; secondly, the introduction as from the 1st, June of a tariff based on the 1931 Import Tariff; and thirdly, the cessation as from February of the wholesale or organised smuggling by steamers and small craft which had openly been carried on along the coast for some three years, this latter bringing again the bulk of trade into legitimate channels. These events were largely responsible for the considerable increase in the trade statistics of the port, which for the year were as follows: direct foreign imports, $23.8 million as compared with $3.7 million in 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese produce, $5.3 million as against $2.5 million; direct exports abroad, $28.7 million as against $11.4 million; and exports of Chinese produce to Chinese ports, $9 million as compared with $11.2 million.

The increase under direct foreign imports was principally due to large arrivals of metals, machinery, electrical materials and timber for the various mining administrations. The import of metals increased in value from $0.4 million to $1.5 million; of electrical materials, from $111,000 to $254,000; of machinery, all kinds, from $100,000 to $682,000; and of timber, from $0.7 million to $2.6 million, the last item consisting chiefly of pit-props for the Kailan Mining Administration and wooden planks for the Yao Hua Glass Company for box-making purposes. The value of artificial silk piece-goods, all reshipped by rail to Tientsin, was $1.7 million, while the import of sulphate of ammonia amounted to 37,396 quintals, with increased imports also of white sugar and matches. Railway materials, chiefly imported by the Kailan Mining Administration, were valued at $883,266 as against $938,659. The import of beans and peas from Dairen and Manchuria amounted to 137,814 quintals valued at $1.1 million, with the value of pig bristles imported from Manchuria through Shanhaikwan amounting to $0.3 million. The import of cereals, chiefly maize, millet and kaoliang, totalled 1,365,090 quintals and was valued at $9.7 million, with wheat flour from Dairen and Manchurian ports totalling 44,562 quintals as against 18,194 quintals during the preceding year.

Exports of coal increased from 2.9 million to 3.1 million metric tons, of which 1,949,861 tons were exported abroad, mostly to Japan and Korea. The total output of the Kailan Mining Administration during the year was approximately 4.8 million metric tons, and it is expected that the output will reach some 7 million metric tons in the not far distant future. It is moreover, expected that the quality of the coal will be greatly improved through the imminent erection of two large washing plants at Tangshan and Linsi. The Chang Cheng Coal Mining Company, now a Sino-Japanese concern, after being closed since 1925, is being repened, its narrow-gauge railway from Chinwangtao to its mines at Shihling, a distance of some 26 kilometres, having been entirely reconstructed. An output of some 150,000 metric tons is expected in 1939 and double that quantity in 1940. The Tai Chi Coal Mining Company, a Sino-Japanese concern, has been operating the Liuchang mines since 1935 Shipments during the year amounted to 140,000 metric tons. Owing to overstocking the Yao Hua Glass Company suspended operations on the 1st, October, but work is expected to be resumed by March, 1939. Exports other than coal included groundnuts, in shell and shelled, of which 69,753 quintals were exported abroad as compared with 67,943 quintals in 1937. Coastwise shipments of groundnuts totalled 7,029 quintals as against 1,147 quintals. Crops for the year are said to have been reduced by some 20 per cent. Bricks, tiles and fireclay shipped abroad and coastwise were valued at $747,957 as against $265,909, much of the increase being due to heavy exportations of fireclay stone to Japan, Dairen and Hongkong, which amounted in value to $545,622. Raw cotton for Dairen amounted to 14,824 quintals valued at $732,810, while $26,225 worth of window glass (other than common) was exported to Hongkong, Penang and Singapore, with $86,888 worth being shipped to Shanghai and Chefoo. Export of medicinal substances to Manchurian ports and thence to Korea were valued at $690,339.

As regards currency, the public were compelled to accept at par, notes of the Bank of Hopeh and the Bank of Chitung, while on the formation of the Federated Reserve Bank on the 10th, March the latter's notes were put into circulation. Following the discounting by 10 per cent of the notes of the Bank of China, the Bank of Communications, and the Central Bank of China, notes of the Federated Reserve Bank were practically the only notes met with.

The number of vessels entered and cleared during the year, excluding junks, military transports, etc., was 1,669 with an aggregate tonnage of 3,525,929, as against 1,313 vessels with a total tonnage of 2,817,063 during 1937. The British flag took foremost place as in the preceding year.

NEWCHWANG

(JAPANESE: EIKŌ)

Newchwang, in latitude 40 deg. 37 min. 37 sec. N., longitude 122 deg. 10 min. 23 sec. E., or 38 miles from the Newchwang Lightship was opened to foreign trade in May, 1864, and was for more than 40 years the only Treaty port in Manchuria, now known as Manchoukuo, which comprises the four Provinces formerly known as Fengtien, Kirin, Heilungkiang and Jehol Manchuria was commonly called by the Chinese the "Tung San Sheng," or the Three Eastern Provinces. Manchoukuo is now divided into the 14 provinces of Heiho, Lungkiang, Sankiang, Pinkiang, Chientao, Kirin, Fengtien, Antung, Chinchow, Jehol, and North, South, East and West Hsingan. Newchwang is situated in the south of Fengtien province and lies about 13 miles from the mouth of the Liao River, which empties into the Gulf of Liaotung, a continuation of the Gulf of Pohai. The proper name of the port is Yingkou, and not Newchwang, which is actually situated 90 li (30 miles) further up the river. The old town of Newchwang was designed by Treaty to be opened to trade, but the first foreigners, finding Yingkow more conveniently situated and more adapted in very respect for the purposes of trade, quietly installed themselves there and got over the difficulty by the simple process of changing the name of Yingkow into that of Newchwang.

The country in the immediate vicinity of the port is flat and unpicturesque in the extreme, and the town itself has nothing in the way of attractions for the traveller. The climate, from the foreigner's point of view, is one of the best in China, the summers being comparatively cool, while the winters are cold and bracing. The hottest summer temperature rarely exceeds 90° (Fahr.), but cold blasts from the North pull down the "mercury" in winter months often to 6° and 10° below zero (Fahr.). The river is generally frozen over for three months of the year, but navigation is practically suspended for four months, from December to the following March. Formerly Newchwang was shut off from the rest of the world during winter, but the advent of railways has changed all this. The Manchukuo State Railways through their branch line from Koupangtzu, maintain daily communication with Tientsin, Peiping and Mukden; and the South Manchurian Railway, through its branch line from Tashihchiao, maintains daily communication with Dairen, Port Arthur, Mukden, Tiehling, Hsinking and Harbin where a connection can be made with the Trans-Siberian Railway to Europe

The principal trade of Newchwang is the export of beans and bean-cakes, but this is at present far from flourishing. The town contains many factories—textiles, matches, paper, etc.

The foreign (non-Japanese) population is now very small.

MANCHURIAN TRADE CENTRES

In addition to Mukden, the Treaties made with China in 1903 by the United States and Japan secured the opening of Antung and Tatungkow in Manchuria. By an additional agreement made between China and Japan in December, 1905, the following inland places in Manchuria were opened to trade on the dates specified :—September 10th, 1906, Tieh-ling, Tung-chiang-tzu and Fakumen; on October 8th, Hsin-min Fu; on December 17th, Manchuli, Harbin, Ch'ang-ch'un (K'uan-ch'êng-tzu) and Kirin; on December 19th, Tsitsihar (Pu-k'uei), the capital of the northern province of Hei-lung-chiang; and on June 18th, 1907, the remaining seven places—Fêng-huang-ch'êng (T'ing) Liao-yang, Ninguta, Hun-ch'un, Sansing, Hailar and Aigun—were declared open as a preliminary step prior to the adoption of special settlement regulations. Only at Mukden and Harbin are Foreign Consulates, other than Japanese, established.

On March 9, 1932, a new "State of Manchukuo" was established at Hsinking (formerly Changchun), the new Capital, as an independent Republic, under the rulership of P'u I, the ex-Emperor of China, dethroned by the Chinese Revolution of 1911, and the latter was enthroned as the Emperor Kang-tê on March 1, 1934.

Japan, San Salvador, Italy, Germany and Nationalist Spain have accorded recognition to the new State.

MUKDEN

天 奉 Fêng-t'ien

(JAPANESE: HŌTEN)

Mukden, is the capital of the province of Fêng-t'ien (天 奉). It was the ancient seat of the last dynasty of China. Though nominally opened to international residence and trade by the Commercial Treaties concluded by the United Statesand Japan with China in 1903, it was not really opened until 1906, for in the Russo-Japanese war the city became one of the strongholds of the Russian forces, from which, however, they were eventually driven by the advancing Japanese army after one of the most decisive battles of those times. When peace was concluded and the troops were withdrawn the trade possibilities of the province began to receive increased attention. The principal trade of Mukden has been in grain, such as beans and millet; there is, also, a considerable trade in skins, furs and bristles. The chief imports are Japanese and European textiles, hardware, cigarettes, sugar and kerosene oil. Since 1932 the Japanese have started many industries, among which may be mentioned the manufacture of machines, machine tools, paints, dyes, pencils, sauces, beer, confectionery, leather goods and cotton spinning. The Chi Tung Tobacco Co. and the Toa Tobacco Co. maintained cigarette factories in the International Settlement. Minerals and metals are mined and smelted in the neighbourhood of Mukden. Rice-farming, also, is on the increase, there being some 10,000 acres under cultivation in the Mukden and Sinmin districts, Other crops grown in the neighbourhood are cotton, millet, Kaoliang and groundnut.

Mukden is situated in slightly undulating country a few miles north of the Hunho, a tributary of the river Liao, about 250 miles north of Dairen, and is the junction for lines radiating to Dairen, Shanhaikwan, Harbin and Antung. The Chinese city stands four square, each side being 2,334 li long but it is not absolutely north and south. It is walled. The inner town, which is nearly a mile square. is protected by a stone wall 35 feet high and 15 feet wide on the top, pierced by eight gates, two on each side, which formerly had high towers above them, but only the one over the "Little West Gate" now remains, and the inner face of the wall is greatly dilapidated. A smaller wall encloses the ancient palace, which stands in the centre of the inner city, like the palace at Peiping. There are four main streets, which cross east and west, north and south, from gate to gate. Adjoining the station of the South Manchuria, Railway is the former Japanese Railway Settlement which was taken over from the Russians after the war. The total area of this Settlement was over 2,000 acres, and it has been developed of late years into a town of spacious squares and wide streets. East of the Japanese Settlement is the Settlement formerly set aside for the foreign residential and business quarter. Throughout the city a great deal of building has been going on during recent years and the main roads have been macadamized. Actually miles of new houses—good-looking red-brick structures—are springing up, and the Railway Settlement is now linked up with the Chinese business quarter. The North Eastern University, occupying a site to the south-east of the Imperial North Tomb was completed and opened in 1926 but has remained closed since the 1931 incident. Important shops and banks are situated both in the Japanese Railway Settlement and between that Settlement and the walled city. The streets and shops are lighted by electricity, the use of whcih has spread with remarkable rapidity. The Mukden Electric Light Works completed in 1930 the installation of a new 2,500 k.w. plant, which practically doubled its capacity and further additions have since been made. On December 1st, 1920, a long-distance Japanese telephone service was inaugurated between Mukden, Antung and Hsinking and there is now a service between Mukden and Peiping and Mukden and Harbin. Air services are maintained with other parts of the country and are connected services to Japan. The estimated total population in August 1937 was about 600,000, and is rapidly growing.

With improved roads within the city, motor traffic has made tremendous strides during the last year or two.

Nurhachu, the founder of the Manchu dynasty, established himself at Mukden in 1625, and his tomb (the Tungling, Eastern tomb), about seven miles east of the city, is an object of great interest. The great mound and funeral hall are enclosed within a high wall pierced by one large gateway which holds three arched portals, and the avenue of approach is spanned by two lofty stone arches elaborately sculptured. Two massive couchant lions guard the portal. Nurhachu's son is buried at the Peiling (Northern tomb), about four miles to the north of the city. Both the tombs can be reached by motor car from Mukden. The tomb is similar in arrangement to the Tungling. There are many other objects of Manchu historical interest in the town and its vicinity. Mukden possesses good but limited hotel accommodation for foreign visitors. The large Yamato Hotel, built by the South Manchuria Railway, was opened in the Spring of 1929. A new 18 hole golf course was opened in 1938 near Tungling.

HARBIN

Harbin is the principal commercial centre of North Manchuria. Its rise to importance dates from the construction, with Russian capital, of the Chinese Eastern Railway in 1897. It is situated on the right bank of the Sungari, an affluent of the Amur, and consists of Fu Chia Tien, a Chinese quarter (the original settlement on the site), "Pristan" the principal business quarter (originally so called from its proximity to the "landing stage" for Sungari river steamers), and New Town which is a residential quarter containing most of the administrative offices and foreign consulates. The total population at the last census was 458,519, of which figure White Russians number 26,000, Japanese 26,347.

After a chequered history of Tsarist Russian and, from 1924 onwards, joint Sino-Soviet administration, the Chinese Eastern Railway finally passed into Manchoukuo ownership in 1935, the U.S.S.R. Government having sold their share, and was re-named the North Manchurian Railway. During 1936 the line was converted from the old Russian 5' gauge to standard gauge. It connects Harbin with Manchouli (935 km.) on the north-west frontier where connection is made with the Trans-Siberian Railway, and with Suifenho (547 km.) on the south east. To the south the North Manchuria Railway connects at Hsinking, the capital of Manchoukuo, with the South Manchuria Railway line to Dairen (944 km.) which until recently was almost the sole outlet for the export of North Manchurian produce. With the rapid construction of railways following the Japanese occupation in the 1931-1932, the growing ports of Rashin and Seishin on the north east coast of Korea, which are connected with Harbin by the Harbin-Lafa and Mutanchiang-Tumen lines, have taken an increasing share in exports. The areas to the north of Harbin are now tapped by the Harbin-Heiho line (638 km.) and the Mutanchiang-Chiamussu line (331 km.).

By far the most important product of North Manchuria is the soya bean, vast quantities of which are exported annually. Other products of the district are kaoliang, maize, millet, wheat, and animal products such as hides, bristles, furs, wool, frozen game birds, etc.

As regards administration, Harbin is an ordinary municipality subject to the Pinchiang Provincial Government, having lost the status of "Special Municipality" which it had enjoyed from 1933 to 1937. The municipal services are fairly efficient. Roads outside the city however are impassable except in the winter, which is long and severe. The summer is short and comparatively humid. The Sungari river is ice-free from April to October and carries fairly heavy traffic between Harbin and down-river towns.

CHANGCHUN

春長 Ch'ang ch'un or Kwanchengtze

This town owes its recent importance to the fact that it is situated at the junction of the South Manchuria Railway (Japanese) with the southern branch (from Harbin) of the Chinese Eastern Railway, while another Railway connects it with the city of Kirin, the capital of the Province of that name, about 80 miles, distant, nearly due East, and beyond to Tunhua.

Changchun was opened to International Trade by Agreement with Japan in 1915. There is here a large Japanese Railway Settlement, admirably laid out, north of the old Town, from which it is separated by the area laid out by the Chinese Authorities as a commercial quarter. North of the Japanese Railway Settlement lies the town that has grown up around what is now the southern terminus of the Chinese Eastern Railway

The country surrounding Changchun is a vast and exceedingly fertile plain, the produce from which is distributed North, South and East by the divergent Railways

Since March 9, 1932, Changchun has been the Capital of the new State of Manchuria (or "Manchoukuo"), recognition of which has not yet been accorded by any foreign country, with the exception of San Salvador; and the name of the town has been changed to Hsinking ("New Capital.")

Plans have been mooted for elaborate extensions of the existing town, to be laid out in a style befitting the Capital of an independent Republic of some 30,000,000 people.

KIRIN

(Kirin is the Manchu Name of the City)

Kirin, the capital of the province of the same name on the Sungari river, is 80 miles from Hsin King with which it is connected by railway. It is one of the most prosperous towns in Manchuria, and, having been rebuilt after a disastrous fire in 1911, possesses many fine buildings. It is the distributing centre for the inexhaustible supplies of timber from the neighbouring regions. The railway from Hsinking, through Kirin, due East, to the new Port of Rashin on the Sea of Japan, is now completed, and through trains run daily, connecting up with steamers for Japan.

Through trains also run south from Kirin, via Hailung and Mukden to Shanhaikuan, en route to Tientsin and Peiping.

A new town is now springing up, outside the old city, with fine roads and modern buildings.

North Kirin is to become an industrial area. A new bridge is being built across the Sungari, in order to develop the area south of the river as a residential district. A few miles up the river a large hydro-electric plant is being installed.

LUNGCHINGTSUN

村井龍 Lung-ching-tsun

Lungchingtsun (Dragon Well Village), has a population of about 15,000 inhabitants composed of about 11,000 Koreans, 3,000 Chinese, and 1,000 Japanese. Situated in a fertile plain, its main exports are: beans, millet and timber. There are promising mining possibilities (coal, copper, silver, and gold) waiting development. The trade—by light railway to Kainei—is with Korea and Japan. The principal imports are cotton piece goods, sugar, Japanese sundries, paper, kerosene oil, metals, fishery

Telephone and telegraph line, in addition to the Chinese telegraph and telephone lines, connect Lungchingtsun with the neighbouring marts of Yenki, Towtaokow and Hunchun. A handsome new building for the Bank of Chosen was completed in 1923, and a particularly fine new Japanese Consulate in 1925.

HUNCHUN

春 琿 Hun-chun

Hunchun is derived from Manchu, meaning frontier, and is situated in lat. 24 deg. 25 min. 5 sec. N., long. 130 deg. 22 min. 10 sec. E. of Greenwich, on the right bank of the Hung Ch'i Ho, some 35 li from the Manchukuo-Russian frontier and about 90 li distant from Novokiewsk. In 1714 a detachment of soldiers came here from Ninguta, and this may be regarded as the beginning of Hunchun, which was to be opened to trade, by treaty with Japan (Manchurian Convention), in 1905, but the Customs staff did not arrive before December, 1909. Towards the end of 1921 an electric light plant was installed in the town by a Chinese concern. The surrounding districts are fairly fertile, and the mining possibilities (coal and gold) may, when taken in hand, prove of considerable value.

The town (earthen walled) has a population of 7,774 Manchu in addition to whom are 8,622 (September 1938) Japanese and Chosens. The main exports are beans, timber and bean-cakes; and the main imports are flour wheat, cotton piece-goods, machinery, petrol and spirits of wine. (Value of trade in 1937: $5,364,740.00). The light railway (Hunchun to Kunju, Chosen line) was operated from November 1, 1935, and the railway of the same line will be ready for operation on the next spring. Rapid progress is being made in the modernisation of the town of Hunchun.

PORT ARTHUR

順 旅 Lu-shun (Ryojun)

Port Arthur, at the point of the "Regent's Sword," or Liaotung Peninsula, was formerly China's chief naval arsenal, but was captured by the Japanese in the war with China in 1894, and its defences and military works were destroyed. In 1898, when Russia obtained a lease of Port Arthur and Talienwan, she fortified the former, making it into a great naval and military stronghold.

By the time the war between Russia and Japan broke out, an anchorage for battleships had been provided at great cost in the western harbour, and the hills surrounding the herbour had been so strongly fortified that Port Arthur had come to be regarded as an impregnable fortress. In May, 1904, Port Arthur was besieged by the Japanese force, under General Nogi, and capitulated on January 1st, 1905, after ropeated conflicts of a most sanguinary character.

Port Arthur (called by the Japanese Ryojun) is now a centre of civil administration in the Kwantung Leased Territory. The town is divided into two parts, the old and the new. The old or east part is a business town existing from the Chinese régime, and the Ryojun minor naval depot, Government Hospital, captured arms museum, the fortress commander's office, local civil government office, and the high and district courts are located there. The new or west part was a poor village when the Russians entered into occupation. They erected there many fine buildings; among them being the present Kwantung Government Office, Government Museum, the Middle School and Higher School for Girls, Engineering University and the Yamato Hotel, etc. As a memorial to the Japanese soldiers who fell in the assult of Port Arthur, on monument Hill (called Haku-Gyoku-san), which command the harbour, a high tower was erected at the suggestion of Admiral Togo and General Nogi. The climate is bracing, and though the winter from December to February is cold the harbour is free from ice. March; April and May are lovely months as the surrouding hills and fields are covered with verdure and flowers. June, July and August constitute the wet season and are rather warm, though not so warm as other cities in Manchuria, as the sea-breezes temper the heat. The rain is not sufficient to inconvenience travellers much, and in fact Port Arthur at this time of year attracts may visitors, who enjoy the sea-bathing under the famous Golden Hill, on which a nmber of foreign houses have been built by the South Manchuria Railway Co., and may be rented. September, October and November form a perfect autumn with mild climate, and there are abundant supplies of fresh fruit and fish. On July 1st, 1910, the Western Harbour was thrown open to the ships of all nations with a view to fostering international trade.

The Port Arthur—Dairen coast road, bordering the southern coast of the Liaotung Peninsula, along which a bus line runs, enabling passengers to admire the changing scenery of the wooded hills on one side and the turquoise sea on the other affords the most charming drive in Manchuria.

There is a branch line of the South Manchurian Railway, and through the junction station (Ch'ou Shui) several trains run daily between Port Arthur and Dairen. The journey occupies only one hour and a half by train. Drainage and waterworks have been constructed and the place is well lighted with electric light.

The population of the city of Port Arthur according to the census of 31st July, 1936, was 31,059.

ANTUNG

東安 An-tung

The treaty port of Antung was opened to international trade by the Commercial Treaty between the United States and China in 1903, but, owing to the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war, it was not till the Spring of the year 1907 that the Chinese Maritime Customs was established here. However, in 1931, the Chinese Maritime Customs was forcibly closed by Japan, and a new one, under the name of Manchukuo Customs was established. Antung is situated on the right or Chinese bank of the Yalu River, 23 miles from its mouth. The river is closed to navigation by ice from about the end of November to the end of March. New buildings are going up on all sides both for dwelling and industrial purposes. The Yalu battlefield is some 10 miles further up the river and a splendid panorama of the surrounding country, may be obtained from the summit of Tiger Hill, which was the position occupied by the Russians before the battle. Wulungpei, 14 miles distant from Antung, is a favourite resort on account of its hot springs. Antung is connected by railway with Mukden. The splendid steel bridge, 3,097 feet long and consisting of 12 spans, including a swivel-span, over the Yalu, from Antung to New Wiju (on the Korean side), connecting the South Manchurian Railway with the Chosen (Korean) Railways, was opened to traffic on 1st November, 1911. The river at Antung is navigable for steamers drawing 12 feet of water when the tides are favourable, but the channel is a constantly shifting one and erosion and silting often interfere seriously with navigation. Attempts to dredge the channel in the years 1913 and 1914 were not successful and were discontinued. With a view to better control of navigation, fresh charts and future conservancy operations, a survey was started by the Hydrographic Bureau of the Japanese Navy in the spring of 1921, and subsequently undertaken on a larger scale by the Marine Department of the Chinese Maritime Customs during the summer and autumn. In September, 1922, the survey was completed and soundings were taken from the sea to Antung. There are several small Japanese steamers plying between Antung, Chefoo and Dairen, and as trade with Tientsin has developed considerably a regular and frequent service with that port is carried on by larger vessels of from 700 to 1,200 tons. The larger ships in the China Coast trade anchor at Santaolangtou, six miles down river, and there are other anchorages at Wentzuchien, 14 miles down river, and at Tatungkow.

DAIREN

Dairen, the southern terminus of the South Manchuria Railway, is a commercial port in the Kwangtung Leased Territory, which forms the southern extremity of the Liaotung Peninsula, Lat. 38° 55′ 44″ N. and Long. 121° 37′ 7″ E. When Russia leased the place in 1898 it was only an inconsiderable fishing village. Russia intended to develop Dairen as a commercial port and had made some progress when the Russo-Japanese war broke out. But what the Japanese inherited was a mere nucleus of the present city, namely the section north of the railway tracks which to-day forms but a small corner of the city. South of the tracks, where the main part of present-day Dairen stands, was but an area of rough ground, with hills and ponds, which required a vast amount of grading and filling. The plans the Russians formed were gradually much improved upon, and the Japanese, by dint of great exertions, have brought a thoroughly western civilization here on a scale far more comprehensive than anything that has been accomplished in any other part of China. The health of the locality is exceptionally good. The highest temperature registered in summer is 35° 7′ C. (96° 3′ F.), and the cold winter season is rather long but invigorating

Dairen has a population of 543,000, over two-thirds of which is Chinese. The city of Dairen, not including the suburbs, has an area of 11,266 acres. The authorities recently completed a plan whereby the city will be enlarged so as to enable a million people to reside there. Electric tramways, of a total length of 66 kilometres, run along the principal streets, and include a suburban line to Shakako (where the South Manchuria Railway workshops are established, 4.5 miles westwards from Dairen), and one of 2.5 miles to Hoshigaura (Star Beach), the finest watering place in Manchuria. There is an excellent hotel here, managed by the South Manchuria Railway Company and also a number of bungalows which may be hired by visitors. Another suburban line runs to Rokotan, a famous summer resort commanding glorious scenery. A motor road runs to Star Beach, which is a tract of land of 392 acres including the golf links, which are approximately 122 acres. The construction of the South Coast road, 49.2 kilometres in length, connecting Dairen and Port Arthur was commenced in 1921 on three sections simultaneously, and was completed in July, 1924. The motor road between Dairen and Chinchow was completed in 1929, and motor buses run regularly. In 1932 a new North Coast road between Port Arthur and Choushuitzu (on the Dairen-Chinchow road) was opened. There are also regular bus services between Port Arthur and Dairen. The Japan Air Transport Company inaugurated a daily mail service between Dairen and Japan on April 1, 1929, and from September onwards a passenger service was added. The daily air service between Dairen and Hsinking has been opened by the Manchuria Air Transport Company since November 3, 1932, and service between Dairen and Tientsin and Peking was put into operation in 1937.

The city of Dairen, which has been expanding rapidly owing to business prosperity and increase of population, is lighted by electricity and gas and has ample telephone facilities. The electric power-house, when completed in 1911, had a capacity of 4,500 kilowatts. This was increased in 1921 to 6,000 kws., and a second power-house of 10,000 kws. was added in June, 1923. This was increased to 48,000 kilowatts by 1932. There is also a power station at Kanseishi (across the bay from Dairen proper) of 54,000 KW. completed in 1934. The city has tar macadam roads with rows of shady trees, and is well equipped with waterworks, drainage and sewage systems. With the growth of trade, more particularly in Manchurian (soya) beans, cake, a number of influential business houses, Japanese, Chinese and foreign, have established themselves at the port. The foreign and Japanese communities in April, 1909, organized and opened the Dairen Club. A Gun Club, Golf Club, and Marine Association are among other institutions of the port. Of places for public amusement, the Komura Park, designed on an up-to-date plan and containing all devices for recreation, forms the chief attraction. The Chinese quarter, situated on the western fringe of the city, has also grown considerably. The Railway Hospital (now called the "Dairen Hospital") deserves special mention, owing partly to its size and partly to the excellence of its equipment. This hospital affords accommodation for 612 patients and treats more than 1,600 out-patients of all nationalities on an average every day.

In 1928 a stadium was constructed with seating accommodation for over 50,000. Adjoining the stadium is a large concrete fresh water swimming pool, one of several in Dairen used mainly by students. Several parks are scattered throughout the city.

The harbour works had been less than half completed by the Russians. Some work had been done on the eastern half, and only some blocks dumped for the eastern breakwater. Only two wharves had been completed; the depth of the harbour ranging from 17 to 28 feet, with only 18 feet of water at the main wharf basin. Since the Japanese occupation, the S.M.R. Co. has done much in the extension of harbour facilities and their actual management, introducing every modern appliance for speedy and commodious cargo handling and watering and coaling of vessels. To-day the combined length of the breakwaters is 13,436 feet, and they are 3 to 5 feet above the highest tide. The deep water area inside the breakwater is 3,107,000 square metres. The entrance being very open, viz., 1,200 feet wide, the harbour is accessible to vessels of deep draught at any time of day or state of tide. The total seafrontage of the first, second and third wharves is 14,296 feet, and of the fourth wharf (4,600 feet) more than 300 metres have already been opened, increasing the total number of berths to 39. The extension of Pier 4 to the same dimension as the others is making rapid progress. When it is completed there will be 52 berths of which 42 can accommodate ocean-going ships. There are also the two dangerous goods'' piers at Jijiko, outside the main harbour, and another new pier at Kanseishi to serve the Manchuria Chemical Industry Co's factory. In order still further to lessen congestion at the wharves, a new pier was constructed at Kanseishi, which attends exclusively to the export of Fushun coal. The wharves containing 330,699 square metres, with railway sidings, are lighted by electricity and have up-to-date appliances for the handling of cargo. At the east end of the shore, an oil pier, 558 long with a depth of 30 feet of water has been constructed for the purpose of discharging inflammable goods and bean oil in bulk. The warehouse area was 397,500 square metres, besides six bean oil tanks

(each holding capacity of 1,435 tons). The waiting pavilion, which cost Yen 700,000 and can accommodate 5,000 persons, was completed by the S.M.R. Co., in January, 1924. The O.S.K. Company maintains a ticket office and the Bank of Chosen has an Exchange Office in this pavilion, which also contain showrooms, dining rooms, stalls for the sale of goods, etc. On the islands of Sanshantao, at the entrance to Dairen Bay, stands a lighhouse, and two other lighthouses have been erected at the northern extremity of the east breakwater and at the eastern extremity of the north breakwater, respectively. On the signal tower of the former breakwater and on the islands of Sanshantao foghorns have also been fixed. A wireless telegraph station is established at Takushan, 30 miles from the harbour, and a wireless telegraph station of 35 wk. power at Liushutun was completed in 1922. There is a granite dry dock 440 ft. 6 in. long and 51 feet wide at entrance, with extensive repair shops attached, leased and managed by the Manchuria Dock Yard Co., Ltd. A marine quarantine station, built at a cost of Yen 430,000 was opened in November, 1913. It is scientifically designed and equipped on the latest and most approved lines with accommodation for both foreign and Chinese passengers.

The whole trade of Dairen for the year 1937 (January-December):

Exports:	Y 451,000,000
Imports:	Y 680,000,000
Total	Y 1,131,000,000

Out of a total of all Manchuria of 1,532,000,000 Manchoukuo Yuan; the Manchoukuo Yuan being equivalent to the Japanese Yen and to about 1s. 2d.

罘之 Chi-fu 臺烟 Yen-tai

Chefoo, in the Province of Shantung, is the name used by foreigners to denote this Treaty Port; the Chinese name of the place is Yentai, and Chefoo proper is on the opposite side of the harbour. Chefoo is situated in latitude 37° 33′ 20″ N. and longitude 121° 25′ 20″ E. The port was opened to foreign trade in 1863. In 1876 the Chefoo Convention was concluded at Chefoo by the late Sir Thomas Wade and the former Viceroy of Chihli, Li Hung-chang. The normal foreign population of Chefoo is about 1,000, while the Chinese population is about 100,000. Chefoo has no Settlement, or Concessions, but a recognized Foreign Quarter, which is well kept and has good clean roads, and is well lighted. From the early days of the port a foreign "Road Committee" administered the Municipal affairs of the Foreign Quarter being succeeded in 1910 by an International Committee of six foreigners and six Chinese. The International Committee was however wound up in 1930 and the Foreign Quarter is now administered by the Chinese Authorities in the same way as the rest of the town. There is a good club. There are two good hotels and several excellent boarding houses, all of which are full of visitors from July to the end of September. The climate is bracing. The winter, which is severe, lasts from the beginning of December to the end of March; April, May and June are lovely months and not hot; July and August are hot and rainy months; and September, October and November form a most perfect autumn with warm days, cool winds and cold nights. Strong northerly gales are experienced in the late autumn and through the winter, and the roadstead gives but an uncomfortable, though safe anchorage for steamers. In 1909 nearly two months were lost to trade through stress of weather. The Netherlands Harbour Works Co. started the construction of a breakwater in 1915. Further harbour improvement works were completed in 1921, the new breakwater, mole and quay being formally inaugurated on September 14th, 1921. The breakwater is 2,600 feet long, the height from the base of the foundation mound to the top of the parapet is 51½ feet, and the width of the base of the foundation mound ranges from 117 feet to 133 feet. A railway track has been laid over the mole. In 1933 Chefoo was made a Special Area by the Provincial authorities, and the City limits now include a number of surrounding towns and villages. The population of this Special Area is estimated at 230,000.

The Chefoo-Wehsien motor road was opened to traffic in 1923 and a regular and express service of cars operate daily between Chefoo and Wehsien, connecting at the latter port with the Kiao-tsi Railway. During the past several years, additional motor roads have been opened throughout the province and practically all important towns are now connected by road with Chefoo, including Tsingtao and Weihaiwei. None of the roads are metalled, as it has been found impracticable to adopt this surfacing but, generally speaking, they are kept in first class condition, and due to the long periods of dry weather in Chefoo the earth surfacing thereof has proved eminently satisfactory for conditions in Shantung. However, after heavy rains the roads are unusable for a period of from twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

Amongst the main exports of Chefoo are Pongee Silks, Silk Waste, Vermicelli, Ground Nuts, Fruit, Hair Nets, Handmade Laces and Embroideries, and there are also considerable exports of locally distilled wine. Amongst other industries is the Chefoo Brewery and several Clock factories which enjoy a brisk business with all China ports, as well as with the Straits and Java. The port was connected in 1900 by telegraph cables with Tientsin, Port Arthur, Weihaiwei, Tsingtao and Shanghai, in addition to telegraph land lines with all large interior cities.

After a period of anxiety the port of Chefoo was occupied on the 3rd February 1938 by combined forces of the Japanese army and navy, and while, owing to the activity of irregular troops, or so-called mobile units, the port remained partly isolated from the hinterland, the sea route remained open during the year. A revised list of Import and Export Tariff rates and duty exemptions was enforced by the "Provisional Government of North China" from the 13th March, and a revised Import Tariff, based on the Tariff of 1931, by the "Reformed Government" from the 1st June. The trade statistics of the port according to value were as follows: direct foreign imports, $13.4 million as compared with $5.8 million during 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese goods, $28.9 million as against $18.1 million; direct exports to foreign countries, $15.1 million as against $12.3 million; and coastwise exportations of Chinese produce, $24.8 million as compared with $13.4 million.

The increase in value under the heading of direct foreign imports was in large measure accounted for by the fact that imports of Manchurian produce hitherto treated as domestic imports were during the year classified as of foreign origin. For instance, following the introduction in March of reduced tariff rates, the importation of beans from Manchuria became an important factor in direct foreign trade, 298,996 quintals being imported under this heading in 1938 as against 53,629 quintals and 176,849 quintals recorded in 1937 and 1936 as domestic imports. In this connexion it is of interest to note that during 1938 197,896 quintals of beancake and 22,785 quintals of bean oil were exported to other ports as against 971 quintals and 578 quintals in 1937 and 67 quintals and 991 quintals in 1936 respectively, from which it will be seen that imports of beans during 1936 and 1937 were largely for local consumption, while those imported during 1938 were chiefly converted into beancake and bean oil for shipment to South China. While the import of linen for embroidery declined from 707,617 to 321,138 metres. Imports of penelope canvas increased from 148,685 to 194,677 metres. Great Britain and Germany remained the principal suppliers of linen, Germany also being one of the leading importers of penelope canvas. Import of refined sugar showed a marked increase during the year from 15,372 to 34,004 quintals, import from Hongkong totalling 26,652 quintals and from Japan 6,819 quintals. Artificial silk yarn imports declined from 2,586 kilogrammes in 1937 to 2,064 kilogrammes as compared with 28,506 kilogrammes in 1936 and 124,886 kilogrammes in 1935. While the sharp decline in 1937 was attributed to smuggling activities, the slump in this trade during 1938 was largely due to the interruption of normal communications with the interior. Imports of Korean ginseng also declined, aggregating only 1,606 hectogrammes as against 114,861 hectogrammes in 1937, due to unsettled conditions in South China and the Yangtze ports which are the sole markets for this commodity. In view of the fact that supplies of fuel to the interior were prohibited for many months and that trucks and buses in many cases suspended their regular services, it might have been assumed that import of petroleum products would have declined heavily all round. The statistical records, on the contrary, fail to support this assumption. Though gasolene and liquid fuel did show a sharp decline from 478,075 litres and 3,605 metric tons in 1937 to 125,227 litres and 1,402 metric tons in 1938, there was an increased import of lubricating oil from 456,155 to 513,264 litres, while kerosene oil imports maintained the level of the previous year, being 992,198 litres as against 1,073,690 litres in 1937. Importations of lubricating oil from Japan and of kerosene oil from the United States of America remained fairly steady, but it is noteworthy that the supply of gasolene from Japan during 1938 amounted to 113,718 litres as against 266 litres in 1937 and 76 litres in 1936. There was a noticeable decline in the importation of metals and machinery and in such construction materials as galvanized iron sheets, timber and cement due to the suspension of construction work in Chefoo and environs.

Under coastwise importations the statistics are subject to certain change in interruption, all import from Manchuria, as already pointed out, being treated as of foreign origin since the revision of tariff rates in February, whereas prior thereto such commodities as beans, peas, beancakes, etc., were recorded as native imports, accordingly the undermentioned coastwise imports represent only those from other ports in China. Among these, sugar of all kinds reached 60,774 quintals, surpassing previous records. Native cotton piece-goods, cotton socks and stockings and cotton yarn advanced respectively from 25,980 quintals, 179,200 dozens, and 12,006 quintals to 45,193 quintals, 244,817 dozens, and 56,854 quintals, foreign imports being gradually replaced by native manufactures. Matches rose from 250 gross to the record figure of 876,110 gross, due to the shrinking of the foreign match trade. Paper of all qualities totalled 102,299 quintals as against 23,027 quintals, due to depleted stocks and brisker demand. Other minor increases occurred in wood oil and scented tea, while cigarettes ran parallel with the preceding year's figures. Coal fell heavily and cement dropped by 40,801 quintals.

Under exports abroad, fresh fruits maintained a satisfactory level, Hongkong being the principal market, absorbing 4,370 quintals out of a total export of fresh apples of 8,634 quintals and 5,811 quintals of fresh pears out of a total export of 14,425 quintals. Dairen also emerged as another important market, taking 2,899 quintals of apples, 8,280 quintals of pears, all 11,521 quintals of other fruits. Groundnut products did not suffered so severely as anticipated, several districts in the interior formerly send—their output to Tsingtao finding Chefoo a more convenient outlet. The autumn crop was reported to be some 30 per cent below the previous year's due to little rainfall, but the quality remained excellent, the nuts being free from excessive moisture and fir for export earlier than usual. The demand for groundnuts was firm throughout the year, and Netherlands occupying the premier place as buyer, taking 42,823 quintals of groundnuts in shell and 10,118 quintals of groundnuts kernals. Germany's purchases also improved in the case of kernals, totalling 8,098 quintals as against 101 quintals. The French market was well maintained, while drastic curtailments in orders from Great Britain and Italy were made up by enhanced demands from Hongkong and Dairen. The vermicelli market suffered a reversal, only 18,180 quintals being exported, almost all to Hongkong, as against 35,940 quintals during 1937. Many mills manufacturing this commodity suspended operations, small green beans and potatoes, the raw materials used in the manufacture of vermicelli, being taken by guerillas as provisions. Movements of linen piece-goods to the interior, as well as the return of the finished article in the form of drawn-thread work, cross-stitch work and embroideries, were subject to various delays. This, coupled with the increase in the tariff rate from 7½ to 12½ per cent on imported linens and sporadic warfare in the interior, naturally affected the trade. Exports of drawn-thread work were valued at $6,280 only as against $12,944, while only $496,110 worth of cross-stitch work and embroideries and $241,262 worth of lace and trimmings were exported to the United States of America out of a total export of $1.3 million worth of cross-stitch work and embroideries as compared with $1.9 million worth during 1937, and a total export of $1.6 million worth of lace and trimmings as compared with $1.7 million during 1937. Exports of Shantung silk pongees totalled 227,477 kilogrammes as compared with 249,260 kilogrammes. Demand from Great Britain increased by 62,106 kilogrammes, Hongkong, however, taking only 90,884 kilogrammes, or 72,139 kilogrammes less than in 1937. Next to Great Britain, France took 11,001 kilogrammes as against 8,054 kilogrammes, Germany 5,446 kilogrammes as against 1,015 kilogrammes, with South Africa taking only one-third of her purchases in 1937. The export of hair-nets declined by 13 per cent from 684,423 to 595,748 gross, limited supply and increased cost of production being responsible. The American market took 199,176 gross as against 113,805 gross in 1937, Great Britain took 227,202 gross, with France, Germany and the Netherlands, the principal hair-net buyers, falling far behind their previous year's takings.

Local stocks of rice were replenished by importations of foreign rice: 58,404 quintals from Indo-China, 17,630 quintals from Siam, 17,476 quintals from Hongkong, and 1,467 quintals from other countries, as compared with imports during 1937 of 6,462 quintals. Imports of foreign wheat flour also advanced from 2,233 to 47,625 quintals. Coastwise imports of rice and paddy dwindled from 97,937 to 7,026 quintals, with interport imports of wheat falling from 40,871 to 2,512 quintals. Domestic imports of wheat flour also fell from 157,333 to 119,964 quintals.

In February the market was flooded with different currencies of the yen bloc, while from June notes of the Federated Reserve Bank were put into circulation. The circulation of "southern" notes was prohibited from the 10th June, while bank-notes issued by the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications in North China and marked accordingly, originally permitted to circulate up to the 10th March 1939, were by decree accepted as from the 1st September 1938 only at a discount of 10 per cent as against Federated Reserve Bank notes. Rates for foreign exchange followed closely the Shanghai exchange, but domestic exchange transactions were almost entirely undertaken by native banks and money shops. The remittance rate on Shanghai reached the high point of 11½ per cent in October and ranged between 8 and 2 per cent during the winter.

Total tonnage entered and cleared under General Regulations increased by 658,404 tons from 2,778,815 to 3,437,219 tons, of which British tonnage totalled 1,811,052 tons.

口 龍 Lung-kow

Lungkow, a sub-office under the Chefoo Customs Commissioner, was declared a trading port in November, 1913, but was not formally opened until 1st, November, 1915. It is about 80 nautical miles by sea and 87 statute miles by highway due west of Chefoo, on the west coast of the Shantung promontory. It lies about 100 miles south-west of the Japanese port, Dairen, and is the nearest port to the rich Manchurian provinces. Newchwang and Tientsin are each about 200 miles distant from Lungkow.

The port is well sheltered on the north by the Chimatao Peninsula, and is the most northern one in China proper open to the sea throughout the year, though the harbour is sometimes partly frozen over, greatly handicapping the movements of the clumsy cargo boats. This generally happens in January. The harbour of Lungkow (Dragon's Mouth) is seven miles wide at the entrance, and has a sand bar which forms a breakwater for five miles across the opening. The inner harbour has a low-water mark of from 11 to 14 feet and storms seldom disturb the shipping inside. It is not to be expected that the Chinese Government will, for many years at least, undertake extensive harbour improvements at Lungkow; but, as it is, the inner harbour has accommodation for a great deal of shipping and, as its bottom is of clay, not sand, a considerable increase in the depth of water available could probably be brought about by dredging operations. Until such time as recognition of its favourable geographical situation forces the bestowal of increased communications, together with harbour improvement similar to those at Chefoo, any increase of trade will be slow and must come from an increase in exports and a gradual elevation of the scale of living with an attendant increase in imports. A handsome new reinforced concrete pier at the New Settlement has been completed, but has never been used and is slowly falling into decay, while the roads leading to it have been allowed to deteriorate. During 1924 development of the town northwards was planned with some success, but it has since been abandoned. An electric light works, long anticipated, is now an accomplished fact.

A level stretch of country behind Lungkow, thickly populated and very fertile, gives promise of the port some day assuming considerable importance. The proposed Chefoo-Weihsien Railway would connect Lungkow with both Chefoo and Weihsien, thus with north and central Shantung. The Weihsien-Lungkow-Chefoo motor highway could be easily converted into a railway. In the meantime, this new road brings more trade to the port, although closed to traffic in wet weather, the rainy season being July and August. The transport of mails and cargo is considerable in normal times. The beach and isthmus of Lungkow are of a loose drifting sand, which, in stormy weather, coupled with dust from the numerous coal supply depots on all sides, may what otherwise might easily become a seaside resort for those working in the near neighbourhood. The climate is slightly cooler than that of Chefoo, and no doubt one of the healthiest in China.

Japanese troops visited Lungkow twice during the month of February but withdraw each time, the port being left under the control of various mobile units throughout the year. With the Japanese blockade of the port only a few launches operating between Lungkow and Chefoo under special permission, trade naturally suffered severely.

As revealed by Customs statistics, the value of direct foreign imports was $0.3 million as compared with $1.7 million during 1937; coastwise imports of Chinese merchandise were valued at $1.5 million as against $4.4 million; direct exports to foreign countries at $1.8 million as against $2.6 million; and coastwise exports at $1.6 million as compared with $2.8 million. Due to the treatment as of foreign origin of produce from Manchurian ports hitherto treated as domestic imports, the arrival from the Kwantung Leased Territory instead of such ports as Antung and Newchwang of beancake to the amount of 12,645 quintals presented a new feature in the trade of the port. All other imports either dropped precipitately or disappeared entirely from the Customs returns. Timber (Antung) fell in quantity from 5,760 cubic metres in 1937 to 271 cubic metres only; kerosene oil from 0.7 million to 0.05 million litres; and coal (Fushun) from 10,155 to 919 metric tons only. The appearance in the Customs returns of 177 quintals of sugar as against 4,506 quintals in 1937, and of cigarette paper to the value of $3,726 as against $1,040, was attributable entirely to seizures. Coastwise importations of such Chinese produce as wheat flour and rice fell off considerably as the direct result of the embargo placed by Japanese authority at Chefoo, but native sugar increased from 904 to 2,483 quintals and cotton yarn from 399 to 4,322 quintals, with coal declining from 20,982 to 1,000 metric tons.

Under exports abroad, the export of fresh fruits increased in quantity from 2,189 to 3,091 quintals; groundnut oil from 4,463 to 24,672 quintals, Hongkong remaining the only purchaser; with the export of mats increasing in value from $182 only to $20,441. Vermicelli, the mainstay of the port, dropped from 51,100 to 19,250 quintals, all of which was shipped to Hongkong; shipments abroad of fresh vegetables fell from 78,229 to 5,077 quintals; of joss sticks from 2,118 to 1,145 quintals; of Chinese pens in value from $31,697 to $1,687; and of straw hats from 74,568 pieces to nil. Of coastwise exports, groundnut oil declined by 14 per cent, while vermicelli declined in quantity from 71, 466 to 32,297 quintals. Trade in rice and cereals showed an abnormal decline, due to the prohibition on the import into the district of foodstuffs from neighbouring ports. During the year only 39 quintals of rice and 8 quintals of wheat flour were imported from abroad, while as regards coastwise imports only 6,679 quintals of rice and 6,938 quintals of wheat flour were imported as compared with 33,633 quintals and 112,425 quintals during 1937. A good wheat crop in June somewhat relieved the shortage in wheat flour. The total net tonnage of shipping entered and cleared fell from 430,705 to 107,254 tons.

衞 海 威 Wei-hai-wei

Weihaiwei is situated on the south side of the Gulf of Pechili near the extremity of the Shantung Promontory, and about 115 miles distant from Port Arthur on the north-west and the same from the port of Kiaochau on the south-west. Formerly a strongly-fortified Chinese naval station, it was captured by the Japanese on 30th January, 1895, and was held by them pending the payment of the indemnity, which was finally liquidated in 1898. Before the evacuation by the Japanese an agreement was arrived at between Great Britain and China that the former should take over the territory on lease from the latter, and, accordingly, on the 24th May, 1898, the British flag was formally hoisted, the Commissioners representing their respective countries at the ceremony being Consul Hopkins, of Chefoo, and Captain King-Hall, of H.M.S. Narcissus, for Great Britain, and Taotai Yen and Captain Lin, of the Chinese war vessel Foochi, for China. Weihaiwei was leased to Great Britain "for so long a period as Port Arthur shall remain in the occupation of Russia," and was regarded by the British Government as a sanatorium for the British squadron on the China station. At the Washington Conference in 1921 Great Britain offered to return the territory to China, and during the latter part of 1922 an Anglo-Chinese Commission met to deal with the questions arising out of this. These questions included arrangements for the use of the port by the British Fleet as a summer station, provisions for the safety of foreign residents, and the representation of foreign residents in the administration of the territory. Towards the end of 1924 the Chinese and British plenipotentiaries arrived at a complete agreement regarding the terms of rendition, and the Convention, was almost ready for signature when General Feng Yü-hsiang brought about a coup d'état in Peiping in November of that year. Negotiations were resumed in 1929 and carried to a successful conclusion in April 1930, by the signature at Nanking of the convention for the rendition of Weihaiwei, which was ratified and came into force on October est, 1930. It was accompanied by an agreement whereby certain naval privileges and facilities were granted to the British Government for a period of ten years, subject to renewal by agreement between the two Powers.

The former leased territory, which lies in lat. 37 deg. 30 min. N., long. 120 deg. 10 min. E., comprises the Island of Liu Kung, all the islands in the Bay of Weihaiwei, and a belt of land 10 English miles wide along the entire coastline, and consists of ranges of rugged mountains and rocky hills up to 1,500 feet high, dividing the plains into valleys and river beds. The island of Liu Kung, once barren and nearly treeless but now verdant and picturesque as the result of a system of afforestation inaugurated in 1910, is formed by a backbone of hills rising to some 500 feet. The hillsides on the mainland, of which Port Edward is the chief port, are either barren rock or planted with dwarf pine and scrub oak trees. The valleys are mostly undulating country full of gullies and mountain river-beds; the streams are all torrential and choke up the valleys with sand and débris from the hills. During three-quarters of the year these river-beds are dry. All the hills are terraced for cultivation as far as possible. The total area of the territory is about 285 square miles.

The strata of the mountains are metamorphic, consisting of beds of quartzite, gneiss, crystalline, and limestone, cut across by dykes of volcanic rock and granite. Gold is found in the territory and has been worked by the Chinese, and silver, tin, lead, and iron are said to exist. Good building-stone and a rich non-hydraulic limestone are found. The territory contains some 360 villages, and the population was estimated in 1931 at 195,000. There are five small market towns, where fairs are held every five days.

The majority of the Chinese inhabitants are either fishermen or farmers, and are a peaceful, law-abiding folk.

The Government of Weihaiwei up to the date of rendition was administered by a Commissioner appointed under the Weihaiwei Order-in-Council of the 24th July, 1902, with powers similar to those of a Colonial Governor. Under this Order the Commissioner was empowered to make Ordinances for the administration of the territory. It is now administered by a High Commissioner appointed by the Government, who acts directly under the orders of the Executive Yuan.

Weihaiwei is now a fairly regular port of call for many China coasting steamers sailing northwards from Shanghai. The harbour is well lighted by two lighthouses. The climate of Weihaiwei is exceptionally good, and the winter, though cold, is dry and bracing. A land and building company formed in Shanghai, has erected several commodious European bungalows. There are two large hotels on the mainland capable of accommodating over 100 people, and also a hotel on the Island with accommodation for 50 to 60. Both on the mainland and on the island good roads have been made by the local Government, and there are recreation parade grounds and golf courses in both places.

The city of Weihaiwei (which lies on the mainland opposite the island of Liu Kung) is a walled town of about 2,000 inhabitants. The town is a poor one, and the greater portion of the enclosed area is not built on, but cultivated for vegetables. New roads and a Public Park have been constructed recently, and two of the four picturesque towngates have been demolished to admit carriages.

No Customs duties were collected at Weihaiwei during the British régime. In spite of the low taxation, the growing prosperity of the territory under British rule caused the public revenue to increase from about $2,000 in 1900 to about half a million dollars in 1930. But a Chinese Maritime Custom House has now been established. This and the establishment of other Central Government Revenue Collecting Departments, such as the Salt Gabelle and the Wine and Tobacco Tax Bureau, has resulted in increased taxation accompanied by a diminution of the revenues available for local government. The curtailment of the commercial advantages dependent on what was practically a free port has reduced the volume of business and depressed land values. The system of Government is now more elaborate and the number of officials has greatly increased since Rendition.

At Weihaiwei the year opened with considerable anxiety aggravated by expectations of a Japanese landing. Japanese marines finally occupied the port on the 7th March, and during the succeeding months of the year, while the hinterland remained still in the hands of guerilla forces, the town of Weihaiwei remained in Japanese occupation. These political changes and the unsettled conditions that inevitably accompanied them naturally proved to be disturbing factors in the trade of the port. Fortunately, the trade of Weihaiwei consists almost entirely of the exportation of groundnuts and other staple produce and the importation of cereals, fertilisers, and other essential goods for consumption within the district itself. Moreover, although road traffic between the interior and Weihaiwei was brought to a standstill, communication was maintained by junk without serious obstruction, so that the port's trade remained surprisingly buoyant in the face of existing difficulties. The currency question, in fact, only prohibited the use of national currency "southern" notes and placed national currency "northern" notes at a discount of 10 per cent against Federated Reserve currency.

The total value of the trade of the port covered by Customs statistics was approximately $9.5 million as compared with $10.4 million during 1937, or a decrease of 10 per cent. Direct foreign imports for the year were valued at $1.7 million as compared with $0.7 million during the preceding year; coastwise imports of Chinese produce at $2.7 million as against $3.7 million; direct exports abroad at $1.4 million as against $2.5 million; and coastwise exportations of Chinese produce at $3.7 million as compared with $3.5 million. The increase in the value of direct foreign imports was largely due to the treatment, from the 30th, March, 1938, as foreign of Manchurian goods hitherto treated as domestic imports, and was therefore made at the expense of the domestic import figures. For instance, the import of fertiliser (beancake) from foreign countries increased from 400 quintals in 1937 to 48,013 quintals, whereas the domestic trade figures show a decrease of 27,979 quintals. Importations of kerosene oil from abroad dropped from 204,010 to only 25,871 litres, while the import of sulphate of ammonia also declined from 7,415 to 4,290 quintals, due to the greater employment of beancake as fertiliser. Sugar arrivals fell by 872 to 2,571 quintals. Foreign imports of rice increased from 13 quintals only during 1937 to 20,083 quintals. On the other hand, native rice and paddy declined from 78,252 to 11,359 quintals, making a total drop in arrivals of this staple of 46,823 quintals. The reduced consumption of rice in the district was to some extent made good by the greater use of maize, of which 29,860 quintals were imported as compared with 8,529 quintals during 1937. Of wheat flour, 45,285 quintals were imported as compared with 56,689 quintals during the preceding year: of the import during the year under review of 45,285 quintals, 43,376 quintals came from Chinese ports.

Under exports of foreign countries, groundnuts accounted for 93 per cent of the trade, although the actual quantity exported was 87,497 quintals as compared with 118,464 quintals during the year 1937. Coastwise exports of groundnuts, mainly to Southern ports, increased from 163,402 to 212,075 quintals. The groundnuts crop in the Weihaiwei district is said to have decreased by 30 per cent since the preceding year, owing to the more extensive cultivation of cereals made necessary by the unsettled conditions prevailing. The increase in the export trade of Weihaiwei is accounted for by the diversion to that port of groundnuts grown in areas normally supplying the Tsingtao market. Exchange control and other difficulties met with at Tsingtao were fortunately not experienced at Weihaiwei, and groundnuts continued to reach the port by junk for re-exportation by steamer without restriction throughout the year. Towards the close of the year very heavy shipment were made owing to rumours that exchange control would shortly be enforced: the prospects for the local trade remain, therefore, most uncertain.

The year was a most unsatisfactory one for the fishing trade. The Japanese naval blockade and the tense situation prevailing after the Japanese occupation of Weihaiwei kept most of the fishing-trawlers in a state of idleness throughout the springfishing season. Fortunately, about 47 trawlers were able to operate during the autumn season. Exports from Weihaiwei of fresh and salt fish remained at approximately the same low level as that of the preceding year, which was also a bad one for this usually prosperous industry. The hostilities also seriously affected the once prosperous silk hosiery and embroidery trades. A total of 1,114 vessels, aggregating 864,251 tons, entered the port during the year. These figures show a decline of 2,093 vessels and 270,751 tons as compared with 1937. The decline was attributable to the hostilities, which have reduced the Chinese steamer tonnage from 272,513 to 51,076 tons.

TSINGTAO

膠州 Kiáu-chow

Tsingtao, situated at the entrance to Kiaochow Bay in Shantung, was occupied by a German squadron on November 14th, 1897, in consequence of the murder of two German missionaries, and Germany obtained from China a lease of the territory for the term of 99 years When the great war in Europe broke out in 1914, Japan, under the terms of her treaty of alliance with Great Britain, intervened because the peace of the Far East was menaced by the German occupation of Kiaochow, inasmuch as the Colony constituted a naval base for operations in the East against the shipping and territories of the countries with whom Germany was at war. Shortly after the outbreak of the war Japan advised Germany to disarm all her armed vessels in Chinese and Japanese waters, and to hand Kiaochow over to Japan with a view to its eventual restoration to China. Germany returned no reply to this communication. Consequently, on August 23rd, Japan declared war against Germany, and took measures at once, in co-operation with the British, to blockade and invest the German territory of Kiaochow. The bombardment of the place by land and sea began on September 27th, and the garrison capitulated on November 7th after all the forts had been taken by a final night attack, in which the South Wales Borderers co-operated with the Japanese H.M.S. Triumph and the destroyers Usk and Kennett assisted in the naval operations. Upwards of 5,000 prisoners were taken and conveyed to Japan for internment until the end of the war.

By the Sino-Japanese Treaty of 1915, China engaged herself to recognise all matters that might be agreed upon between the Japanese Government and the German Government respecting the disposition of all the rights, interests and concessions, which, in virtue of treaties or otherwise, Germany possessed vis-a-vis China in relation to the province of Shantung. This instrument was recognised at the time by Great Britain and France. At the Conference of the Allies at Paris, the Chinese delegates contended that any rights which Germany possessed should revert to their Government, in accordance with Japan's original undertaking, especially as, since that undertaking was given, China had become one of the Allies. As they failed to obtain satisfaction, they declined to sign the Peace Treaty with Germany, which provided that Germany's rights in Shantung should be transferred to Japan. The matter came before the Washington Conference in 1921, and the result was the Shantung Treaty, under which it was provided that the territory should be restored to China. A Sino-Japanese Commission was subsequently appointed to give effect to the provisions of the Treaty, and this body met in 1922 and arranged terms which are set forth in the Treaty section of this volume.

While Kiaochau was in German occupation, the special attention of the Administration was devoted to agricultural, commercial and mining development in the Protectorate and Shantung. The local administration consisted of a Council, composed of all the heads of the several administrative departments under the personal supervision of the Governor and four members chosen from the civil population and appointed for two years. The Protectorate developed to an unlooked-for extent under this system of administration, which enabled all the vital questions at issue, such as legal rights, landed properties, land-tax assessment, school and church matters, to be satisfactorily settled. The object of the Administration in dealing with the land question was to secure for every settler the lasting possession of his plot, thereby opposing unhealthy land speculation. Tsingtao, on the 2nd, September, 1898. was declared a free port. The harbour had all the advantages of a Treaty port, and as a free port especially recommended itself as an emporium, since the merchant could there store, free of duty, his wares from abroad or his raw materials brought from the interior of China. The Chinese import duties were at first levied only on goods brought to Tsingtao by sea, when they were transported beyond the borders of the Protectorate into Chinese territory. The Chinese export duties were at first levied only on goods brought from the interior of China, when they were shipped, from the German Protectorate to any other place. But in December 1905 a new Convention came into force whereby Tsingtao ceased to be a free port, and the Imperial Maritime Customs began to collect duties there as well as all the other Treaty ports of China. But the Convention stipulated that 20 per cent of the import duty collected at Tsingtao should be paid to the Imperial German Government. The Commissioner of Customs in his report for 1906 commented on the arrangement as follows:—"The principal object of the arrangement, which, moreover, afforded the opportunity of a political rapprochement and material concessions for mutual benefit on both sides, was the creation and promotion of trade and commerce between the Pachtgebiet and the Chinese hinterland. The results of the first epoch have conclusively proved the wisdom of this novel arrangement. Under it trade developed beyond expectation and rose from a value of Taels 2,000,000 in 1899 to Tls. 22,000,000 in 1905, and Tsingtao, the former dilapidated fishing village, grew into a handsome city with a flourishing mercantile community and a considerable number of manufacturing establishments, giving promise of good profits and further development. Its success emboldened the merchants, foreign and Chinese, to ask for, and the Government to agree to, going a step further and arranging for the limitation of the free area, which formerly comprised the whole Pachtgebiet, to the harbour, on much the same lines as the German free ports Hamburg and Bremen. The chief advantage of this step lies in the removal of Custom control from the railway stations to the free area, and the consequent freedom of goods and passengers to pass in and out, from and to the hinterland, without hindrance or control of any kind—a traffic simplification from which a considerable increase in trade was expected." The new arrangement inspired confidence in the stability and future of the port and attracted artisans, traders, and wealthy Chinese firms, which last, hitherto, dealing with Ch foo, had until now kept aloof from the place. The total value of trade increased from Hk. Tls. 30,700,000 in 1906 to Hk. Tls. 39,700,000 in 1909, and reached a total of Hk. Tls. 56,330,321 for the year 1912, or an increase of 20% over the previous year, notwithstanding the disadvantageous conditions for trade caused by the revolutionary troubles in China.

The Bay of Kiaochau is an extensive inlet two miles north-west of Cape Jaeschke The entrance is not more than 1¾ miles across, the east side being a low promontory with rocky shores, with the new town of Tsingtao ("green island," from a small grassy island close to the land) about two miles from the point of the peninsula. On the west side of the entrance is another promontory with hills rising to about 600 feet. The shore here is rocky, and dangerous on the west side, but on the east side is a good stretch of sandy beach. The bay is so large that the land at the head can only just be seen from the entrance (about 15 to 20 miles away), and the water gradually gets shallower as the north side of the bay is approached. The old Chinese Kiaochau city stands at the north-west corner of the bay about 5 miles from the sea. At Tsingtao there are two anchorages for big ships; the larger and better one is round the point of the east promontory, on the north side, and the other, smaller one, on the south side. A new mole was opened on March 6th, 1904, which accommodates five vessels with berths. A second mole was opened a few months later, and a third for kerosene ships was subsequently constructed. They have direct connection with the railway. About 20 ships can be berthed simultaneously in the harbour.

The hills, in former days merely bare rocks of granite and porphyry, are now clad in fresh green owing to an extensive scheme of afforestation, which was decided upon in the early days of the colony. The soil of the valleys between the ranges and the plain country on the north-east is alluvial and very fertile, and is carefully cultivated Wheat, barley, beans, millet, maize, groundnuts, leaf tobacco and many other grains in smaller quantities are grown. The foreign residential quarter at Tsingtao has been well laid out, and there are some good foreign hotels. The first sod of the Shantung Railway was cut by Prince Henry of Prussia in October, 1899, and the line to Tsinanfu was opened on the 1st, June, 1904. It has done a prosperous business from the day it was opened.

The wireless installation at the Signal Berg, originally built by the Germans, was removed by the Japanese naval authorities in June, 192 , but a powerful new wireless station has been established by the Japanese military authorities at Taisichen. It is available to the public for "urgent" telegrams. A thoroughly equipped observatory was opened in January, 1912, with funds supplied by the Union of German Navy Leagues abroad. A boys middle school, built at a cost of Yen 228,000, now stands where the Germans had erected an aero-shed on the western slope of the Yamen Forts. The port came under the control of the National Government on the 15th April, 1929, and was officially proclaimed to be a special area on the 1st May. The new municipality has been active in improving local conditions.

In May, 1929, a radiogram service was made available for commercial use. Roads in general are kept in a good state of repair and construction and extension have steadily increased with the result that at the end of 1933 the mileage of urban and suburban roads was 239 and 373 kilometers respectively. Finally, the motor-highway between Tsingtao and Chefoo, a distance of 150 miles, was completed, thus rendering available to motorists using Tsingtao as their base the use of various provincial highways. Private or commercial construction work during 1933 comprised 538 buildings valued at about $3,850,000, among them various bank buildings and the Edgewater Mansions, a new and completely modern hotel. Additionally, the Municipality completed the reconstruction of the pier extending outwards from the main promenade towards the island known as small Tsingtao, at a cost of $260,000 and erected a public stadium at a cost of $197,000. Comprising as it does a running track, a football field, space for tennis, basketball, etc., it is in constant use by Chinese and Foreigners alike.

The Public Works Department has been steadily improving the water supply in spite of difficulties deriving from comparatively scanty rainfall and lack of access to rivers or lakes. The Telephone Administration has also been keeping abreast of local development and has undertaken the installation of 400 additional instruments. Last, but by no means least, the greatest care is being given to education. Municipal expenditure in the latter connection has doubled in the past two years.

According to a Chinese census, the population has increased by over 18,000 persons during 1933 and now stands at a total of 444,690 inhabitants. A new concrete and granite pier in the Great Harbour, construction of which started in June 1932, was completed in February 1936. The port of Tsingtao was occupied by Japanese military forces on 10th, January, 1938.

Trade in 1938

With the destruction towards the coast of 1937 of the principal mills, factories, and railway bridges and the occupation of the port by Japanese forces early in 1938, it was but natural that the trade of the port of Tsingtao should suffer considerable dislocation. Although transportation became available again on the Kiao-Tsi Railway in April, the shortage of rolling-stock was acutely felt, and while bumper crops were reported, it was next to impossible to bring them down to Tsingtao for shipment owing to the unsettled condition of the interior. Various restrictions, moreover, imposed by the "Provisional Government" during the year on the movement of bank-notes, cotton, hides and skins, and prohibition on trade by junk with inland places, further halted the trade of the port. The complete removal of some score of sunken vessels lying across the entrances to the harbour took almost eight months, and although an opening permitting entry of vessels of under 3,000 tons was effected in March, use of the wharves was restricted. Foreign interests suffered severely, but the Japanese community enjoyed greater facilities. Some relaxation of the blockade towards the end of the year relieved the position, but too late to have any substantial effect on the year's results.

The trade statistics recorded by the Customs for the value of the trade of the port were as follows: direct foreign imports, $47 million as compared with $49.8 million in 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese merchandise, $28.4 million; as against $36.3 million; direct exports to foreign countries, $31.4 million as against $58 million; and coastwise exports of Chinese produce, $36.4 million as compared with $88.5 million. Imports, of which 80 per cent came from Japan, fell off by 8 per cent only and, had some ¥15 million worth of merchandise imported as passengers' luggage from February to 10th, April been included in the Customs returns, would have far exceeded the figure for the preceding year. With regard to imports, however, a considerable proportion was for the reconstruction of destroyed mills and factories, and these cannot, therefore, be taken to represent a normal upward trend of trade. The import of textile machinery from Japan, for instance, reached the record value of $8.5 million, bringing the machinery and tools group into first place among imported goods with a total value of $13.5 million as compared with $6.2 million for 1937. Usually holding second place in the past, metals were during the year relegated to an insignificant position with a fall in value from $5.7 million to $1.5 million, tinned iron plates imported amounting to only one-sixth of the 1937 figure, in line with the reduced trade in kerosene oil. The importation in 1937 of iron bars and angles from Great Britain and of iron ingots from the Kwantung Leased Territory, valued for 1937 at $780,000, was practically nil. Since there was no importation on Customs record of locomotives, imports under the heading of vehicles further dwindled. The trade in timber improved in value from $4.17 million to $4.54 million on account of extensive building activities, and, but for existing restrictions, the import would certainly have been much heavier. With a value of $2.36 million paper remained at its former level. Despite lowered duty rates from February 1938, there was a sharp decline in sugar imports from 228,904 to 52,277 quintals. So large a quantity had found its way to Tsingtao during the early months of the year that the local price was by June even lower than that obtaining in Dairen. Kerosene oil decreased from 40,162,130 to 13,156,200 litres, of which one-half came from the United States of America and the remainder from both Japan and Netherlands India. While diminishing demand from the interior, due to difficulties in transportation, was responsible for this decrease, a certain portion of the regular supply was curtailed because of the appearance on the market of a cheaper grade of oil brought in during the early part of the year. Imports of gasolene were dealt a hard blow, amounting only to 899,235 litres as against 18,027,731 litres for the preceding year. Shortage of supplies and the depreciation in the exchange value of local currency were reflected in the retail price of this oil, which increased steadily from $0.95 at the beginning of the year to $1.35 per gallon at the end of the year. Among those articles which recorded a substantial increase were cotton piece-goods with a gain of $1.3 million; miscellaneous metal manufactures with a gain of $1.2 million, owing to heavy importations of electrical materials; foreign rice with a gain of 54,675 quintals, as a result of the ban on export from Shanghai in the latter half of the year; and wheat flour from abroad with a gain of 13,124 quintals, owing to exemption from duty. Imports of leaf tobacco from the United States of America receded from 1,298,734 to 428,042 kilogrammes. Dyes and pigments showed a slight improvement over the figures for 1937, but there was considerable shrinkage in the import of chemicals from $3.2 million to $1.6 million, primarily as a result of reduced demand from the interior for fertilisers and the stagnation in local industries during the year.

With regard to exports abroad, which fell in value from $58 million in comparison with 1937, an all-round decrease was gazetted with the exception of cotton, salt and leaf tobacco, the export of which was not affected by the exchange control since demand came from places within the yen currency bloc. The conspicuous decline in shipments abroad of groundnut oil, one of the port's staple exports, from 376,260 quintals valued at nearly $16 million in 1937 to 116,440 quintals only valued at $4 million, testifies to the difficulties under which Tsingtao export trade laboured during the year. The United States of America took the lead in purchasing this oil with 50,775 quintals to her credit, followed by Germany taking 46,003 quintals. The trade in shelled groundnuts, principally with the Netherlands, declined during the year in value from $5.9 million to $3.5 million, with coastwise exports suffering even more heavily, 232,505 quintals only to the value of $4 million being shipped as against 519,451 quintals to the value of some $10 million in 1937. The export of eggs and egg products was, luckily, saved from making too poor a showing, receding only in value from $7.7 million to $5.1 million, since they were not subject to exchange control, owing to the fact that steamer space had been engaged for the whole year at the beginning of the season. Both Great Britain and Germany were equally interested. The bristle trade was the next most severely hit, exports falling from 4,568 quintals valued at $3.5 million to 1,212 quintals valued at $0.9 million, and coastwise shipments declining in value from $1.7 million to $0.4 million. A large quantity of this commodity was, however, shipped abroad from the interior through Tientsin instead of Tsingtao as formerly. Partial destruction of mines and transportation difficulties were mainly responsible for the shrinkage in the export abroad of coal, which fell from 231,718 to 9,521 tons, coastwise shipments also falling from 887,139 to 2,730 tons. Only cotton and salt maintained their positions, with quantities of 66,979 and 2,492,815 quintals respectively. The increase in the value of leaf tobacco exports from $4.6 million to $5 million was not accompanied by a corresponding advance in volume, only 82,568 quintals being shipped as against 91,648 quintals. Although reconstruction work on the nine cotton mills destroyed prior to the withdrawal of the Chinese forces was nearing completion at the end of the year, only a small percentage of the 390,500 spindles commenced operations, so that not only was there practically no interport export of cotton yarn and piece-goods in 1938, but there was an interport import of cotton yarn to the value of $11.8 million as agains $3.6 million in the preceding year.

The total number of vessels entered and cleared under General Regulations to and from domestic and foreign ports during 1938 was 2,446, with an aggregate tonnage of 3,945,712 tons, representing a decrease of 2,085,510 tons as compared with 1937, a decline of 28 per cent in the number of vessels and of 35 per cent in total tonnage. In comparison with 1937 the percentage of tonnage under the Japanese flag jumped from 29 per cent owing to the disappearance of Chinese shipping, while under the British flag there was a decline from 35 per cent to 29 per cent mainly due to the fact that third Power vessels were denied the use of wharf facilities, the working of cargo and the landing and emarkation of passengers being carried out in the open bay.

TSINAN

Tsinan, the capital of the province of Shantung, has the distinction of being the first city in the Chinese Empire in which a Foreign Commercial Settlement was voluntarily opened by the Government of China. The date of its inauguration was January 10th, 1906. Within the area of this Settlement, which lies outside the West Gate of Tsinan city, foreign merchants are allowed to reside and trade and lease land; the leases are for terms of thirty years, renewable for a similar term. The control of the Settlement is vested in a Municipal Administration presided over by a Mayor appointed by the Nationalist Government. The city of Tsinan lies to the South of a range of hills (Lat. 36 deg. 50 min. N.; Long. 117 deg. E.), and slopes gradually upwards from North to South. Situated in the south-west suburb are magnificent springs giving forth many tons of water per minute, and the streams from these natural fountains flow through the city to a lake situated on the north side. This abundance of water tends to make Tsinan one of the cleanest as well as one of the healthiest cities in the Republic. The population was computed by the chief of Police at the end of May, 1933, to be about 428,011, about one-twentieth of whom profess the Mohammedan faith. Quite a considerablenumber of foreigners and foreign, institutions have established themselves in the Foreign Settlement, and several have erected large and imposing buildings. The chief of these are the British Consulate-General, the Japanese Consulate-General, the German Consulate General, the American Consulate, Japanese hospital and the Chinese Post Office. Residential buildings are also rapidly being constructed. There is quite a boom in the building of small houses which are occupied by Chinese and numbers of Japanese (1,646 in 1933). In addition to these, large buildings have been erected outside the south suburb of the city for the Shantung Christian University incorporated by charter from the Canadian Government. The Hospital of the Medical College, which is a department of this University, has completed a large new unit during the summer of 1935. The Tientsin-Pukow Railway Co. owns a large piece of ground in the Settlement, and has built offices and dwelling-houses for members of the staff thereon.

With the introduction of the use of machinery Tsinan is becoming more important as an industrial city. There are now about 40 industrial establishments which can claim to be, more or less, modern factories:—7 flour mills turning out 22,000 bags per day, 2 match factories, 3 cotton mills, several hair net factories, paper, iron and brass goods, soap, dye, leather, needles, wine, cloth, etc., factories, and a press packing plant.

Tsinan is connected by rail with Tsingtao (Kiaochow), distant 280 miles, Tientsin 200 miles, and with Pukow on the Yangtsze. It is also connected by a small river now in process of canalization, with Yang Chao Kou, on the Gulf of Chihli, distant 146 miles, whence there are occasional steamers to Chefoo. Tsinan stands five miles south of the Huang-ho or Yellow River, and in spite of some difficulties of navigation there is a considerable junk traffic between its river port of Lo-kou and the Grand Canal, which enters the river 80 miles higher up. This trade is almost, if not quite, entirely with the south, to Tsiningchou and beyond, since the canal from the Huangho northward to Lin-ching-chou has been unnavigable for several years. The high road from Tsinan to the north crosses the Huang-ho by ferry at So-kou, 5 miles away and at Chi-ho Hsien, distant 16 miles. Since the opening in 1912 of the bridge over the Yellow River a Lokow through communication has been established on the Tsin Pu Railway from Peiping and Tientsin to Pukow and Shanghai viâ Tsinan

Bus lines are being operated in five directions to points more than 100 miles distant. Large motor trucks are also being put into service to replace the native carts for hauling cotton and overland freight.

Some ten Protestant and the Roman Catholic Missions are conducting extensive work in and around Tsinan. There are more than 270 American, English and European persons resident in the Settlement and suburbs of the city.

The whole city is lighted by electricity. A new unit as large as the original plant has been completed this year. Great activity has recently been evinced in building colleges and schools, and among the interesting institutions of the town the Tsinan Institute, now connected with the Shantung Christian University is a remarkable and very interesting establishment that should not be overlooked. The northern sacred mountain of China, Tai Shan (5,100 feet), is distant some 20 miles (45 by road) to the south, at Tai An on the T. P. R. R. Kufu, the birthplace and the tomb of Confucius, and the residence of the Confucian duke, are about 100 miles away in the same direction, reached by Chinese cart, being situated some ten miles from the Kufu (Chufu) station on the T. P. R. R. These two historic points are of interest to tourists. Accommodations and guides can be arranged for through the American Methodist Mission in Tai An.

On December 26, 1937 the Japanese forces occupied Tsinan. A joint government has been established under Japanese and Chinese officials. The Japanese population has already increased to about 8,000, and much of the business and manufacturing has already been taken over by the Japanese. Plans are being laid for future expansion of the city to twice its present size. Already areas are being designed for residential, business, and factory developments. Several new roads are already under construction in the environs of the city. Conditions are quiet in the city but business is at a low ebb.

SHANGHAI

海上 Sháng-hái

Although situated nearly midway between Hongkong and Tientsin, Shanghai was the most northerly of the "Five Ports" opened to foreign trade under the provisions of the British Treaty of Nanking, and for many years constituted the northern limit of the external trade of China. It lies in the alluvial peninsula formed between the main mouth of the Yangtsze River and Hangchow Bay, in the extreme south-east of the province of Kiangsu, in latitude 31° 14′ 29″ N. and longitude 121° 29′ east of Greenwich, and at the junction of the Whangpoo River with the Woosung, the latter now reduced to the dimensions of an ordinary tidal creek, and known to foreign residents as the Soochow Creek. The Foreign Settlement is situated some twelve miles above the junction of the Whangpoo with the most southern arm of the Yangtze. At this junction is situated the town of Woosung, which some years ago the Chinese Government formally converted into a separate port open to foreign commerce. Except as a place of call for the large steamers, which now carry on the rapidly growing trans-Pacific trade of Northern China, and as a place of anchorage for the larger craft while waiting for favourable tides or weather, this convenience is not much availed of, owing mainly to the constricted and exposed nature of the anchorage ground available within the entrance of the Whangpoo. In 1919 Woosung was connected with Shanghai by a motor road 30 feet wide, and in the same year the Woosung Electric Lighting Company commenced its service. The project, however, for transforming Woosung into an important industrial centre makes slow progress. Two cotton mills have been erected there—one of them run by electricity—and land has been acquired in their vicinity for the building of a large sugar refinery. The value of land rose enormously in 1920 and, owing to the influx of population since the establishment of the new mills, house accommodation has become scarce and rents have gone up in consequence. As a river the Whangpoo is of comparatively recent origin scarcely dating beyond the thirteenth century, before which it was merely an unimportant canal. Lower Kiangsu forms an immense plain, the gift of the Yangtsze, and is still growing at the rate of approximately two square miles per annum; a few isolated hills, formerly constituting islands in the sea, alone rise from this plain, the nearest of which, the Fung-hwang-shan, consisting of some six detached summits, none exceeding 250 feet in altitude, and distant from fifteen to twenty miles, are visible from the higher buildings of Shanghai.

Flora and Fauna

This Kiangsu plain has been called the Garden of China, and the population is perhaps denser than in any other portion of the Empire of equal extent. Estimates vary, owing to the absence of any statistical sense in the Chinese as a people, but by foreigners the population is usually accepted as from eight hundred to a thousand per square mile. The soil, consisting entirely of alluvia carried down by the Yangtsze, is fairly fertile, and, the land being easily irrigated owing to the numerous waterways which traverse it in every direction, heavy crops of the various staples are grown. Owing to the latitude and the fact that the rainfall is pretty well distributed through the year, two crops per annum are regularly produced, and these are of markedly different types; the spring crop, gathered in May or June, being similar to that of the northern temperate regions elsewhere, while the autumn crop, gathered in September and October, is distinctly tropical or sub-tropical. The spring crops consist of wheat, two or three distinct varieties of barley, rape, and leguminous plants of various descriptions, beans and lucerne predominating. The latter are frequently ploughed into the land without gathering to make manure for the more valuable summer products. The summer crops consist mainly of cotton and rice; the cultivation of the former having of late years, owing to the growing demand for use at home, and for export to western and northern provinces, as well as to Japan,—where the cotton spinning and weaving industries have for some years past taken a firm hold—considerably increased, accompanied by a similar decrease in the acreage under rice cultivation. This decrease is, however, to a certain extent counterbalanced by an increase in the production of winter wheat, partly owing to an enlarged acreage, but probably more to improved cultivation, stimulated by the introduction of steam flour-mills. Besides these staple crops there are grown during the summer peas and beans of several descriptions, oil bearing crops such as sesamum, and such domestic products as cabbages, carrots, melons, cucumbers, brinjals, etc. Although Shanghai is immediately adjacent to the great silk producing region of China, so great is the demand on the soil for other purposes that a comparatively small area is under mulberry cultivation. The large supersession of rice cultivation in favour of dry crops, such as cotton and oil plants, has certainly had an ameliorating effect on the climate in summer, and has much reduced the liability of European residents to malarious complaints, which now are, as a rule, of extremely mild types.

Although the growth of forest and fruit trees is heavily handicapped by the small depth at which permanent subsoil water is always to be found, Shanghai produces several varieties of fruits belonging to temperate regions. Mainly this is due to the long and late spring, which continues till well into June. Cherries of small size and poor flavour are common about the beginning of May, fair strawberries are now also to be had towards the latter half of the same month, and are succeeded by the eriobotrya, known locally as the bibo. As the summer proceeds plums, nectarines, apricots, etc., of various varieties, enter the market, to be succeeded by fair peaches and grapes. None of these fruits, however, attain perfection, partly owing to the nature of the soil and the absence of proper sub-soil drainage, but chiefly to the want of skill and the absence of knowledge of the most elementary principles of fruit culture on the part of the native growers. Persimmons, apples, pears, walnuts, grapes, and other more northerly fruits are largely imported from the north, and more recently from Japan, or the west coast of America. Persimnons are grown in large quantities round Hangchow and vicinity. Oranges of various descriptions and pumeloes come from the more southern coast ports, from Wênchow to Canton ; while from the Philippines and Indo-China come the varied fruit products of the tropics, Of trees, willows take the first place, but are followed by at least two species of elm. the salisburia (maiden hair tree), pines, yews, bamboos, oaks and chestnuts, etc. Flowering trees, such as the magnolia in three or more species, the melia, paulownia, wistaria and later gardenia and lagerstromia and many more lend variety in their various seasons to the landscape, while up to the latter end of June the ordinary cultivated flowers of Europe grow well and abundantly. In winter, too, orchids and the finer tropical plants grow well under glass, and both publicly and privately considerable attention is paid to horticulture, the public parks and gardens having within the last few years increased both in number and area, as well as in being attended to regularly by trained botanical experts. The native flowers most in evidence are the chrysanthemum and peony, though roses are largely cultivated for their scent.

Owing to the thickness of the population the native mammalian fauna has been almost exterminated, being practically confined to a single species of small deer, the hydropotes inermis, the badger, and one or two of the stoat family. The avi-fauna is, however, extensive, pheasants and partridges being still fairly abundant in certain localities, while during the cold season snipe, duck, teal and other species of wild fowl are plentiful about the numerous marshes and river channels. The other birds are nearly identical with the palæarctic fauna of Europe. Reptiles are little in evidence, the most noteworthy being a small species of alligator not exceeding six feet long. This animal is a resident of the lower Yangtsze, especially about Wuhu, but young individuals have been occasionally found in the marshes of the Whangpoo opposite Shanghai. No single work of commanding authority has yet been published on the Natural History of the Kiangnan Provinces, and the works of the principal explorers, the late Robert Swinhoe, F.L.S., and Père Heud, S.J., have to be searched for in the proceedings of various learned societies. A work specially interesting to sportsmen, "With Gun and Boat in the Yangtze Valley," by the late H. T. Wade, published in 1895, gives much varied and useful information on the subject, and Mr. G. S. Wilkinson has recently published a book on "Shanghai Birds."

The Making of the Port

That portion of the Whangpoo river opposite the original British Settlement, now known as the Central District, was, according to a doubtful tradition, formerly a canal, cut by an officer bearing the name of Hwang, to open a communication with a lake opposite the town of T'sipao, some seven miles above the native city, but it now constitutes the principal drainage channel from the upper country. This was formerly accomplished by the Woosung River, now in its turn reduced to the dimensions of a creek, which, however, still forms the main water approach to Soochow. The Whangpoo was at the time of the opening of the port some 2,000 feet across at low water opposite the Settlements, but is now reduced owing to silt and to the embankment of both shores to form wharves. As this narrowing of the stream has been accompanied by an improved training of the banks the actual decrease in width of the navigable channel is of no great importance. A similar optimistic view could not, however, be taken of the changes in the reaches of the river between Shanghai and Woosung, where the deterioration of the navigable channel was progressive after the opening of the port in 1843. When first frequented by foreign shipping an extensive widening of the channel was found immediately inside Woosung, and this led to a shallowing of the stream; presently an island commenced to grow up in this shallow part, which divided the stream into two channels and, at the same time, deflected the current towards the right bank, with consequent erosion on that side. The result of these causes was that both channels were blocked by bars, impassable at low water to all but the most shallow-draught river boats, and the large ocean-going steamers could only enter the river at high-water springs. At other periods goods intended to be landed at Shanghai had to be conveyed some thirteen miles in lighters. The enforced detention of the vessels as well as the cost of lighterage were heavy charges on the commerce of the port.

The unsatisfactory condition of the lower river was a constant cause of complaint to the Government from about 1850, when the deterioration of the channel commenced to assume alarming proportions, and dredging was urged by the foreign Governments having the largest interest in the commerce of the port. Unfortunately in this, as in many other things concerning the good of the port, the reactionary authorities at the Capital were able to shelter themselves behind the representatives of the Powers less interested in commerce, and, as by traditional arrangements, numbers alone count in such affairs, Peking was always able to evade its responsibilities. The late Imperial Government, largely guided by statesmen of whom Li Hung Chang was a characteristic type, looked upon the Bar at Woosung as a powerful aid in their policy of exclusion, and refused to do anything towards the improvement of the navigation, or deliberately took measures which they knew would prove ineffective. The foreign merchants, assisted by the Municipality, took steps to have the lower river surveyed and reported on by competent foreign hydraulic engineers. After the defeat of the anti-foreign party in 1900, and the capture, by foreign troops, of Peking, these reports were accepted, and a River Authority on the model of that formed for the port of London, wherein local as well as Imperial interests were represented, was agreed on by all parties, and it was hoped that the difficulties, entirely political, of the case had been surmounted and that work would be immediately commenced. It is not necessary here to go into details, but the same retarding influences were still at work. A reactionary viceroy of the Kiangnan provinces was the tool chosen; he offered to undertake the work of controlling the river under the advice of a foreign engineer, over the appointment of whom the foreign Powers were to have a veto; and, ever ready with China to accept the promise for the deed, the foreign representatives, apparently impressed by the engagement that the viceroy should undertake the whole of the financial burden, instead of its being shared by the beneficiaries as in the accepted scheme, agreed to the new proposition. The result was that Mr. de Rijke, the gentleman formerly consulted by the mercantile community of Shanghai, an engineer of standing who had carried out several important works in connection with the Japanese Government, was appointed Engineer-in-Chief by the Chinese Government in June, 1906, under a Board consisting of the Shanghai Taotai and the Commissioner of Customs. The two main obstructions in the river were the Outer Bar, in the mouth, and the Inner Bar, a little farther up river. Through the first a channel was scoured by building a concave jetty, starting from the left shore across to deep water. To evade the second obstruction, the channel was diverted from the east side to the west of Gough Island by fascine dams and dredging. The dredging work amounted to about 8,000,000 cubic yards. In September, 1909, all the shipping was transferred to the new channel, then 18 feet deep at low water, and 600 feet broad. Communication with the sea was not interrupted for a single day. During 1910, work was carried out sparingly, funds being exhausted and the estimates exceeded, until at the end of that year Mr. de Rijke left for home, and the greater part of the staff was dismissed, hardly half of the work having been completed

In December, 1910, with the approval of the Diplomatic Body in Peiping, Mr. H. von Heidenstam, C.E., and Captain in the Royal Swedish Corps of Engineers, was appointed Engineer-in-Chief. He prepared a detailed "Project for the Continued Whangpoo Regulation" with plans and estimates for a period of ten years involving a total outlay of six million Taels, which was approved by all concerned but could not be started owing to lack of funds. A practical scheme for the carrying out of Mr. von Heidenstam's project was ultimately evolved by the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce. This was based on the levying of 3 per cent. conservancy tax on all Customs duties and 1½ per mille of value on duty-free imported or exported goods, the administration to be carried on by a Board consisting of the Shanghai Commissioner for Foreign Affairs, the Commissioner of Customs and the Harbour Master. After lengthy negotiations during 1911 and 1912, this scheme, with some minor amendments, was approved by the Government in April, 1912. The scheme was put into operation on May 15th, 1912, according to Mr. von Heidenstam's project. A new parallel jetty on the eastern side of the former Outer Bar, training-works in the Upper River, and the dredging of some 7,000,000 cubic yards, mostly at convexes and in the Astræa Channel, were executed. The former Outer Bar, where only 16 feet of water were available in 1907, was thus finally eliminated, and the shallowest reach in the whole river became over 24 feet deep over a width of 600 feet in the narrowest places. In 1915 and 1916 the narrow reach at the Chinese City at Nantao was widened by dredging, and a new bund was created for the Chinese City. Towards the end of 1916 the Board acquired the first installation of its own dredging plant. At the end of 1921, Mr. von Heidenstam's project, started in 1912, had been practically completed, at a cost of about five million Taels, as against the estimate of six millions. For many years it had been foreseen that the rapid growth of shipping in the port and the increase in the size of the ships would necessitate a general port policy including if possible a regulation of the great bar in the Yangtze below Woosung. After investigations, extending back to 1315, into the state of the Yangtze Estuary and into the possibilities for future harbour development, a Committee of Consulting Engineers was convened in 1921 who reported in favour of a reorganization of the Board into a Port Authority with adequate powers to dredge the Yangtsze bar and to execute harbour works. Their report has not yet been acted on.

The Harbour in point of tonnage now ranks 5th among the principal ports of the world. Shanghai serves a hinterland of some 750,000 square miles and is likely to remain the principal entrepôt for the trade of North and Central China. The mooring accommodation in the Harbour for steamers having become inaequate owing to the enormous shipping developments of recent years the Customs called a conference, representing Chinese and foreign shipping interests, in December 1925, and a comprehensive re-berthing plan was drawn up, which was endorsed by the Consular Body and the Chambers of Commerce concerned.

The present position of Shanghai as a world port is due almost entirely to the activities of the Whangpoo Conservancy Board. In 1905, as stated, the Outer Bar at the mouth of the River had a depth of 15 feet at low water; while three miles up stream the River divided into two channels—one of eight feet depth, and the other of eleven feet depth (the Inner Bar). A channel of at least 25 feet at lowest water now exists! This remarkable progress may be attributed to the able scheme devised by the Dutch Engineer Mr. J. de Rijke. The Board adopted, and has since consistently adhered to, his recommendations, and results have conclusively proved the soundness and correctness of his views. Mr. von Heidenstam proved a most able successor, and his broad views have been of great value. He retired owing to ill health in 1928, and was succeeded by Dr. H. Chatley, M.INST.C.E.

History

The origin of the name "Shanghai," which literally means "Upper Sea," has been much debated, but probably like Kaoch'ang, "High Reeds," and Kiangwan, "River Bend," names still existing in the neighbourhood, was merely the vernacular title given to the place when still an island at the mouth of the Yangtsze. It does not appear in history till the time of the Mongol Empire. We find at various periods, from after Han downwards, that K'wenshan, Changshu, Kiating, etc., were constituted into separate hsiens, and that in the year 1292 Shanghai was likewise erected into a separate district and placed under Sungkiang-fu, which itself had only fifteen years previously been divided from Kiahsing-fu, now in the province of Chekiang. Prior to that it had been made a Customs' station on account of its favourable position for trade, but its growth had been slow, and for centuries the chief trade of the lower district had been concentrated at the mouth of the Liu-ho, now an insignificant creek which, passing T'aitsang, joins the Yangtsze some twenty-five miles above Woosung.

With the silting up of the Liu-ho and its eventual extinction as a navigable channel, largely brought about apparently by the opening of the Whangpoo before alluded to, Shanghai became the principal shipping port of this region; and such it had been for some centuries when it was visited in 1832 by Mr. H. H. Lindsay, head of the late firm of Lindsay & Co., accompanied by the Rev. Chas. Gutzlaff, in the Lord Amherst, with a view to opening up trade, and from that time begins its modern history. Mr. Lindsay in his report of the visit says that he counted upwards of four hundred junks passing inwards every day for seven days, and found the place possessed commodious wharves and large warehouses. Three years later it was visited by Dr. Medhurst, who confirmed the account given by Mr. Lindsay. On the 13th June, 1842, a British fleet under Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, and a military force of 4,000 men under Sir Hugh Gough, captured the Woosung forts, which mounted 175 guns, and took the hsien (district) city of Paoshan. On the 19th, after a slight resistance, the force gained possession of Shanghai, the officials and a large proportion of the inhabitants having fled the previous evening, although great preparations had been made for the defence, 409 pieces of cannon being taken possession of by the British. The people, however, rapidly returned and business was resumed. The same force afterwards captured Chapoo and Chinkiang, after which the fleet, having blockaded the Imperial Canal and anchored opposite to Nanking, the treaty of Nanking was signed, and the ports of Swatow, Amoy, Foochow, Ningpo, and Shanghai were opened to trade. The city was evacuated on the 23rd, June. The walls, three and a half miles in circuit with seven gates, were erected at the time of the Japanese invasion, in the latter part of the sixteenth century

The ground selected by Captain Balfour, the first British Consul for a Settlement for his nationals lies about half a mile north of the city walls, between the Yangkingpang and Soochow creeks, and extends backward from the river to what was still recently a ditch connecting the two, afterwards called the Defence Creek, thus forming what may be termed an island a mile square. Both the Yangkingpang and the Defence Creek have now been culverted and made into broad roadways, known respectively as Avenue Edward VII. and Thibet Road The port was formally declared open to trade on the 17th, November, 1843. Some years were occupied in draining and laying out the ground, which was mostly a marsh with numerous ponds and creeks. The foreigners in the meantime lived at Nantao, a suburb between the city and the river, the British Consulate being in the city. In two years a few houses were built in the Settlement, and by 1849 most foreigners had taken up their residence in it. By that time twenty-five firms were established, and the foreign residents numbered a hundred, including seven ladies. In that year an English Church was built, and on 21st, November the foundation of the Roman Catholic Cathedral at Tungkadoo was laid. The French were, in 1849, granted the ground between the city walls and the British Settlement on the same terms; and, in exchange for help rendered in driving out the rebels who had seized the city in 1853, got a grant of the land extending for about a mile to the south between the city walls and the river. They have since, by purchase, extended the bounds of the Concession westward to the "Ningpo Joss House," a mile from the river. Negotiations were instituted for an extension of the Concession to Siccawei, a village chiefly occupied by the Jesuits and their converts, situated at the end of the French Municipal Road and five miles from the French Bund, but in this the French were only partially successful, a small extension as far as the Old Cemetery being granted them in 1899 In the later fifties the Americans rented land immediately north of Soochow Creek, in the district called Hongkew. A greatly enlarged boundary for the Settlement was granted in 1901.

As a port for foreign trade Shanghai grew but gradually until it gained a great impetus by the opening in 1861 of the Yangtsze and northern ports, secured by the Treaty of Tientsin, and a further increase by the opening up of Japan. In March, 1848, owing to an assault on some missionaries near Shanghai, Mr. Alcock, the British Consul, blockaded the port and stopped the passage outwards of eleven hundred grain junks. This drastic measure, by which grain for the North was cut off, brought the authorities to their senses, and after sending a man-of-war to Nanking the matter was arranged. The first event of importance since the advent of foreigners was the taking of the native city on 7th, September, 1853, by the Triad rebels, who held it for seventeen months, although repeatedly besieged and attacked by the Imperialists. This caused a large number of refugees to seek shelter within the foreign Settlements, and the price of land rose very considerably. At that time a Volunteer force was formed among the foreign residents, under the command of Captain (afterwards Sir Thomas) Wade, which did really good service. The battle of "Muddy Flat" was fought on 4th, April, 1854, when the Volunteers in conjunction with the Naval forces, consisting in all of 300 men with one field piece, drove the Imperialists, numbering 10,000 men, from the neighbourhood of the Settlements and burned their camps. Two of the Volunteers and one American were killed, and ten men wounded. Owing to the occupation of the city the authorities were powerless to collect the duties, which for a short time were not paid and it was, in consequence, agreed in July, 1854, between the Taotai and the three Consuls (British, French, and American) that they should be collected under foreign control. This was found to work so much to the advantage of the Chinese Government that the system was, subsequently to the Treaty of Tientsin, extended to all the open ports. The Foreign Inspectorate of Customs was established in 1861, the headquarters of which were for some years, and, according to the original regulations, ought still to be, at Shanghai. In 1861 the Taipings approached Shanghai, occupied the buildings of the Jesuits at Sicawei, and threatened the city and settlements. The capture of Soochow on 25th, May, 1860, had driven a large number of the inhabitants of that city and the surrounding districts to Shanghai for protection, so that the native population increased rapidly. It was variously estimated at from four hundred thousand to a million, but the smaller number is probably nearer the truth. By 1861 provisions had increased in price to four times what they had been somey ears previously. Efforts were made to keep the rebels at a distance from Shanghai; a detachment of British Royal Marines and an Indian Regiment garrisoned the walls, while the gates on the side towards the French Settlement were guarded by French Marines. In August, 1861, the city was attacked, and the suburbs between the city walls and river were in consequence destroyed by the French, the rebels being ultimately driven back. In December the rebels to the number of one hundred thousand again threatened the Settlements. The approaches were barricaded and the Defence Creek constructed and fortified at an expense of forty-five thousand taels. Before the close of 1862 the rebels had been driven by the British Forces beyond a radius of thirty miles around Shanghai. So immensely did the price of land rise that it is stated ground which had originally cost foreigners fifty pounds per acre was sold for ten thousand pounds. At this time the old Race Course and Cricket Ground, situated within the British Settlement, was sold at such a profit that after the shareholders had been repaid the original cost there was a balance of some forty-five thousand taels, which the owners generously devoted to the foundation of a fund for the use of the public, to be applied to the purposes of recreation only. Unfortunately thirty thousand taels of this amount were lent by the treasurer on his own responsibility to the Club, in which institution he was a shareholder. As the shareholders were never able to repay this loan out of the profits on the Club, the building and furniture were taken over in 1869 by the trustees on behalf of the Recreation Fund, to which the building still belongs. This fund has proved very useful in rendering assistance to some other public institutions, besides having purchased all the ground in the interior of the Race Course, which is now leased by the Municipality and, with the exception of the steeplechase course at training seasons only, set aside as a Public Recreation Ground, by which name it is known. More recently steps were taken by the Municipality, in conjunction with the trustees of the fund, to acquire, in connection with the new Rifle Range adjoining the Hongkew Settlement, an additional park for public recreation. This, which covers some fifty or sixty acres, has been laid out, and is fully available for public use, relieving the congestion of the ground in the interior of the Race Course where, during summer on a Saturday afternoon, one may see in progress at the same time half a dozen cricket matches, baseball, polo, golf and several tennis matches. The swimming bath in the Hongkew Ground was opened in 1907.

At the time the local native Authorities were severely pressed they availed themselves of the services of an American adventurer named Ward, who raised a band partly composed of deserters from foreign ships and rowdies of all nations, who had congregated at Shanghai, with whose help he drilled a regiment of natives. This force, notwithstanding its unpromising commencement, attained under Ward a considerable amount of efficiency, and did good and useful service. This was acknowledged in a manner unusual, where foreigners are concerned, by the Chinese authorities, who after his death reared in the city of Sungkiangfu a temple to his memory, where services are still maintained. After Ward was killed the force passed under the command of another American of the name of Burgevine, who proved unfaithful to his flag and subsequently transferred his services to the Taiping rebels. The Imperial Authorities found it impossible to control these raw and undisciplined levies, and at their earnest request Admiral Sir James Hope consented to the appointment of Major, afterwards General, Gordon, R.E., to the command. Having by him been made amenable to discipline, this force now rendered the greatest service in the suppression of the rebellion; indeed, it is generally believed that the Taipings would never have been overcome but for the assistance of "The Ever-Victorious Army," as this hastily-raised band was named. Amongst other services they regained possession of the important city of Soochow on 27th, November, 1863, which virtually ended the rebellion. There is, however, much room for doubt as to the wisdom of foreigners aiding in its suppression, many of those best capable of judging being of opinion that the civilization of the Empire would have had a much better chance of progressing had the decaying dynasty been then overthrown. Certainly European nations, merely in exchange for the promise of neutrality, might have made almost any terms with the Taiping rebels. A monument in memory of the fallen officers of this regiment stood for many years at the north end of the Bund and was afterwards transferred to the Public Gardens. From 1860 to 1867 one British and two Indian Regiments and a battery of British Artillery were stationed at Shanghai.

Since that time there have been few historical events worthy of record in a brief sketch. On Christmas Eve, 1870, the British Consulate was burned down and most of the records completely lost. In May, 1874, a riot occurred in the French Settlement owing to the intention of the Municipal Council to make a road through an old graveyard belonging to the Ningpo Guild. One or two Europeans were severely injured, and eight natives lost their lives. A considerable amount of foreign-owned property was destroyed. An extensive fire in the French Concession in August, 1879, destroyed 221 houses; the loss was estimated at Tls. 1,500,000. The foreign Settlements celebrated their jubilee on 17th and 18th November, 1893, when, it is estimated, 500,000 strangers visited Shanghai. A medal was struck in commemoration of the occasion. In 1894 a fire outside the native city along the river bank having cleared away a great and noisome collection of huts and hovels, advantage was taken of this clearing by the native Authorities to make a broad Bund on the model of the Foreign Settlement roads. This Bund extends from the south corner of the French Bund, along the river some three and a half miles, to the Arsenal at Kao Chàng Miao. It was formally declared open by the Taotai in October, 1897. A Council was formed to supervise this Bund and attend to other native municipal matters; its offices are situated in the Bureau for Foreign Affairs, in the Bubbling Well Road. It controls a special force of police composed of Sikhs and Chinese. A riot occurred on 5th and 6th, April, 1897, in consequence of an increase in the wheelbarrow tax. It was suppressed by the Volunteers and sailors from the men-of-war in port, without loss of life. The Consuls and Municipal Council having submitted to the dictation of the Wheelbarrow Guild, an indignation public meeting was held on the 7th April, the largest meeting ever held in the Settlements up to that date. At this meeting the action of the Authorities was so strongly condemned that the Council resigned. A new Council was elected and the tax enforced, the French Municipal Council increasing their tax in like proportion. Another riot took place on 16th and 17th July, 1898, owing to the Authorities of the French Settlement having decided to remove the "Ningpo Joss House." The French Volunteers were called out and a force landed from men-of-war, which measures speedily suppressed the riot, fifteen natives being reported killed and many wounded. In 1900, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Japan landed troops at Shanghai for the protection of the Settlements, the presence of the troops being deemed necessary owing to the threatening aspect of the natives at the time operations were being conducted in the north in consequence of the Boxer rising. They remained as a garrison until December, 1902, when they were withdrawn. In December, 1905, differences arose between the local Chinese and British officials regarding the jurisdiction of the British Assessor of the Mixed Court, leading to a situation that called for the intervention of an armed foreign force Inflammatory placards were posted throughout the native city and in the Settlement itself urging a general strike for the purpose of asserting so-called Chinese rights, and on the 18th December serious rioting occurred in the streets, when several foreigners were subjected to rough usage at the hands of the mob. Determined attacks were made on the Hongkew and Louza police stations. The latter station was set on fire and partially wrecked. Encouraged by this success the rioters directed their incendiary efforts to the annexe of the Hotel Metropole. Their designs were happily frustrated by a force of bluejackets and volunteers who arrived on the scene, but it was not before shots had been fired and a few of the rioters killed that the mob dispersed. In the Nanking Road also the police found it necessary to fire on the mob with ball cartridge two rounds of blank cartridges having failed to overawe them. In addition to the Volunteers, the Municipal police, European and Sikh, who appeared on the streets armed with rifles and fixed bayonets, upwards of 3,000 bluejackets were landed from warships of various nationalities for the protection of the Settlement. The men behaved with great moderation, but speedily convinced the rioters that their conduct was ill-advised. The Viceroy himself came to Shanghai to settle the dispute, and the Mixed Court, after being closed for a fortnight, was re-opened with Mr. Twyman, the British Assessor (whose dismissal the Taotai had demanded), still on the Bench. The Corps Diplomatique at Peping somewhat unfortunately yielded to the demand of the Chinese officials, and this prevented any satisfactory conclusion being arrived at, both parties, the Municipality and the Chinese Magistrates, being unsatisfied. Shanghai in August, 1913, was the scene of some fighting in connection with the abortive rebellion against Yuan Shih-kai. A large force of revolutionaries made several determined attempts to capture the arsenal, but did not succeed. There was fighting, also, in the immediate district nominally over possession of Shanghai during the summer of 1924 between Kiangsu and Chekiang. The Volunteers of the Settlement were mobilised, but no attack was made on the Settlement. On May 30th, 1925, there was rioting outside the Louza Police Station and the Police were forced to fire upon the crowd. There were a number of casualties, and a general strike of the Chinese followed with unrest, engineered largely by Bolshevik and anti-foreign influences, in many parts of China. Throughout 1926 the unrest continued and there were many labour troubles but general trade proceeded with little interruption. At the beginning of 1927, however, more serious trouble was feared owing to the occurrences at Hankow and the approach of the Nationalist forces, and the Powers therefore agreed to garrison the Settlement.

The taking over of Manchuria by the Japanese in September 1931 led to a boycott culminating in the Sino-Japanese hostilities round Shanghai at the beginning of 1932. As a result great alarm was caused to the foreigners residing in the foreign concessions in Shanghai on account of the proximity of the fighting, and at one time the advisability of evacuating the place was even considered. However, after considerable damage had been done to the Chinese territories around Shanghai, particularly Chapei, a truce was signed in the middle of 1932 between China and Japan by which the latter was literally recognised as the virtual ruler of the three North-Eastern provinces.

Population

The Foreign population increased rapidly up to 1865, but declined considerably during the next ten years. The census of 1865 gave the number of foreign residents in the three Settlements as 2,757, army and navy (British) 1,851, shipping 981, a total of 5,589. In 1870, the total in the Anglo-American Settlement was 1,666; in 1876, 1,673 in 1880, 2,197; in 1885, 3,673 in 1890, 3,821; in 1895, 4,684; in 1900, 7,396; in 1905, 11,497. By the census of 15th October, 1910, there were in both Settlements a total of 15,012 foreigners; 1356 in the British Settlement (now called Central District), 8,658 in Hongkew (now Northern and Eastern Districts), 3,521 in Western District, Outside Roads and Pootung; and 1,476 in the French Settlement—an increase of 217.4 per cent. during the latter five years, against 45 per cent. during the previous five. When the census was taken in October, 1915, the number of foreigners in the two Settlements had grown to 20,924—18,519 in the International Settlement and 2,405 in the French Settlement. According to the census taken on October 16th, 1920 (exclusive of the French Settlement and the outside roads under the control of the French Consul), the foreign population numbered 2,3307, compared with 18,519 in 1915 and 13,536 in 1910. The proportion of the principal nationalities represented was as follows, the figures at the time of the 1915 census being given within parenthesis:—Japanese 10,215 (7,169); British, 5,341 (4,822); American, 2,264 (1,307); Portuguese, 1,301 (1,223); Russian, 1,266 (361); French, 316 (244); German, 280 (1,155); Spanish, 186 (181); Danish, 175 (145); Italian, 171 (114); Indians, 954 (1,009). This showed that the Japanese had trebled in number since 1910. The last official census of the foreign settlements was taken in 1925, when the returns showed 29,947 foreigners and 810,279 Chinese as resident in the districts under the control of the International Council.

This figure is exclusive of the French Settlement the population of which is given at 7,811 foreigners and 289,261 Chinese. It is interesting to note that the foreign population of the "French" Concession included 3,463 British and Americans, as against 893 French. According to the census report compiled by the Municipal Bureau of Public. Safety, the total population of Greater Shanghai in December 1930, with the International Settlement and the French Concession, was 3,183,567, including 59,355 foreigners. Of the total population, 1,007,868 are residing in the International Settlement, 434,807 in the French Concession, and 1,740,892 in the native city and its surrounding suburbs.

Although the Chinese have no right of residence within the Foreign Settement and indeed were not recognised by the original Land Regulations, some twenty thousand sought refuge within the boundaries from the rebels in 1854, and when the city was besieged by the Taipings in 1860 there were, it is said, at least five hundred thousand natives within the Settlements. In 1920 there were in the three Settlements 930,068. The Chinese population working in the Settlements, however, must be much greater than the total given, as there are many more thousands who sleep outside the limits.

Climate

The climate of Shanghai is generally allowed to be fairly healthy. The highest recorded number of deaths from cholera among foreigners was 32 in 1890. Of these, 11 were amongst residents. With the exception of the year 1912, when there were 14 cases, the average number of cases amongst foreigners has been slightly over three per annum during the last twenty years. The average number of deaths of foreign residents from small-pox during the last twenty years has been 15 per annum. Amongst the foreign population the general death rate was 15.4 per thousand in 1915, 14 in 1916, 20.7 in 1917, 16.5 in 1918 (including Japanese), 20.6 in 1919, 15.2 in 1920, 18.2 in 1921, 19.3 in 1922 and 17.2 in 1923. These rates compare favourably with those of many large towns in Europe and America. The thermometer ranges from 25 deg. to 103 deg. F., the mean of ten years having been 59.19 deg., the average being 41.13, 64·99, 77·91 and 52.49 for first, second, third and fourth quarters, respectively. Shanghai approaches nearest to Rome in mean temperature, while the winter temperatures of London and Shanghai are almost identical. In October and November there is generally dry, clear, and delightful weather, equal to that found in any part of the world; but when the winter has fairly set in the north-east winds are extremely cold and biting. On January 17th, 1878, the river was frozen over at Woosung. The heat during July and August is sometimes excessive, but generally lasts only a few days at a time. In late years very severe gales have become more frequent. On 27th and 28th July, 1915, a typhoon of extraordinary violence visited the district doing much damage. The mean of the barometer is from 29.769 in the third to 30·245 inches in the first quarter. The annual average of rainy days in Shanghai during eight years was 124; 55 wet days occurred in winter, and 69 in summer; the annual rainfall averages 49·57 inches, about 15 in winter and 30.2 in summer. The mean degree of humidity is from 78·6 in the winter to 82.6 in the summer months.

Description

The streets of the International and French Settlements run north and south and east and west, mostly for the whole length of both, crossing each other at right angles. They were when first laid out twenty-two feet wide, but have since at very great expense been mostly made much wider. In spite of this, however and the more stringent regulations, the traffic problem is becoming increasingly acute in Shanghai as elsewhere. Notwithstanding the soft nature of the soil the roads are kept in remarkably good order, despite the heavy motor traffic. With the introduction of trams the whole track of the Maloo, one mile in length, was laid with Jarrah hardwood blocks, and the section of Nanking Road between Kiangse Road and the Bund was paved with the same material. Owing to the nature of the ground, expensive piling or concrete foundations are necessary before any building over one storey in height can be erected, and all stone has to be brought from a long distance. The Soochow Creek, between the British Settlement and Hongkew, is now crossed by nine bridges, seven of which are adapted for carriage traffic.

Many foreign houses, surrounded by gardens, have been erected near the outside roads, especially on the Bubbling Well, Avenue Haig, Yuyuen, Great Western and Sinza Roads, which are the main outlets from the Settlement, and from which most of the other roads branch off. These roads are planted with trees on both sides, forming fine avenues of five to six miles in length. Building activity of late years may be described as remarkable and unparalleled in the history of the port.

Mention should be made of the many 10 and even 20 storied apartment houses in the central as well as western districts. Foreigners for the most part have migrated to these. These are now too numerous to enumerate off-hand.

The trade of Shanghai has been drastically reduced as the result of the Sino-Japanese hostilities. Only 30 per cent of China's trade passed through this port during the year as against over 50 per cent under normal conditions. This result, however, cannot be regarded as altogether unsatisfactory, in view of the fact that large-scale hostilities were in progress over a wide area of the country and that trade was conducted throughout the year in very adverse circumstances.

The outlook at the beginning of 1938 was far from promising. With the removal of active hostilities from the immediate vicinity of Shanghai, importers were enabled to bring in some of the deviated cargoes, but export trading had almost ceased on account of the blockading of all ordinary commercial traffic with the hinterland, such shipments as were made being confined to the disposal of the small parcels of merchandise still remaining in godowns here or those arriving here in driblets through the network of creeks and canals.

The T.T. selling rate on London dropped from 1s. 2¼d per standard dollar in February to as low as 8d in June. While this low rate of exchange was a great drawback to import business, the satisfactory domestic prices available caused by the depreciation of the national currency encouraged exporters to risk the dangers uncertain charges attached to transportation to the coast. This accounts for the fact that exports from Shanghai during the latter part of the year were practically up to the pre-war standard.

With the influx of population from the war zone during 1937-38, the defence area of the Settlement and Concession are filled almost to capacity. The streets are thronged, not alone with poverty-stricken war refugees, but also with those who have money to spend. The shops appear to be filled with customers, and there are no empty flats or houses to be seen in these areas. In a word, all trades admit a profitable year in spite of the depression, the uncertainty of the future, the drop in exchange, and the numberous other tribulations which are besetting the local community.

Increased purchases of rice and paddy from French Indo-China were made during the year at the expense of wheat from Australia. The decline witnessed in the export of cereals and cereal products was almost entirely due to reduced shipments of cotton seed-cake, bran, and rice and paddy, mostly for Japan, Formosa and the Kwantung Leased Territory. The local prices of rice and wheat remained steady throughout the year. In some of the districts in Kwangtung farmers were ordered to grow rice and cereals in place of tobacco. In Szechwan the crop was reported to be excellent, with a total estimated to be one-third more than that of the previous year.

China being one of the principal wolfram producing countries, the recent Sino-Japanese hostilities caused something like a panic in the wolfram market, and the price of this mineral product increased by leaps and bounds. During 1938 the Kailan Mining Administration produced some 5,200,000 tons of coal, which were annouced to be distributed as follows: for local demand and for Shanghai 1.5 million tons each, 500,000 tons among Tientsin, Hongkong, and the Administration itself, and the balance for export to Japan. To relieve anxiety over the salt shortage caused by the extension of hostilities to producing districts along the coast, the Szechwan Salt Asministration has been instructed to rush measures for increasing production in that province. Over 200 applications for licences for exploitation of various mines in many provinces were granted by the Government during the year.

The second half-year of 1938 saw a rapid recovery in Shanghai's industry of all types in the western district, where numerous temporary wooden buildings were in course of construction for the accommodation of factories formerly having large plants in Chapei and Nantao. Chinese industrial losses in the Settlement areas north of Soochow Creek as a result of the hostilities were reported to amount to some 900 factories destroyed and 1,000 looted or damaged, but no complete statement regarding losses in the whole Shanghai area has yet been available. Besides some 150 to 160 factories which were removed from the war area around Shanghai to places as far as Yunnanfu, a large number of factories in the south-western provinces were being established by the Chinese industrialists from abroad as well as from Shanghai.

During the year a further decline was recorded in overseas, coastal, and inland shipping as compared with 1937. In overseas shipping totals of the number of vessels and of tonnage for 1938 showed but slight variation from the figures recorded for the previous year, but the blockade of the China coast and the closing to traffic of the Yangtze River and other shipping routes had the effect of curtailing activities in the coastal shipping of this port to such an extent that the totals for 1938 came to less than one-half of those for 1937, while the totals for 1937 and 1938 put together were only a little larger than those for 1936. In both the above categories of shipping Great Britain easily maintained her trading position. Brisk coast trade with Canton continued for the greater part of the year until October, when its place was taken by Swatow. Compared with the previous year, the demand for tonnage in 1938 was greater in the case of coast and river shipping, but the demand for ocean tonnage showed a decline. On account of the low rate of exchange, rates of freight for coast and river shipping were increased and many rates in dollars were quoted in foreign currency. The Nisshin Kisen Kaisha spared no efforts in extending its coastal and inland navigation business. With the joint support of several Japanese steamship companies, it was expected to be able to regain its old status very soon.

There was no outflow of treasure during the year. Gold to the value of G.U. 3.5 million was imported into Shanghai, chiefly from Hongkong. The T.T. rates for sterling quoted during the year were 1s. 2¼d. highest and 7s. ⅞d lowest, and those from U.S. dollars were U.S.$29.25 highest and U.S.$15.4375 lowest. Since 14th, March, 1938 sales of foreign exchange have been centralised through the Central Bank, which will furnish foreign exchange only for legitimate requirements. To control China's export, particularly with respect to the settlement of foreign exchange, 24 main items of exports have been placed under Government control.

Energetic efforts were made by the National Government for the improvement of communications of all types in the south-west. Besides several trunk lines already under construction or about to be constructed, many new highways have been built. The Yunnan-Burma highway, a new road of great international importance measuring about 1,000 kilometres, was constructed entirely by manual labour. The regular work of the Whampoo Conservancy Board has been suspended since August 1937. During the year negotiations for the resumption of work were being carried on. Postal business suffered a serious set-back as a result of the trouble. With the restoration of peace it reacted quickly, and 1938 proved to be a prosperous year for the service.

While hundreds of thousands of persons flocked to Shanghai for refuge, over half a million refugees have been evacuated from Shanghai since the outbreak of hostilities. The serious destitute refugee problem here has been successfully solved, much credit being due to generous foreign contributions and good services rendered by local gentry and philanthropists. The Shanghai Quarantine Service commenced functioning early in the year, with offices opened in the Custom House. The Shanghai Customs have also taken up the functions of the former Government Testing Bureau to inspect shipments of meat and other animal products since April, 1938.
